PREFACE.

The Grammar, which is now offered to the learned Public, has been compiled already years ago, but as there were no means of printing it, it was laid aside hopelessly. That it has finally been rescued from oblivion is owing to the enlightened patronage of Her Majesty's Government for India, which liberally granted the printing expenses.

I am afraid, that I have given rather too much than too little by endeavouring to render the Grammar as complete as possible; I trust, however, that this object may have been attained to some extent at least.

A beginner will do well, after he has acquainted himself with the Sindhī system of sounds, to commence at once with the declensions and to turn bye and bye to the formation of themes after he has got a fair insight into the fabric of the language. The Introduction is intended for those only, who wish to penetrate more deeply into the origin and nature of the Sindhī.

The quotations, which I have added, I hope may prove useful to introduce the beginner into the study of the Sindhī literature; most of the quotations are taken from my edition of the Shāha jō Risālō¹), but many others also from manuscripts in my possession, which I collected during my former stay in Sindh. What we need now most is a critically sifted edition of the popular Sindhī tales and songs, which are very numerous and from which a good collection might be made. The next desideratum is an enlarged Sindhī Dictionary, as the late Capt. Geo. Stack's Dictionary. which is very good as far as it goes, is not sufficient for reading older or more difficult pieces. We may fairly expect, that these deficiencies will soon be remedied by Mr. Peile, the present energetic and enlightened Director of Public Instruction in the Bombay Presidency, for which the thanks of the learned Public will be due to him.

The Sindhī is by no means an easy language, it is on the contrary beset with more intricacies and difficulties than any of its Prākrit sisters. But on the other hand it amply repays to the philologist the labours he bestows on it; for the Sindhī has preserved a great many forms, for which we look in vain in the cognate idioms. For the purpose of intercomparing the modern Ārian dialects the Sindhī is therefore invaluable. For this reason we have pointed out, in the form of annotations, the relation of the Sindhī with the Sanskrit-Prākrit on the one hand and with the modern cognate idioms on the other hand, to give some impulse to a comparative study of the North-Indian Vernaculars, which as yet has been totally neglected.

The Sindhī Grammar of the late Capt. Stack is an accurate and meritorious work, but as all first attempts (for the Sindhī Grammar of Wathen does not deserve the name) incomplete and destitute of a Syntax. I sincerely wish, that the deficiencies of his work, from the emendation and enlargement of which he was prevented by an untimely death, may have been made up by the Grammar now offered to the Public.

The English reader will no doubt meet in this Grammar with many an expression, which he will consider as erroneous or ill-chosen. For all such and similar mistakes I must beg his pardon, which the kind reader surely will not withhold, when he is told, that the idiom, into which I endeavoured to clothe my thoughts, is not my mother-tongue.

Whilst this Grammar was passing through the press, I had gone to India for the purpose of translating the Sikh Granth. In order not to delay too long the printing of it, I could only see and correct a proof-sheet once. The unavoidable consequence was, that owing to the letters of this Grammar being loaded with so many dots and distinguishing marks, a number of misprints has crept in, which the student is requested to correct first after the affixed list of misprints.

INTRODUCTION.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF THE SINDHI TO THE SANSKRIT AND PRAKRIT.

The Sindhi is a pure Sanskritical language, more free from foreign elements than any other of the North Indian vernaculars. The old Prākrit grammarians may have had their good reason, to designate the Apabhransha dialect, from which the modern Sindhī is immediately derived, as the lowest of all the Prakrit dialects: but if we compare now the Sindhī with its sister-tongues, we must assign to it, in a grammatical point of view, the first place among them. It is much more closely related to the old Prākrit, than the Marāthī, Hindī, Panjābī and Bangālī of our days, and it has preserved an exuberance of grammatical forms, for which all its sisters may well envy it. For, while all the modern vernaculars of India 1) are already in a state of complete decomposition, the old venerable mother-tongue being hardly recognisable in her degenerate daughters, the Sindhi has, on the contrary, preserved most important fragments of it and erected for itself a grammatical structure, which surpasses in beauty of execution and internal harmony by far the loose and levelling construction of its sisters.

The Sindhī has remained steady in the first stage of decomposition after the old Prākrit, wheras all the other cognate dialects have sunk some degrees deeper; we shall see in the course of our introductory remarks, that the rules, which the Prākrit grammarian Kramadīshvara has laid down in reference to the Apabhransha, are still recognisable in the present Sindhī, which by no means can be stated of the other dialects. The Sindhī has thus become an independent language, which, though sharing a common origin with its sister-tongues, is very materially differing from them.

The Sindhī, which is spoken within the boundaries of Sindh proper, is divided into three dialects, which grammatically differ very little from each other, but offer considerable discrepancies in point of pronunciation. The dialect of lower Sindh, comprising the Indus-Delta and the sea-coast, is called significant from significant in the dialect, which is spoken north of Haiderābad, is called this sirāikī, from this sirō, by which Upper Sindh is designated; the dialect in vogue in the Thar, or desert of Sindh, is called tharēli, from that, the desert.

The dialect of Lār, though employed in most Sindhī compositions, is not the purest; the vowels are frequently contracted and the consonants too much softened down by assimilation. The northern or Sirāiki dialect has remained far more original and has preserved the purity of pronunciation with more tenaciousness, than the southern one. With reference to this superiority of the northern dialect to the southern the Sindhīs like to quote the proverb:

लाइ जो पढ़ों सिरे जो ढग़ो

lāra jō parhyō sirē jō dhagō.

The learned man of Lar is an ox in Upper Sindh.

The dialect of the Thar is vigorous but uncouth and already intermingled with the Māṛvāṛī; it is spoken by the Shikārīs, Dheḍhs ( carrier) and other outcast tribes. As far as I know, there are no literary compositions extant in this dialect.

The object of these introductory remarks is to show the relative position, which the Sindhi holds to the Sanskrit and Prākrit; and in order to elucidate this subject, we shall lay down the rules and principles, by which the present Sindhi vowel and consonantal system has been derived from the Sanskrit by the medium of the Prākrit. Thus, we hope, a solid basis also will be gained for intercomparing the Sindhī with its other sister-tongues. By this process alone, which will enable us, to assign to the Arian stock, what has been taken from it, though much altered now in shape and outward appearance by dint of contraction and assimilation, we shall on the other hand be able to trace out a certain residuum of vocables, which we must allot to an old aboriginal language, of which neither name nor extent is now known to us, but which, in all probability, was of the Tātār stock of languages and spread throughout the length and breadth of India before the irruption of the Arian race, as all the other vernaculars contain a similar non-Ārian residuum of words, which have been already designated as "provincial" by the old Prākrit grammarians.

The following investigation is destined for such as may be competent, by their previous studies, to penetrate more deeply into the real nature of the modern idioms of India, and for them, I trust, these outlines may prove useful and at the same time incentive, to follow up more deeply the intricate path, which I have pointed out.

I. THE SINDHI VOWEL SYSTEM. 1)

§. 1.

We consider first the single vowels, their change, substitution, contraction or elision in Sindhī.

1) \( \frac{1}{r} \) and its permutations.

The Sindhī, like the old Prākrit, has cut off from its system of sounds; for it is either treated as a vowel, in which case it is changed to i, a etc., or as a consonant, in which latter case it coincides with  $\zeta$  (r).

At the beginning of a word  $\mathfrak{F}$ , if standing by itself, is changed to  $\mathfrak{K}$  (ri), just as in Prākrit, e. g. Sindhī  $\mathfrak{K}$  ričhu, bear, Prāk.  $\mathfrak{K}$  Sansk.  $\mathfrak{F}$

But if \vec{\vec{\vec{v}}} be joined to a consonant, the following rules hold good:

- a) r is usually dissolved into i, as: डिसणु disaṇu, to see, Sansk. हम् (but Prāk. दक्ख), Hindī देखना; विछूं vičhū, scorpion, Prāk. विसुन्नो (or विनुन्नो), Sansk. कृश्चिक; किन्नो kiō, done, Prāk. किट, Sansk. कृत; गिए-हणु giṇhaṇu; to take, Sansk. गृह्य, Prāk. गेएह.
- b) r is dissolved into u, if the consonant, to which it is joined, happens to be a labial, as: बुढ़ो buḍhō, old, Prākrit on the other hand वडढ, Sansk. वृद्ध; मुओ muō, dead, Prāk. मुदो or already मुओ (by elision of द), Sansk. मृत. In such instances, as मुण्णू suṇaṇu, to hear, Prāk. 📆, the original root-vowel (Sansk. 🛂) has been preserved.

c) In most instances though r is dissolved into ar, irrespective of the consonant to which it may be joined, as:

मर्णु maranu, to die, Prāk. मर्, Sansk. मृ. भर्णु bharanu, to fill, Prāk. भर्, Sansk. भृ. धर्णु dharanu, to place, Prāk. धर्, Sansk. धृ. सर्णु saranu, to move, Prāk. सर्, Sansk. मृ.

In such like instances the Sindhī, as well as all the other cognate dialects, is quite in accordance with Prākrit usage, the Sanskrit verbal-noun being taken as the base of the infinitive in the modern idioms. In other instances though the Sindhī is not so liberal in dissolving r, as the Prākrit; it has managed, on the contrary, in many cases to preserve r by changing it to ir or transposing the same, as: Acj mirdangu (or: Auj mirdhangu) a tabor, Prāk. Hiji, Sansk. His far, Sansk. Fai hirdhō¹), heart, Prāk. fari, Sansk. Fai hirdhō¹, but the more Prākritical form fin hīō, is also in use in Sindhī.

