

MAO'S REVOLUTION AND THE CHINESE POLITICAL CULTURE

RICHARD H. SOLOMON

BOMBAY: OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
BOMBAY CALCUTTA DELHI MADRAS

Edition for India, Burma, Ceylon, and Nepal
Published in 1971 by John Brown, Oxford University Press, Bombay
by arrangement with the original publishers,
The University of California Press
Berkeley and Los Angeles, California, U.S.A.

FOR CAROL

Contents

Preface	xi
Acknowledgments, xvii
I: Introduction	1
Basic Issues in China's Political Culture: Ambivalence toward Authority and Avoidance of Conflict, 2
The Structure of this Study, 6
The Interview Procedure, 8
Some Interpretive Perspectives, 17
PART I: The Traditional Chinese Socialization Process
II: Confucianism and the Chinese Life-Cycle	28
Oedipus Was an Unfilial Son, 29
III: Life's Golden Age(?)	39
The Indulgence of Infancy, 41
Childhood Relations with Authority: Basic Patterns in the Use of Power, 47
IV: Emotional Control	61
The Dangers of "Drowning a Child With Love" (ni-ai), 62
The Impermissibility of Hostility, 67
"Eat Bitterness" (ch'ih-k'u), 70
Three "Contradictions" in the Filial Pattern, 73
V: The Pain and Rewards of Education	82
PART II: Adult Perceptions of Social Relations: "Confusion" (Luan) and the Need for Strong Authority
VI: "People Eat People"	99

viii Mao's Revolution and the Chinese Political Culture

VII: Institutional Patterns of Authority 105

- The Importance of Names, 105
- Rituals of Control, 108
- Modeling, 111
- Anxiety in the Face of Authority, 112
- Dependency and Social Integration, 116
- The Enduring Ambivalence toward Authority, 122

VIII: Friends and Peers 123

- The Hope of Friendship . . . , 123
- . . . and the Reality, 124
- Distrust of Peers, 125
- The Importance of Intermediaries, 128
- Peer Conflict and Control, 129
- Peer Relations and Problems of Lateral Social Integration, 133

IX: The Tiger World of Politics: Will One Eat or Be Eaten? 135

- Power and the Hope of Security, 137
- The Tiger of Governmental Power, 141
- The Gap between Leaders and Led, 144
- The Dream of Unity, 150

PART III:

The Maoist Political Revolution

X: Politics Is an Emotional Storm 160

- Hostility: The Emotional Fuel of Revolution, 164
- "Mutually Related and Mutually Antagonistic," 166
- On Being "Conscious," 168

XI: Revolutionary Leadership and the Deviations of Tradition 171

- The Party Must Not "Cut Itself off from the Masses," 171
- Dare! (kan), 175
- The "Rightist" Deviation: Avoidance of Conflict, 179
- "Left Opportunism" and Luan, 184
- The Importance of Disciplined Struggle, 186

XII: Ideology and Organization, I: The Power to Mobilize 190

- The Importance of Ideology: Transforming Anxiety into Anger, 190
- "Speak Bitterness" (su-k'u), 195
- The Virtues of an Enemy, 200
- Down with Political Dependence! 205
- Organization: A Framework for Participation, 207

XIII: Ideology and Organization, II: The Power to Discipline	210
Violence for the Revolution, 211
Discipline through Organized Criticism, 214
The Luan of Land Reform, 216
XIV: Ideology and Organization, III: The Power to Oppose	220
End Isolation through Organization, 221
XV: Strategy for Victory: For the Party and People—Unity; For Their Enemies—Disintegration, Isolation, and Defeat	227
For the Enemy: Disintegration and Isolation, 228
For the Party and People: Unity, 234
The Unity of Resentment, 238
Ending an Era and “Rectifying Names,” 241
PART IV:
The Maoist Political Reconstruction
XVI: An End to the Politics of Dependency?	248
Toward the Autonomy of the Group, 251
The Legacy of the Revolution, 255
Toward a Strategy of National Development: A Decade of Debate, 259
XVII: One Party and “One Hundred Schools”: Leadership, Lethargy, or Luan ?	268
“De-Stalinization” and Development, 272
The Meaning of “Hungary,” 285
An Early Compromise, 288
To Overcome Party Resistance, 296
A Compromise Decision in Favor of Public Criticism, 304
The Breakdown of the Compromise Decision, 309
Who Won? 317
XVIII: To Leap Forward: The Relationship of Political Conflict to Social Change	330
To Attain Communal Self-Reliance, 333
In the “Saddle” of Social Change: The “U-shaped” Pattern of Party Leadership, 346
The “Rightist” Reaction to the Great Leap, 368
Testing the Wind, 378
The Deepening Crisis of Leadership, 393
The Search for a Conflict Manager, 400

x Mao's Revolution and the Chinese Political Culture

XIX: A Cultural Revolution? The Recapitulation of a Political Career 405

- Will Ghosts and Demons Stay Buried? 412
Whose "Word" Will Speak for New China? Whose
Model Will the People Emulate? 431
The Matter of Succession, 452
Viet-Nam! 463
The Politics of Luan, 474
Luan for the Revolution? 497

XX: Conclusion: The Role of Aggression in Social Change 510

- The Interplay Between Revolutionary Leader
and Cultural Legacy, 512
The Role of Aggression in Social Change, 521
Speeding Up the Pace of Social Change, 524

Appendixes

- I: Interview Schedule, 527
II: Biographical Schedule, 532
III: Attitude Survey, 534
IV: Thematic Apperception Test (TAT) Pictures, 538
V: Respondents' Biographical Sketches, 541
VI: Childhood Punishments and Chinese Social Values, 559

Glossary of Chinese Terms and Phrases 561

Selected Bibliography 575

Index 589