In a few cases r has been preserved by being changed to simple r (subscribed), in conjunction with a dental t, d, or a cerebral t, d; as: जारो jāṭrō, son-in-law, Prāk. जामाउओ, Sansk. जामातृक; in this form H has been elided, which is rather of rare occurrence, and the dental has passed into a cerebral, the affix a being dropped altogether; similarly HIZ māṭrē, and its derivatives, as: मार्जो māṭrējō, मार्तो māṭrētō etc., corresponding to the Prākrit form माउओ, Sansk. मातृक.

2) The Diphthongs ऐ ai and ओ au.

Properly speaking there are no diphthongs in Sindhī, as little as in Prākrit; ai is generally pronounced loosely as a-i, and au as a-u. The Sindhī, however, is somewhat tighter in its pronunciation and not quite so effeminate as the Prākrit, so that it will depend more or less on the option of the speaker, if he will contract ai or au into a real diphthong, or pronounce them separately as two distinct vowels. From the manner of writing, no safe conclusion can be drawn, as a fixed system of orthography is still a desideratum. It may however be laid down as a general rule, that the Sindhī ignores diphthongs and pronounces them as two distinct vowels.

a) The diphthong ai.

- a) In such words, as are borrowed from the Arabic or Persian, the original diphthong is generally retained, and written and pronounced accordingly, as: الله sairu, journey; Arab. بَشِنْ: पेद्रा paidā, created, Pers. پَشِنْ: likewise in such nouns, as have been taken from the Hindūstānī, as: पेसो paisō, a pice. On the rest it is quite optional, to write and pronounce for instance सेन saina or सइन sa-ina, hint; the Hindūs prefer the loose Prākrit pronunciation (a-i, a-u), the Muhammedans more the Arabic or Persian method (ai, au).
- β) But generally the diphthong ai is contracted into ē in Sindhī, which is always long, and never anceps, as in Prākrit; e. g. वेह vēru, enmity, prāk. वड्रां (Lassen quotes also a form वेरं), Sansk. वेरं; वेज़ vēju, physician, Prāk. वेज, Sansk. वेरः संधालूणु sēndhölūņu, rocksalt (literally, Sindh-salt), from the Sansk. संधव, Sindhī, and लवण salt (Prāk. लोग).

In a similar manner also হায ay, which in Sindhī is treated in the same way as ai, is frequently contracted into ē, as: नेगु nēṇu, eye, Prāk. गुन्नगं, Sansk. नयनं; सेजा sējā, bed, Prāk. सेजा, Sansk. श्रया.

γ) The original diphthong ai may also be contracted to ī, as: धोर्ज dhīrju, firmness, Sansk. ઘેર્સ, Prāk. धोर. This Sindhī form is so far a proof for the correctness of the Prākrit rule, as धोर्ज can only be derived from धेर्स, and not from धोर itself; similarly Hindī धोर्ज.

b) The diphthong au.

The same, that has been remarked on the diphthong ai, may also be stated of the diphthong au; it may be optionally pronounced as a diphthong, but is more commonly separated into its component vowels.

At the end of a word no diphthong is admissible, and it must always be pronounced স্থান্ত a-u, for the sake of inflexion, as: মান্ত sa-u, hundred (Prāk. মাস্ত্র) সান্ত ja-u, barley, Pers. ৃর্ক, Sansk. যান্ত; বাত ca-u, say, imperative of বাব্যু, to say.

β) But very frequently this diphthong is contracted to ō, as: गोरो gōrō, fair, Sansk. गोर; जोमनु jōbhanu, time of youth, Prāk. जोबणं, Sansk. योवनमः मोडु mōru, a crest, Prāk. मउडं (Sansk. मुकुट); भोणो bhōnō, or भउणो bha-uṇō, a vagabond. The same rule also is occasionally applied to Arabic or Persian words, as: कोम kōma, a clan, or: कोम kauma, Arab. इं.

γ) The diphthong au may also be contracted to ū, as: सूरिहाई sūrihāī, heroism, Prāk. सोरिञ्जं Sansk. शीर्य; लुणू lūṇu, salt, Prāk. लोग, Sansk. लवगं (अव being treated like au).

3) The vowels a, ā; i, ī; u, ū; ē; ō.

Having considered the diphthongs ai and au in their relative position to the Sanskrit and Prākrit, we submit now the common Sindhī vowels to a nearer examination.

a) The vowels a, ā.

The short vowel X a, is more tenaciously kept fast in Sindhī, than in the Prākrit, and the Sindhī very frequently recurs directly again to the original Sanskrit, as: uan pakō, cooked, Sansk. uan, but Prāk. uan; uan supanō, dream, Sansk. uan, but Prāk. uan; uan supanō, dream, Sansk. uan, but Prāk. uan; uan; vale, a creeper, Sansk. uan, but Prāk. uan; But there is no lack of examples on the other hand, in which original a has been likewise shortened to i, as: uan khimā, patience, Prāk. uan, Sansk. uan; uan, marrow, Sansk. uan.

In this way a has been shortened to i in all those forms, which are already alleged by the Prākrit grammarian Kramadīshvara in the Apabhransha dialect (compare: Lassen, Instit. Linguae Prāk. p. 454) as: जिंद्र-तिंद्र jīa-tīa (Apabhransha: जिंध-तिंध, instead of जध-तध); जिति-तिति jite-tite, where-there (Apabhransha: जिन्य-तन्यु¹), from यव-तय); जिति kite, where? (Apa-bhransha: किन्यू, from an original form क्यू, instead of क्यू, thence the common Sansk. form क्यू). The Sindhī adverb इंग्र ĩa or इंग्र ĩa, thus, corresponds to the Prāk. इंग्र, and is regularly derived from the Sansk. adverb इंग्रम् (not from इति, which Lassen has already doubted) with the elision of h (ĩa = iha).

Short a is occasionally, but rarely, changed to u, as: USE rā-uru, tax, Sansk. USE (but not in the examples quoted by Lassen §. 173, 3).

Long ā is in Sindhī frequently preserved in such forms, where in Prākrit it has been already shortened (owing to the contraction or assimilation of the following compound consonant): as: atiji bairāgī, a religious ascetic, Prāk. atiji, Sansk. atiji; mārikha, way, Prāk. hiji, Sansk. hiji; miţi jāṭrā, pilgrimage, Prāk. sansk. uni; anu, vāghu, tiger, Prāk. anu, Sansk. uni; anu, vāghu, tiger, Prāk. anu, Sansk. anu,

Long ā is weakened to ĭ in the following adverbs, after the analogy of the Prākrit, as: जिंदिं निर्दि jadehē-tadehē, when-then; जिंदिं kadehē, when? which are derived from the Sansk. adverbs: यदा-तदा, जदा.

Long ā as a feminine termination of Prākrit nouns is in Sindhī occasionally permuted for ī or even ǐ (e), as: aiş vā-ī, speeck, Prāk. aiয়, Sansk. aiড়; য়য় dhure, origin, Prāk. য়য়, Sansk. য়য়. The only example of final য়য় of a masc. theme being changed to i is য়য় rā-e, prince, Prāk. য়য়, Sansk. য়য় nom.

In a certain number of words, ending in the Sansk. crude state in  $\mathbf{7}$  (but nom. sing.  $\mathbf{7}$ ), final  $\mathbf{7}$  has been changed in Sindh $\mathbf{7}$  (as now and then already in Pr $\mathbf{7}$ krit) to u, as:  $\mathbf{7}$  father, Pr $\mathbf{7}$ k.  $\mathbf{7}$ krit) (by elision of  $\mathbf{7}$ ), Sansk. nom.  $\mathbf{7}$ krit) bh $\mathbf{7}$ u, brother, Pr $\mathbf{7}$ kk.  $\mathbf{7}$ krit) Sansk.  $\mathbf{7}$ krit) and by the same levelling process:  $\mathbf{7}$ krit) māu, mother, Prāk. माञ्चा, Sansk. माता; राउ rāu, prince (besides राइ); पंघु pandhu, journey, Sansk. पन्या m.

As regards the vowel changes in the midst of a word, the Sindhī adheres on the average to Prākrit usage, as: पण्ड patharu, bed, Prāk. प्राथा, Sansk. प्रसार, Hindī विसार), different from the else identical word पण्ड stone, Prāk. प्राथा, Sansk. प्रसार (Hindī प्राथा); सथा mayā, compassion, Sansk. साथा (Hindī likewise सथा); देवली dēvalī, temple (in Sindhī with the fem. termination ī), Prāk. देवस, Sansk. देवालय (Hindī likewise देवल).

b) The vowels i, ī.

Short i is in Sindhī pronounced like short ĕ, when preceded or followed by Ē h, and regularly so, when ending a word, as: ¿Eṣ̄ ĕharō, such a one, मिहिति mĕhĕtĕ, a mosque; गालि gāle, word. Short i corresponds therefore often to the Prākrit Vē, which is considered short, when followed by a compound consonant, whereas vē is in Sindhī always long; e.g. Prāk. गेग्ह, Sindhī गिग्ह (गिगहणु), to take; निंड् nindra, sleep, Prāk. गेर्ह or गिह, Sansk. निदा; चिन्ह činhu, sign, Prāk. चेन्ध or चिन्ह, Sansk. चिहं.

It is a curious phenomenon in Sindhī, that occasionally a short i is interpolated in a syllable, which the effeminate pronunciation finds too harsh for the ear. This is particularly the case, when a syllable closes with a double n or n followed by another consonant (especially a liquida). The consequence of this effeminate pronunciation is, that the n thus separated by the interpolation of i, becomes nasalized, as: Hइन sāina, sign, hint, instead of Hन, from Hज़ा; Hइनाह sāisāru, world, instead of Hन; Hइन्ह māijala, a day's journey, instead of Hन (केंद्र), and is frequently no longer heard at all, especially in the mouth of the Muhammedans, who write: مَثِيَرَكَ ma-izala, مُثِيرَكَ sa-isāru etc.

Lengthened is ĭ in 葡 kī, what, Prākrit already 南, from the Sanskrit 南井; further in 莉貴 šīhu, lion, Prāk. 相長, Sansk. स長; but not in 氣井 Jibha, tongue, Prāk. 司嗣, Sansk. 句裏.

Long ī is kept fast by the Sindhī in many instances, where in Prākrit it has been shortened to ĭ, in consequence of the assimilation of consonants, as: तीचे tīrthu, a holy bathing-place, Prāk. तित्य, Sansk. तीचे.

Long ī is rarely shortened to ĭ, and this only, when ending a noun, as: ATT nāre, a woman, Prāk. et Sansk. ATT.

Long ī passes into ē in those instances, which have been already marked out by the old Prākrit grammarians, as Prākrit किर्म, एरिम etc., Sansk. कीहरा, इंट्रश etc. The corresponding Sindhī forms are: केहरी, kēharō, what? (by transposition of ह, instead of केह kērhu; in the Apabhransha dialect r on the other hand has been dropped, as: केही). The Prākrit form एरिम (Apabhransha एही) has not been taken up by the Sindhī, but other forms have been created from the pronominal bases की, जो, जो, उहा, उहा, by adding to them the diminutive affix इं rō, as: किहड़ो kĕharō, of what kind; जिहड़ो-तिहड़ो jĕharō, of this kind, उहड़ो uharō, of that kind.

c) The vowels u, ū.

On the whole the Sindhī has taken up those changes, which these vowels have been made subject to in Prākrit;

but in some special cases it has remained more original, than the Prākrit, as: पुस्सु purusu, man, Prāk. पुरिसो, Sansk. पुरुष; मुखिरी, mukhirī, a bud, Prāk. मउलं, Sansk. मुकुलं.

U is changed to a in: ग्रो garo, heavy, Prāk. गहञ्ज, Sansk. गुरु; डुब्लु dabalu, weak (Prāk. still दुब्ल), Sansk. दुबेल; or it may be dropped altogether, as: परि pare, on, upon, Prāk. उबरि, Sansk. उपरि.

U is changed to ō only in the following instances, as: मोती mōtī, pearl, Prāk. मोत्त (mŏtta) Sansk. मुक्त; पोषी pōthī, book, Prāk. पोत्युओ, Sansk. पुस्तक; को-इरि kōḍare, a spade, Sansk. बुराल.

Long ū is preserved more tenaciously in Sindhī, than in Prākrit, e. g. and nūro, a hollow ring on the ankle, Prāk. Ū૩i Sansk. au.— In such cases, where original u has been depressed to ŏ in Prākrit, the original vowel generally reappears in Sindhī, as: उचिति ukhirī, a mortar, Prāk. ओक्खं, Sansk. उठखं, पुठ puṭhe, power, Prāk. पोदिठ, Sansk. पृष्ट, which is, though identical in form, not to be confounded with पुठ puṭhe, the back, Sansk. पृष्ट, Hindī पीठ.

d) The vowels ē and ō.

In Sindhī, as well as in Prākrit, ē and ō are no longer looked upon as Guṇa-vowels, but as simple sounds. In Sindhī ē and ō are always long, never anceps, as in Prākrit; for the short Prākritical ĕ short i is substituted in Sindhī, as: [ hiku, one, Prāk. ] was and for the short Prākritical ŏ short u, as stated already.

Both vowels keep their place very steadfastly and frequently reappear in such cases, where they have been already shortened in Prākrit, owing to the assimilation of consonants, as: प्रेम् prēmu, love, Prāk. पेम्म (pĕmma); जोमनु jōbhanu, time of youth, Prāk. जोटवर्ण (jŏvvanam); जोगू jōgu, fit, Prāk. जोग्ग, Sansk. योग्य.

Quite exceptional is the shortening of ō to u in लुहर luharu, blacksmith, instead of: लोहकार (Sansk. लोहकार), where ā has been likewise shortened to ă; and the change of ē to ī in पीज़ pīju, draught, Sansk. पेय; खी khī, wellfare, Sansk. सेम; नीहु nīhu, love, Prāk. ऐहो, Sansk. सेह; मोहु mīhu, rain, Prāk. मेहो, Sansk. मेघ.

When ending a noun ē and ō are frequently shortened to ĕ and ŭ respectively, especially in poëtry; but these changes being peculiar to Sindhī, we shall consider them hereafter separately. The peculiarity of the Apabhransha dialect, as noted by the grammarian Kramadīshvara, is fully borne out by the modern Sindhi; it uses likewise in the locative singular ĕ (i) instead of ē, as परहेहि paradehe, in a foreign country, sft ghare, in a house etc. In the same way, as the Apabhransha, the Sindhī also changes to a great extent the Prākrit termination ō to u, as: कम kamu, business, Prāk. कम्मो etc. The same may also be said of the ablative sing. termination आदो  $(=\bar{a}-\bar{o}$  with elision of  $\mathbf{\xi}$ ) which is commonly shortened to ādu in the Apabhransha dialect, and in Sindhī further to ā-u: as ঘાা gharā-u, from a house. Sindhī ablative termination is now-a-days generally contracted to अंड au (ā being likewise shortened to a, and to avoid the hiatus, both vowels being nasalized) but ā-u is still very frequently used in poëtry.

§. 3.

The elision, contraction and insertion of vowels.

These three points, so important in the old Prākrit, we may, as far as the Sindhī is concerned, sum up under the following brief remarks:

- a) An elision of vowels takes far more rarely place in Sindhī, than in the Prākrit, because the consonants do not so easily give way; there is however no lack of instances, in which the Sindhī accedes to Prākrit usage, as: दुआरो duārō, temple (different from दुआर door, Sansk. हार), Sansk. देवालय, where ē has been elided; सिआरो siārō, the cold season, Prāk. सीआरो, Sansk. शीतकाल; कुंमह kumbharu, potter, Sansk. कुंमकार; प्रवाल pakhāla, a pair of leather-bags, Sansk. प्राःख्यः; रिणु riṇu, the desert (the Riṇ), Sansk. हरिणं; धिआ dhia, daughter (prākrit already धीआ, see Lassen p. 172, note); वि bi, also, Prāk. वि, Sansk. आप.
- b) As regards the contraction of vowels, the Sindhī coincides more fully with the Prākrit, though in some instances I have noticed a deviation from Prākrit analogy, as: चोणां čōṭhō, the fourth, Prāk. चउत्थ, Sansk. चतुर्थ; मोर moru, peacock, Prāk. मोर, Sansk. मथुर; लूगु विग्ल, salt, Prāk. लोग, Sansk. लवग; मोनु sōnu, gold, Sansk. मुवर्ग.
- c) With reference to the insertion of vowels the Sindhī agrees on the whole with the Prākrit.
- a) An original compound consonant is separated by the insertion of a vowel, to render its pronunciation more easy for a Sindhī organ. The insertion of a respective vowel depends on the sequence of vowels or the varga of the consonant, which is to be separated from the preceding one, though this rule is by no means strictly adhered to.

a is inserted in cases like the following: सराह sarāha, praise, Prāk. सलाहा, Sansk. श्लाघाः सलोकु salōku, a šlōka, Prāk. सिलोग्न, Sansk. श्लोक.

i is inserted, as: इस्ती istrī, woman, Prāk. इत्थी, Sansk. स्ती; विद्ध varĕhu, year, Prāk. विसो, Sansk. वर्षः मिलगु milanu, to be obtained, Prāk. मिलाग्, Sansk. root से.

u is inserted, as: सुपनो supanō, dream, Prāk. सि-बिण, Sansk. स्वप्न: सुमर्ण श्यावायाया, to remember, Prāk. सुमर्, Sansk. स्पर् (root स्मृ).

β) On the other hand, the Sindhī very frequently has gone a step farther and dispensed with the insertion of a vowel by pushing the root-vowel between the compound consonant and dropping the final consonant, as: Ry sēnu, friend, Prāk. Hūξ, Sansk. चξ; or more commonly it drops simply one of the compound consonants, as: उद्घ nuhu, daughter-in-law, Prāk. Hūξ, Sansk. चुण; Hanīh. Sansk.

Sandhi, Hiatus and Euphony.

The Sindhī, as well as the Prākrit, dispenses totally with the rules of Sandhī, and vowels may therefore meet, without being subject to the laws of euphony. To separate however in some measure concurring vowels, the Sindhī very liberally employs the use of Anusvāra, whereby a certain nasalizing pronunciation has been imparted to the language, which is in some measure disagreeable to our ear; e. g. nis ãu, I; gais sukhãu, nom. plur. of gai, vows; eigy khãinu, to burn; nom. plur. of gai, cow etc. The Anusvāra is further inserted, to facilitate the lengthened pronunciation of a vowel, as: मीह mihu, rain, Sansk. मेध; this is particularly the case, when a noun ends in a long vowel, as मी prī, friend, मं bhū, earth etc.

On the other hand there are also examples to be met with, where original Anusvāra has been dropped in Sindhī, as: मामु māsu, or माहु māhu, meat, Sansk. मांस.

II. THE SINDHI CONSONANTAL SYSTEM.

In comparing the Sindhī letters (see below the Sindhī alphabets) with the Prākrit alphabet, we see at the first glance, that the Sindhī has retained the letters N š, S n, A n and A n, as single letters, which have disappeared already from the Prākrit alphabet, except when preceding a consonant of their respective vargas.

N š, is in Sindhī by no means a palatal sibilant, as in Sanskrit, but a simple dental sound, equally unknown in Sanskrit and Prākrit, which has become naturalized in all the modern idioms (with the exception of the Gujarātī), and which corresponds to our common dental sh. It is derived from various sources:

- a) from the Sanskrit palatal sibilant श, as: शब्दु šabdu, word, Sansk. शब्द; श्रीह šarīru, body (besides सरीह sarīru), Sansk. श्रीर; शुक्क šukru, friday, Sansk. शुक्क.
- b) from the Sanskrit dental sibilant स s, as: 刻景 šīhu, lion, Sansk. 社長: 刻景 šāhū, rich (by the Musalmāns generally pronounced साऊ sā-ū) Sansk. साधु; the s of Persian words is also now and then changed to š, as: 刻词 šīkha, a spit, Pers.
- c) from the Sanskrit cerebral sibilant ष š, as: कश्यु kašaņu, to pull, Sansk. कृष् (Hindī कसा); किश्यु kišņu, Krishna, Sansk. कृष्ण; विशु višu, world (besides विसु) Sansk. विषय.

The letter ش of Arabic and Persian words is always rendered by য়, as: शहर šaharu, town, Pers. شَهُر; शाह्र šāhu, king, Pers. شاه.

This is a very remarkable deviation from the principles of the Prākrit, where the letter  $\mathbf{V}$  has been changed to  $\mathbf{H}$ , and further to  $\mathbf{E}$ .

In Sindhī the use of the letter  $\mathfrak{A}$  is confined to a limited number of indigenous vocables (those, which have been borrowed from foreign sources, not being taken into account), but that it is still to be considered more or less exceptional, may be concluded from the circumstance, that the Prākrit rules concerning its permutations ( $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$ ) are still in full force in Sindhī, as:  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$ ) are still in full force in Sindhī, as:  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  are still in full force in Sindhī, as:  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  unit;  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  and  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  and  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  and  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  are still in full force in Sindhī, as:  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  and  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  are still in full force in Sindhī, as:  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  and  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  and  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  and  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  and  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  as  $\mathfrak{A} = \mathfrak{E}$  and  $\mathfrak$

The same law holds good with reference to the cerebral ष š, which like श, passes into स or ह, as: नुहु nuhu, daughter-in-law, Sansk. नुषा; विसु visu, world, Sansk. विषय; वेसु vēsu, disguise, Sansk. वेष.

य and प are in Sindhī also frequently changed to ड čh, as: किड़ी kičharī, rise and pulse boiled together (Hindī पिच्ड़ी), Sansk. कुश्रा; छंड़र čhančharu, Saturday, Sansk. शनिश्रा; छ čha, or डह čhaha, six, Prāk. छा, Sansk. घट. This permutation seems in Sindhī to be so deeply rooted, that even the ம் of Arabic and Persian words is occasionally changed to छ, as: डाल čhāla (besides शाल), would to God, Arab. فَاعَالَة श्रांडिं। čhābase, bravo! Pers. شَابَاش; पाड़ाहु pāchāhu, king, Pers. يَادَشَاه Pers. The cerebral \mathbb{\mathbb{q}} is occasionally written in Sindhī, but only by Brāhmans, and even with them its use depends on their relative knowledge of Sanskrit. We may therefore as well leave out this letter from the consonantal system of the Sindhī, as its actual pronunciation is completely ignored. In Capt. Stack's Sindhī Dictionary some words are given with the cerebral \mathbb{q}, such as: [aus viṣaī, voluptuary, \mathbb{q} duṣṭu, bad, \mathbb{q} kaṣṭu, wretchedness etc., but the letter itself as well as those words are only known to the Brāhmans.

The guttural so n, as well as the palatal so n, keep their place in Sindhī as single letters, e. g. so anu, body (Hindī siŋ or sijŋ), Sansk. sis; hogy mananu, to ask (Hindī hiŋən), Sansk. hinn (r. həŋ); hogy mananu, to heed (Hindī hinn), Sansk. hinə. In the kindred dialects both these nasals are only used in conjunction with a letter of their varga, and never as single consonants (the Panjābī alone being excepted).

The cerebral  $\mathbf{U}$   $\dot{\mathbf{n}}$  has not supplanted the dental  $\mathbf{R}$  in Sindhī, as in Prākrit, but both are sharply kept asunder;  $\mathbf{U}$   $\dot{\mathbf{n}}$  is also used as a single consonant, in the same way as  $\mathbf{S}$   $\dot{\mathbf{n}}$  and  $\mathbf{R}$   $\dot{\mathbf{n}}$ , and is of very frequent occurrence, in which respect the Panjābī alone agrees with the Sindhī, the other dialects using  $\mathbf{U}$   $\dot{\mathbf{n}}$  only before letters of the cerebral class, with the exception of the Hindūstānī, which is destitute of a cerebral nasal.

1) Single consonants at the beginning of a word.

At the beginning of a word the following consonants occur in Sindhī:

- 1) Gutturals: 南 k, 艰 kh; ग g, घ gh; ह h; ग g. 2) Palatals: च č, 惑 čh; ज j, 天 jh; य y; श š, ज़ j̄.
- 3) Cerebrals: Z t, Z th; Z d, Z dh; Ş r; — Ş d.
- 4) Dentals: त t, थ th; द d, ध dh; न n; र r; छ 1; स s; —
- 5) Labials: पp, फph; बb, Hbh; मm; वv; 專b.

This scheme deviates from that of the Prākrit in some essential points, which we have partly already noticed.

Peculiar to the Sindhī is the cerebral $\vec{\sigma}$r, beginning a word, which is not found in any of the other dialects. It is, however, also in Sindhī confined to the two interjections $\vec{\sigma}$ r\vec{\sigma}$ and $\vec{\sigma}$ r\vec{\sigma}$; the former is used in calling out to a man, the latter in calling out to a woman. There can be no doubt, that we have in both forms the Sansk. interjectional adverb $\vec{\sigma}$ (which form is also used in Sindhī) which has been vindicated by Dr. Caldwell (Comparative Grammar of the Drāvidian languages, p. 440) to the Drāvidian idioms of the south, and the original signification of which is: o slave! The correctness of Dr. Caldwell's statement is borne out by the Sindhī, in which besides $\vec{\sigma}$ and $\vec{\sigma}$, also $\vec{\sigma}$$\vec{\sigma}$ and $\vec{\sigma}$$\vec{\sigma}$ is used, corresponding to the Drāvidian adā.

All those consonants, as arrayed above, hold their place at the beginning of a word, when standing single; but when a noun happens to be compounded, then the first consonant of the second noun is no longer considered initial, and may therefore be elided, as: सिआरो siārō, the cold season, Prākrit already मीआरो, Sansk.

1) A k is not subject to aspiration, as in some examples of the Prākrit, e. g. Q. A., Sansk. Q. A., Sindhī Q. A. kubō, hump-backed; neither is k changed to A at the beginning of a word, but frequently at the end (being an affix) and in the case of the genitive affix A even to the media A j.

The k of Arabic-Persian words on the other hand is now and then aspirated or even changed to ير , as: khutābu, school, or خُتَابُ xutābu, from the Arabic سُكَان sukhānu, a rudder, Arab. سُكَان.

- 2) ग g is aspirated in the single instance of घर gharu, a house, Prāk. घर (instead of गई), Sansk. गृह.

The cerebral Z (Z) with its media Z (Z) comprises the most non-Ārian elements of the language; nearly <sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub> of the words, which commence with a cerebral, are taken from some aboriginal, non-Ārian idiom, which in recent times has been termed "Scythian" ), but which we would prefer to call Tātār. This seams to be a very strong proof, that the cerebrals have been borrowed from some idiom anterior to the introduction of the Arian family of languages; the Sanskrit uses the cerebrals very sparingly, but in Prākrit, which is already considerably tinged with so-called "provincial" (i. e. non-Ārian) elements, they struggle already hard to supplant the dentals.

4) \(\bar{\mathbb{c}}\) d, as well as its tenuis \(\bar{\mathbb{n}}\) t, is very frequently changed to the corresponding cerebral \(\bar{\mathbb{c}}\) d, and, as even d did not seem hard enough at the beginning of a word, it was changed in most cases to the peculiar Sindhī \(\bar{\mathbb{c}}\) (the pronunciation of which see under the Sindhī alphabets), as: \(\bar{\mathbb{c}}\) \(\bar{\mathbb{c}}\) \(\bar{\mathbb{c}

ž

Sansk. cus; sany dianu, to give, Prāk. ch, Sansk. root ci; shy disanu, to see, Prāk. chy Sansk. en. But if r be joined to the cerebral media, the simple cerebral (s) must be used, as dis already by its own nature a double cerebral, e. g. sini drākha, grape, Sansk. ciri (Hindī cir). The simple cerebral dis very seldom to be met with at the beginning of a word, and must be carefully distinguished from di, as: sol dithō, obstinate, but sol dithō, seen, participle past of shu to see.

द d, is changed to its aspirate ध dh in the single instance of धिञ्ज dhia, daughter, after the precedent of the Prākrit धीटा or धीञ्जा.

- 5) Initial प is aspirated in some instances, as: फासी phāsī or फाही phāhī, a noose, Sansk. पाश (Hindī फांसी); now and then it passes also to the semi-vowel a (by the medium of a b) as: बार् vājhō, a Hindū schoolmaster, Sansk. उपाध्याय (initial u having first been dropped).
- 6) The semi-vowel य y has become now very scarce in Sindhī at the beginning of a word, as: यभ्णु yabhaṇu, coire; यटो yaṭō, stout; यारंहं yārāhā, eleven. After the analogy of the Prākrit initial य is generally changed to ¬, as: ¬ jō, who, Sansk. यो; ¬ yāsu, fame, Sansk. यग.

In words, borrowed from the Arabic or Persian, y is always preserved, as: याह yāru, friend, Pers. يار

The only instance, where initial 4 has been changed to 3 l in Sindhī is 3 lathe, a walking-stick; the same is the case in Prākrit, 3, Sansk. 4.

§. 7.

2) Single consonants in the midst of a word.

According to a common Prākrit rule the following consonants:

when standing single in the midst of a word, may either be retained or elided. This rule we find corroborated by the Sindhī, but not without some essential restrictions, the consonants being on the whole more frequently retained than elided, as the effeminacy of pronunciation has not yet reached that degree of indistinctness in Sindhī, which so peculiarly characterizes the Prākrit. We shall therefore find, that in many instances the Sindhī has followed the already beaten track, but has more frequently preserved the old harder form, or chosen its own way of elision and contraction. The semi-vowels are but rarely totally elided in Sindhī; they either keep their place or are dissolved into their corresponding vowels.

Examples of elision: मुई suī, needle, Prāk. सूई, Sansk. सूची. किन्नो kiō, done, Prak. किटो, Sansk. कृत; राउ rāu, prince, Prāk. राञ्चा, Sansk. राजा; चउमासो ča-umāsō, the rainy season, Sansk. चतुमास; सर्उ sara-u, autumn, Prāk. सर्दो, Sansk. शरद; पिउ piu, father, Prāk. पिञ्चा, Sansk. पिता.

This process of elision is extended even to foreign words, as: নাৰুষ্ণা nākhuỗ, a ship-master, Pers. نَاكُنَا.

But more frequently the consonants keep their place, as: सागह sāgaru, the sea, Prāk. साञ्चरी, Sansk. सागर; नगह nagaru, town, Prāk. सञ्जरी, Sansk. नगर; वचनु vačanu, promise, Prāk. वञ्चरां, Sansk. वचनं.

It is quite characteristical, that the Prākrit does not elide the cerebrals, for which it shows already such a predilection, but, wherever possible, it changes the dentals into cerebrals, to guard them thus against elision. This process we find in full operation in the modern dialects, which have sprung from the Prākrit; the common dentals have become too weak for the mouth of the people, a circumstance, which receives a particular light from the manner, in which the modern Indians write and pronounce European words; every dental is without mercy changed by them into a cerebral, which proves at least so much, that the cerebrals are more familiar to them, than the dentals.

Let us now briefly glance over the exceptions, which have been noted down by the Prākrit grammarians.

1) According to the rule, laid down at the head of this paragraph, the letters a k, n g, d č, s j are, when not clided, retained. The exceptions from this rule in Prākrit are not borne out by the Sindhī, and seem therefore to have been more of a local character. The only exception, which is corroborated by the modern idioms, is the Prākrit form artill, sister, Sansk. Hindī, which must be explained by an original form artill, from which artill has sprung; Hindī area and Sindhī, by transposition of the aspiration, hy bhēnu.

क k, may pass into its corresponding media ग, as: भग्त bhagatu, a worshipper, Sansk. भक्त; सगति sagate, strength, Sansk. शक्ति. On the contrary there is a transition of ग to क (and by the influence of following r to kh) in खड khada, a pit, Prāk. गड़, Sansk. गते.

2) The cerebral Z t and its aspirate Z th, frequently pass into their corresponding media, as: a th kandhī, a necklace (besides a th), Sansk. a this is fully borne out by the modern dialects, especially the Sindhī, which goes already a step further in this downward course, and changes E d to E r, and E dh to E rh; e. g. a to baru, the Indian fig-tree, Sansk. a; g trōraṇu, to break, Sansk. a to to the this downward to break, Sansk. a to to the this downward to break, Sansk. a the this downward to break, Sansk.

read, Sansk. पर; पीढ़ी pīrhī, throne, Sansk. पीठी; दुढ़ेणु lurhaņu, to roll down, Sansk. ऌ्र.

To this permutation also the original Sanskritical dissubject in many instances, as: Jsy juranu, to be joined, Sansk. Js; ulsy pīranu, to press, Sansk. Us; Jsru, inanimate body, Sansk. Js. In a similar manner also the Sansk. dh may be changed to rh, as: Hs mūrhu, ignorant, Sansk. Hs.

But by far the greatest number of words, in which r or rh is to be found, is of non-Ārian origin.

- 3) त very often passes into its media द, as: खाँदि khānde, patience, Sansk. साति. The Sansk. participial termination अन्त (अत्) is always changed in Sindhī to अंदो andō, as: हलंदो halandō, going, वंदो doing. त is even changed to an aspirated cerebral, but only in such cases, where the aspiration has been caused by an elided r, as: वर vathu, taking, Sansk. वृति. त is preserved in many instances, where in Prākrit it has passed into the media द, as हिन्सिय himself, Sansk. चुति. व is occasionally aspirated, as: हिन्सिय himmatha, Arab.
- 4) प only rarely passes into its media ब, as बि bi, also, Sansk. ऋषि; रज्बूत rajbūtu, a Rajput, Sansk. ग्र-जपुन; Prāk. उबरि upon, but Sindhī परि.

On the other hand there is a transition of the media to the tenuis in the abstract affix  $\mathbf{u}$ ,  $\mathbf{u}$ ,  $\mathbf{u}$ ,  $\mathbf{u}$ , etc. (Hindī  $\mathbf{u}$ ,), from the Sansk. affix  $\mathbf{ra}$ ,  $\mathbf{ra}$ ,  $\mathbf{ra}$  ( $\mathbf{v} = \mathbf{b} = \mathbf{p}$ ), as:  $\mathbf{s}$   $\mathbf{ra}$   $\mathbf{u}$ ,  $\mathbf{u}$   $\mathbf{ra}$   $\mathbf{r$

Final  $\mathbf{q}$  is now and then changed to  $\mathbf{u}$  ( $\mathbf{p} = \mathbf{b} = \mathbf{v} = \mathbf{u}$ ), as:  $\mathbf{n} \mathbf{q}$  tau, heat, Sansk.  $\mathbf{n} \mathbf{q}$ , Hindi  $\mathbf{n} \mathbf{q}$  tao.

5) The substitution of  $\mathfrak{T}$  in lieu of  $\mathfrak{T}$  has been preserved in the case of:  $\mathfrak{T}\mathfrak{T}\mathfrak{T}$  talāu, a tank, Prāk.

नलाञ्चं, Sansk. तडाग. In other examples however the course, taken by the Prākrit, has again been abandoned, and a new one struck out; e.g. the Prākrit डालिम, pomegranate, sprung from the Sanskrit दाडिम (by the substitution of ल for ड) becomes in Sindhī डाढ़ं त्वेंग्नेण (Hindī दाड़िम), the initial dental द being first changed to ड तं and then hardened to ड तं, and ड तं passing into इ ए with an additional aspiration (which is rather unusual).

The modern idioms deviate in this respect from the Prākrit, that they change $\vec{\mathbf{S}}$ \tilde{\mathbf{q}}$ to $\vec{\mathbf{F}}$ r, instead of substituting $\vec{\mathbf{S}}$ for $\vec{\mathbf{S}}$; but therein also lies a hint, how the substitution of $\vec{\mathbf{G}}$ for $\vec{\mathbf{S}}$ has been possible. The change must have been effected by the medium of $\vec{\mathbf{F}}$ r (not of $\vec{\mathbf{I}}$, as Lassen supposes), which approaches $\vec{\mathbf{S}}$ very closely in sound. This explains sufficiently such like cases as: $\vec{\mathbf{I}} \vec{\mathbf{F}}$ pīlō, yellow, Sansk. $\vec{\mathbf{I}} \vec{\mathbf{T}}$; the change must have passed through the following stages, as: $\vec{\mathbf{I}} \vec{\mathbf{T}}$ = $\vec{\mathbf{I}} \vec{\mathbf{E}}$ = $\vec{\mathbf{I}} \vec{\mathbf{E}}$.

6) The substitution of  $\overline{\zeta}$  r for  $\overline{\zeta}$  in those numerals, which are compounded with  $\overline{\zeta}$ , has been retained in Sindhī, as well as in the cognate dialects, e. g. Prāk.  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Sindhī  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Frāk.  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Sindhī  $\overline{\zeta}$ , for Prāk.  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Sindhī  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Sindhī  $\overline{\zeta}$ , for Prāk.  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Sindhī  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Sindhī  $\overline{\zeta}$ , for Prāk.  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Sindhī  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Sindhī  $\overline{\zeta}$ , Sindhī  $\overline{\zeta}$ , for Prāk.

3) Single Aspirates in the midst of a word.

On the average the aspirates are in Sindhī more frequently preserved, than elided, though the Prākrit laws, concerning their elision, are also in force.

a) The letters u kh, u gh, u th, u dh, u bh may be elided in this wise, that only the spiritus t remains. This phenomenon is so far of great importance, as the Prākrit seems to indicate thereby, that it considers the aspirates as compound consonants, like gh, bh etc., the base of which is dropped and the spiritus  $\mathbf{\xi}$  alone retained. The aversion of the Prākrit against the aspirates seems to point to a Tātār under-ground current in the mouth of the common people, the Drāvidian languages of the south being destitute of aspirates. Against this tendency of clearing away the aspirates the modern idioms react far more strongly than the old Prākrit, their pronunciation proving in this respect much tighter, than that of their immediate common mother-tongue.

Examples of elision: 東蒙 műhű, face, Prāk. 東蒙, Sansk. 東爾; but 東壩 mukhu is also in use in Sindhī; 前寰 mĩhu, rain, Prāk. 中蒙, Sansk. 中軍; in Sindhī also 中軍; 中國 sahī, friend, Prāk. 中國, Sansk. 中國; 兩家城 lahaņu, to say, Prāk. 兩家, Sansk. 兩戰; ल家城 lahaņu, to obtain, Prāk. ल家, Sansk. लभ.

In some instances the Sindhī advances beyond the Prākrit by dropping  $\xi$ , which has been severed from its base, as;  $\xi$  sāū, upright, Prāk.  $\xi$  Sansk.  $\xi$

- b) But more commonly the aspirates in question are retained, as: मुखु sukhu, pleasure, Prāk. मुखं; अधीरो adhīrō, hasty, Prāk. अधीरो; मुघड़, sugharu, shrewd, Sansk. मुघट.
- c) The aspirates छ čh, फ jh, ढ ṭh, ढ ḍh, फ ph are retained unaltered; e. g. इछा ičhā, wish, Sansk. इन्छा; अछा ačhō, white, Sansk. अन्छ; कंटी kanṭhī, a kind of necklace, Sansk. काटीय; ढूंढणु ḍhūnḍhaṇu, to seek, Sansk. ढूंढण; सफलु saphalu, fruitful, Sansk. सफल.
- d) The aspirate ढ th may also pass into its corresponding media, as: मुंदि sundhe, ginger, Sansk. गुर्ही, Hindī सोंद; कंढी kandhī, a kind of necklace (besides कंडी); गंढि gandhe, a bundle, Prāk. गग्डि, Sansk. यन्थि.

The cases of a media passing into its corresponding temis are very rare, as: मुठो suṭhō, pure, Sansk. गुड, Hindī again मुध्.

e) The aspirated dental प th passes in some instances into its corresponding media ध, as: पंधु pandhu, journey, Sansk. पन्या m. The aspirated dentals may also be exchanged for their corresponding cerebrals, as: बुढ़ी buḍhō, old, Prāk. बुढ़, Sansk. बुढ़; मूढ़ mūḍhu, a fool, Prāk. मुड, Sansk. मुग्ध.

The transition of an aspirated dental to its corresponding non-aspirate is very rare, as H<sup>g</sup> madu, liquor, Sansk. H<sup>g</sup> (Hindī H<sup>g</sup> and H<sup>g</sup>).

4) Single nasals.

The dental  $\overline{\mathbf{n}}$  n, is now and then changed to the palatal  $\overline{\mathbf{n}}$  n, as:  $\overline{\mathbf{u}}$  thanu, woman's milk, Sansk.  $\overline{\mathbf{m}}$ , Hindī  $\overline{\mathbf{u}}$  (udder).  $\overline{\mathbf{n}}$  is changed to the cerebral  $\overline{\mathbf{u}}$  n in  $\overline{\mathbf{u}}$  dhēnu, a milk-cow, Sansk.  $\overline{\mathbf{u}}$ . In the case of  $\overline{\mathbf{c}}$  limu, a nimb-tree,  $\overline{\mathbf{n}}$  has been exchanged for  $\overline{\mathbf{c}}$ , Sansk.  $\overline{\mathbf{a}}$  Hindī  $\overline{\mathbf{n}}$  and  $\overline{\mathbf{c}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{n}}$ .

The palatal  $\exists$   $\hat{n}$  is in some instances substituted for  $\exists \hat{n}$   $\check{j}$  (= Sindhī  $\exists \hat{n}$   $\check{j}$ ), as  $\overleftarrow{H}$   $\exists \hat{n}$  minu, marrow, Sansk.  $\overleftarrow{H}$   $\exists \hat{n}$ ; but besides  $\overleftarrow{H}$   $\exists \hat{n}$  the form  $\overleftarrow{H}$   $\exists \hat{n}$  mi $\check{j}$   $\check{n}$ , is also in use. Similarly  $\exists \hat{n}$  in may supplant  $\overleftarrow{u}$  nn, as:  $\overleftarrow{u}$  nn pun $\check{n}$ , virtuous, Prāk.  $\overleftarrow{u}$  nn, Sansk.  $\overleftarrow{u}$  nn, Sansk.  $\overleftarrow{u}$  nn, Sansk. nn nn sunnn, empty, Prāk. nn nn Sansk. nn nn nn sunnn nn sunnn sunnn nn sunnn sunnn

A single H m in the midst of a word is now and then elided, as: सांई sañ, lord, Sansk. स्वामी (= स्वा-मिन्); but the form सामी sāmī has likewise been preserved.

म m is further elided in the affixes मन (= इमन्) and मय, as: अञ्चािण achāṇe, whiteness, from अञ्चा achō, white; लोहांओं lōhãō, made of iron; further in the affix मन्, as: भयेनु bharyatu, a carrier of burden, from भरी, a load. These forms we shall explain further on in the formation of themes.

§. 10.

5) The semi-vowels $\mathbf{z}$ y, and $\mathbf{z}$ v.

1) In Prākrit य y has lost its hold in the midst of a word; it is either dissolved into the vowel i, or changed to  $\overline{\mathbf{J}}$  j, or dropped altogether. In Sindhī on the contrary a may keep its place in the midst of a word; it is even frequently inserted, to avoid a hiatus, as: आयो āyō, come, भर्यो bharyō, filled, though these forms may also be written and pronounced: সাহস্তা ā-i-ō, bhar-i-ō, which is frequently done in poëtry, to gain a syllable. The cases, where A has been dropped altogether in Sindhī, are rare, as: वाउ vā-u, wind, Prāk. already वाऊ, Sansk. वायु; य is frequently contracted, as: नेषु nēṇu, eye, Prāk. णञ्जणं, Sansk. नयनं; at the end of a word the elision of u is more common, as: any višu, world, Sansk. au. After the precedent of the Prākrit य is exchanged for ज in cases like the following: सेज sēja, bed, Prāk. सेज्जा, Sansk. शय्या; पीज़ू pīju, draught, Sansk. पेयं etc.

as a sign of the passive verb is in Sindhī, as already in Prākrit, always changed to $\foralle{\emptys}$, a method, by which the Sindhī has gained a regular passive voice, whereas all the kindred dialects are compelled to make up the passive by compositions; e. g. sehau disijaņu, to be seen, active seen, disaņu, to see, Hindī देखा जाना etc.

2) q v is, after the analogy of q, either preserved or dissolved into u; but if the laws of euphony require it, it is again reinstated between two vowels, and very rarely dropped altogether; e. g. जीउ jīu, life, formative जीव jīva (instead of जीअ jīa), Prāk. जीअं, Sansk. जीव: देवी devī, goddess; on the other hand देख deu, a demon, formative देव dēva; पवन pavanu, wind, Prāk. पच्या, Sansk. 494. It is also now and then totally elided; as: जिञ्जण jianu, to live; ड्रीह तैंnu, day, Prāk. दिञ्जहो, Sansk. दिवस, especially when compounded with another consonant, as we shall see hereafter. It may also be contracted, as: पूर्ण pūṇu, to fall, instead of पवसु; चूर्ण čūnu, to say, instead of चवण. In the prefix अव it may also be contracted to आ au, as: श्रीसार ausāru or अवसार avasāru, want of rain; श्रीतार autāru or ञ्चनार avatāru, an Avatār.

§. 11.

- 6) The liquidae I r and I; the sibilant H s and the spiritus 天 h.
- 1) र r and ल l are not elided in Sindhī, but keep their respective places; ल is frequently exchanged for र in Sindhī, as: केलो kēlō or केरो kērō, name of a flower; वुर्वुली burbulī, a nightingale, from the Persian بُنْنِر; सिञ्जार siāru, a jackal, Hindī सिञ्जाल, Sansk. शुगाल;

डुबिरो dubirō, weak, instead of: डुबिलो dubilō, which is also in use, Sansk. दुबल; सराह sarāha, praise, Prāk. सलाहा, Sansk. खाघा. The only example, in which र has been changed to ज = ज़ is पुज्या pujaņu, to be accomplished (Hindī likewise पूज्ना) from the Sansk. पूर्ण.

2) The sibilant  $\mathbf{H}$  (be it original or a derivative from  $\mathbf{V}$  and  $\mathbf{V}$ ) either keeps its place or is changed to  $\mathbf{E}$ , as:  $\mathbf{C}\mathbf{H}$  dēsu, country, more generally:  $\mathbf{E}\mathbf{E}$  dēhu, Sansk.  $\mathbf{C}\mathbf{V}$ ;  $\mathbf{H}\mathbf{H}$  māsu, flesh, or  $\mathbf{H}\mathbf{E}$  māhu, Sansk.  $\mathbf{H}\mathbf{H}$ .

In the case of tin hanju or tin hanjhu, a wild goose, original H has been exchanged for n or n (in Hindī tin or tin), Sansk. tin. Similarly tin hanja or tin hanjha, tear, Sansk. n Prāk. n (initial h being in Sindhī of a euphonic nature in this case); in the same way the Sindhī demonstrative pronoun tin ijhō seems to have sprung from tin tin tin

3) ह h remains unaltered in Sindhī; in some instances however it is dropped for euphony's sake, as:

साहो sarahō, joyful, Sansk. सहसे (= सहसो = सह-रहो = साहो) साज sā-ū or साहू sāhū, the same as:

साधु or साधू honest.

Remark. The final consonants, their respective changes and permutations we may here as well pass over, as the modern Indian vernaculars have already so much receded from the old Prākrit, that partly quite new formations have been introduced, which preclude any nearer comparison with the Prākrit. The particular changes or elisions, to which the final consonants are subject in Sindhī, we shall supply in their proper places.

§. 12.

7) Compound consonants.

For a thorough insight into the nature of the North Indian vernaculars this point is of the greatest importance; for thus only we can trace out the changes, which the Sanskrit has undergone in the mouth of the common people, if we follow up the laws, according to which the Sanskrit sounds have been decomposed into the Prākrit and its modern daughters, or weakened at least to such a degree, that they are now scarcely recognisable. We can perceive a principle pervading this process of decomposition similar to that, by which out of the old Latin the modern Romanic tongues have been derived, and the mutual congruity is often surprising.

We meet here again with the same principle, which we have seen operating in the decomposition of the vowels and the single consonants. The effeminacy of pronunciation, which absorbs every hard and rough sound, and which consequently rather bears up with vowels, though they may form a displeasing hiatus, than with consonants, which are elided wherever possible, can in a far less degree endure compound consonants. All means are therefore employed, either to smooth them down or to assimilate them, in order to adjust them for a Prākrit mouth, a consonant compounded of letters of different vargas being incompatible with Prākrit rules of cuphony. It is understood, that in such an idiom a conjunction of three letters is quite out of question; the utmost which the Prakrit can endure, is the same letter doubled, as 3 kk, 3 tt etc.; I and E alone cannot be doubled.

Another means, to do away with a compound consonant, is to dissolve the same into its component parts by the insertion of a vowel, a method, to which recourse is had very frequently in Prākrit and the modern vernaculars.

But even such a doubled consonant is as yet thought too hard; we perceive therefore already a tendency, as well in the old Prākrit as in its daughters, to clear away the doubling of a consonant by prolonging the preceding vowel, to restore thereby again the quantity of the syllable, as: आगि बहुe, fire, Prāk. अगि, Sansk. अगि, Hindī आग; Hindī भीत wall, Sindhī भिति,

A) Assimilation of the first four consonants of the five vargas.

These are the following:

 有 k, 複 kh;
 月 g, 星 gh.

 石 č, 致 čh;
 丙 j, 天 jh.

 乙 t, 乙 th;
 克 d, 젾 dh.

 币 t, 型 th;
 克 d, 毡 dh.

 ૫ p, 坼 ph;
 ෧ b, भ bh.

The ground-law of the Prakrit is this: when two consonants form a compound, the former must give way to the latter, by being assimilated to the same; thereby originates the only conjunction of consonants, which is suffered in Prākrit, the doubling of the same consonant. In the dental class this doubling of a consonant does not prevent it from passing over into the cerebral class; in the other vargas the transition of a so doubled consonant to another varga is rare, as the consonant gains more strength by being doubled. The only example of such a transition to another varga सर्वेग् sarvağu, omniscient, Prāk. सर्वेज्ज, Sansk. सर्वेज, where the doubled palatal has been changed into a double guttural ( $\mathbf{I} = \mathbf{II}$ ), a transition, which is natural enough in a single consonant, but which is very seldom to be met with in a doubled consonant. Hun saghanu, to be able, Prāk. Havilh, Sansk. valh (Hindī सन्ता), and perhaps a few others, which may have escaped my notice.

On the whole the Sindhī, as well as the kindred dialects, agrees with this ground-law of the Prākrit¹), without making it an immutable rule of its proceedings: for it may also assimilate the following consonant to the preceding. In many instances the Sindhī is more original, than the Prākrit, by preserving such like conjunctions of consonants, as are usual in Sanskrit.

Examples of assimilation.

मुतो sutō, asleep, Prāk. मुत्तो, Sansk. मुप्त; उपनो upanō, created, Prāk. उप्पार्ग, Sansk. उत्पन्न; भतु bhatu, boiled rice, Prāk. भत्त, Sansk. भत्त (Hindī भात, by prolonging the preceding vowel); लघो ladhō, received, Prāk. लड, Sansk. लब्ध. But on the other hand: कुबो kubō, hump-backed, Prāk. खुज्जो, Sansk. कुब.

But an original compound consonant may also be preserved unaltered in Sindhī, as: शब्दु šabdu, word, Prāk. सह, Sansk. शब्द; मुक्तो, mukto, free, Prāk. मुत्त, Sansk. मुक्त

It depends however more or less on the option of the speaker, if he will pronounce a compound consonant as such, or separate the same by the insertion of a vowel, as: neg šabdu, or neg šabidu, the inserted i being pronounced so rapidly, that it is scarcely perceptible. The Musalmāns therefore, when writing with Arabic letters, never place the sign jazm (a) above a consonant, destitute of a vowel, but always add the kasr, which is nearly equal to jazm, it being scarcely heard at all in pronunciation. The next vowel, thus inserted, is usually i (kasr), but a or u may also be employed, according to euphony or the sequence of vowels, as: भग्त bhagatu, a worshipper, Sansk. भक्त; सग्ति sagate, power, Sansk. सितार्षे (Hindī सकत् f.).

<sup>1)</sup> It must be stated here, that according to the common method of writing the Sindhī, a double consonant is not expressed generally, but only in such instances, where two words, written else in the same way, are to be distinguished, as in the same way, are to be distinguished, as in the same way, sindhī-Grammar.

§. 14.

B) Assimilation of the nasals.

a) A nasal, preceding a consonant, generally keeps its place as: ऋंतु antu, end, Sansk. ऋना. A preceding nasal may be dropped altogether, if the preceding vowel happen to be a long one, as: मामु māsu, flesh, Sansk. मांसं; गाड़ी gāḍō, a cart, Sansk. गन्ती (Hindī गाड़ी), the doubled consonant being cleared away in the latter instance by the prolongation of the preceding vowel.

The compound न्य nm is severed by the insertion of a vowel, as: जनम् janamu, birth, Sansk. जन्म.

b) In a compound consonant the following nasal is assimilated to the preceding consonant, as: স্থানি āge, fire, Prāk. স্থানি, Sansk. স্থানি; ন্তন্ন lagō, applied, Prāk. ন্তন্ন, Sansk. ন্তন্ন; মন্ন bhagō, broken, Sansk. মন.

The compound consonant however may also remain unaltered, or be taken asunder by the insertion of a vowel, as: रानु ratnu or रानु ratanu, jewel; मुज़ाणु jujānu, wise, Prāk. मुज़, Sansk. मुज़; मुपनो supanō, dream, Sansk. स्वप्न.

The nasal may also be pushed forward, to escape being assimilated: as: नंगो nangō, naked, Prāk. नगो, Sansk. नग.

On the reverse a following nasal may also assimilate a preceding consonant, as: सइन sa-ina, hint, Sansk. संज्ञा; राणी rāṇī, queen, Sansk. राज्ञी. The nasal may also assimilate a preceding consonant in such a wise, that it draws the same over at the same time to its own varga. The only example of such an assimilation (if it be not to be explained in some other way) is the reflexive pronoun un pāṇa, self, Prāk. MUN, Sansk. MAN; in Hindī we have the form MU, which has sprung from MU, instead of MA (= MAN); compare on this head: Lassen §. 67.

c) The nasals may assimilate a preceding or following semi-vowel, as: पुत्री puńī, virtuous, Prāk. पुरास, Sansk. पुरास; सुत्री suńō, empty, Prāk. सुरास, Sansk. शूराय; उन्न unna, wool, Sansk. उर्स; चनासी ča-umāsō, the rainy season, Sansk. चतुमीस.

On the other hand notice पूरो pūrō, full, Sansk. पूर्ण; चूह čūru, pulverized, Sansk. चूर्ण, where the semi-vowel r has assimilated the nasal, r being stronger in sound, than n.

म mr in the Sanskrit आम āmra, is changed in Sindhī to mb, as: अंबु ambu, mangoe, Prāk. अस (Hindī आम्); but in the case of the Sindhī word ट्रामो trāmo, copper, Sansk. ताम, Prāk. तस (Hindī तांबा or तामा) the semi-vowel r has been pushed forward to t = t, as r may easily hold its place in conjunction with a dental or cerebral.

च mb is assimilated to mm, as: निमु nimu (= nimmu) a lime-tree, Sansk. निम; स ml is taken asunder, after the analogy of the Prākrit, as: मिल्यु milaņu, to be obtained, Prāk. मिलाग, Sansk. से, Hindī likewise मिल्ना.

C) Assimilation of the semi-vowels.

a) The semi-vowel 4 y.

a) If the semi-vowel 4 happen to be joined to a preceding consonant, it is assimilated to the same, as:

- जोगु jögu, fit, Prāk. जोगग, Sansk. योग्य, Hindī जोग्; वाघु vāghu, a tiger, Sansk. व्याघ्र; वद्गु va-isu, a Vaishya, Sansk. वैश्य (Hindī बेम्). It may, however, also hold its place, as: वाक्यु vākyu, a sentence, Sansk. वाक्य, though this is very rarely the case.
- β) 4, when compounded with a preceding  $\mathbf{t}$ , is elided, as:  $\mathbf{n}$  turī, a small trumpet, Prāk.  $\mathbf{n}$ , Sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$  ti turī, firmness, Prāk. ti , Sansk. ti ; ti dhīra, firmness, Prāk. ti , Sansk. ti ; ti , Sansk. tru, sense of honor, Sansk. ti , Hindī tru, But a may also be preserved by being changed to  $\mathbf{n}$ , as: ti  $\mathbf{n}$  dhīrju, the same as: ti; ti  $\mathbf{n}$  sūriju, the sun, Prāk. ti or  $\mathbf{n}$ , Sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$  ti  $\mathbf{n}$  sūriju, wonderful, Prāk. tru  $\mathbf{n}$  sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$  sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$
- $\gamma$ ) 4 joined to a preceding dental is either simply dropped, as: नितु nitu, always, Prāk. निज्ञ, Sansk. नित्य; आदित āditu, the sun, Sansk. आदित्य, or it may also, though rarely, be preserved, as: मत्त्रां mathyã, falsely, Prāk. मिद्धा, Sansk. मिथ्या. But the more usual way is that 4, being first assimilated to a preceding dental, draws the same over to its own (i. e. palatal) class, so that त्य is changed to च, थ्य to च्छ, द्य to ज्ज and ध्य to 35 (for which double consonants, as remarked already, the simple bases are only written in Sindhī); e. g. विज़ा vijā, science (ज़ = जा), Prāk. बिजा, Sansk. वि-द्या; अज़ aju, to-day, Sansk. अद्य (Hindī आज्); खाज़ khāju, food, Sansk. खाद्यं; मंद्रू, manjhu, the midst, Prāk. मज्ज्ञो, Sansk. मध्य; बृज्गु bajhaņu, to be bound, Sansk. बध्य; वार्ज्ञो vājhō, a Hindū schoolmaster, Sansk. उपाध्याय; हचा hačā, murder, Sansk. हत्या.
- ठ) य joined to a preceding ह is changed to रू jh, as: गुरुो gujhō, concealed, Prāk. गुरुगुन्नो, Sansk. गुह्मक.
- s) 4 is assimilated to a preceding 3, but final 3, instead of being doubled in consequence thereof, is aspirated, e. g. कल्ह kalha, yerterday, Prāk. कल्ल, Sansk. कल्यं (Hindī कल्); मुल्ह mulhu, price, Sansk. मूल्य; in the midst of a word य is simply assimilated to उ (the doubling not being expressed in Sindhī), as: पलगुं palangu, a bedstead, Sansk. पर्यङ्ग (r being exchanged for l); प-लाणु palāṇu, a pack-saddle, Prāk. पञ्चाण, Sansk. पर्याण.

b) The semi-vowel \(\mathbf{\cei}\) r.

a) र is assimilated to a preceding or following consonant, as: आगु agu, the front, Prāk. आगो, Sansk. अयः गूजरी gūjarī, name of a Rāginī, Sansk. गुजरी; गुजरा gajanu, to thunder, Sansk. गजेन (but Hindī गरज्ना); कमु kamu (= kammu), business, Prāk. कमो, Sansk. कमेन (Hindī काम); मुंढी mundhī, head, Sansk. मुईन; मपु sapu, snake, Sansk. सपे; सिघो sighō, quick, Sansk. शीघे (Hindī शीघर); चकी čakī, a mill, Sansk. चक; निभाग nibhāgu, misfortune, Sansk. निभाग.

On the other hand I, preceding or following a consonant, may just as easily hold its place, without being assimilated, as: चर्ची čarčō, silly talk, Sansk. चर्चा; प्री prī, friend, Sansk. प्रिय; पर्भ parbhu, a festival, Sansk. पर्व (व = ब, and ब aspirated by the influence of I); गर्व garbu, pride, Sansk. गर्व; युक्क šukru, Friday, Sansk. युक्क; मुगु surgu, heaven, Sansk. स्वगै; धर्म dharmu, religion, Prāk. धरम, Sansk. धर्म.

Very frequently such a compound is again dissolved into its constituent parts by the insertion of a vowel, as: पिरी pirī, friend, or प्री prī; पिर्मात piribhāte, break of day, Sansk. प्रभात; or r is transposed for euphony's sake, as: पतापु partāpu, splendour, Sansk. प्रताप; पतु partu, leaf (of a book), Sansk. पन; इच्चि drighō, long, Prāk. दिग्च, Sansk. दोचे; किति kirte, trade, कितु kirtu, action, Sansk. कृति and कृत; ट्रकु traku, a spinning wheel, Sansk. तके.

It very rarely happens, that r is totally elided in a compound, as: arg vāghu, tiger, Sansk. arg; tifa rāte, night, Sansk. tifa (Prāk. tal by ejection of ā); his bhāu, brother, Sansk. ara. The ejection of r in these and such like examples is caused by the preceding long vowel, which precludes the possibility of assimilating the compound consonant, or by the consonant, with which r forms a conjunction, being initial. In such cases, as tal, the Prākrit has preferred to drop the long vowel, in order to make room for assimilation.

B) When compounded with a preceding dental, r is in most cases assimilated to the same in Prākrit, though it may also keep its place; in Sindhī on the other hand r is, when following a dental, mostly preserved, and the assimilation takes place only in the dialect of Lar (Lower Sindh), whereas in the dialect of the Upper country (Sirō) the original compound is preserved, the dental only being commonly changed to a cerebral (or even to an aspirated cerebral, by the influence of r); e. g. yz puțru, son, Prāk. पुत्त, Sansk. पुत्र (in Lāṛ: पुटू puțțu, according to the analogy of the Prākrit); मिटू mitru, friend, Prāk. मित्र, Sansk. मित्र (in Lāṛ: मिट्ट miṭṭu); चंदु čandru, the moon, Prāk. चन्द, Sansk. चन्द्र; खेटू khēṭru, a field, Sansk. स्रोन; मंट्र manṭru (or with transiton to the media) His mandru, an incantation, Sansk. मन्त्र; ट्रे ṭrē, three, Sansk. चि; डुढ़ू ḍaḍhru, or डुढु ḍadhu, a cutaneous disease, Sansk. दृद्, द्वापणु dhrāpaņu, to be satiated, Sansk तपेस (by transition of the tenuis into the media). In those adverbs, which are compounded with the adverbial affix 3, 3 is, after the precedent of the Prākrit, changed in Sindhī to u, as: किय kithē, where; जिय jithē, in which place; तिय tithe, in that place etc.

R, when preceding a dental, may likewise be assimilated to the same, as: कत्या katanu, to spin, Sansk. कर्तनः कत्य katara, scissors, Sansk. कर्तरा; वटि vatĕ, a wig, Sansk. वर्तिका; खड khadā, a pit, Prāk. गड़ो, Sansk. गते. On the other hand the compound may also be retained unaltered, as: अधांगु ardhāngu, palsey, Sansk. अधाङ्गः; अधु arthu, object, Sansk. अधः, तीथु tīrthu, a holy bathing-place, Sansk. तीथ; or the compound may again be dissolved by the insertion of a vowel, as: मूरित mūrate, image, Sansk. मूति; कीरित kīrate, glory, Sansk. कीरित, Prāk. किति; तीर्थ tīrathu = तीथु.

- γ) a rv is either assimilated, as: મામુ sabhu, all, Sansk. માં, Hindī મામ (the aspiration of b being caused in Sindhī by the influence of elided r); or the compound may be retained unaltered, as, મામાનિ sarvasagate, omnipotent; or the compound may be dissolved again by the insertion of a vowel, as: પૂર્ય pūrabu, the east, Sansk. પૂર્ય.
- b) In the compound श्र sir the semi-vowel r may either be assimilated, as, मुश्रो suō, heard, Prāk. मुद्रो (= मुत्रो), Sansk. श्रुत; समु sasu, mother-in-law, Sansk. श्रुश्च; or, the compound may be retained, as: श्री sirī, prosperity; or more commonly, the compound is dissolved by the insertion of a vowel, as सिराधु sirādhu, funeral obsequies, Sansk. श्राह्म (Hindī श्राह्म). The Sanskrit श्रुश्च, tear, Prāk. already श्रंमु (instead of श्राह्म) has become in Hindī श्राम्; the Sindhī form is हंज hanja or हंग्र hanjha (with initial euphonic h), s being changed in this instance to ज or रू: Panjābī likewise anjhu.

The same holds good with reference to the compound

स्र sr, as: सहसु sahasu, thousand, Prāk. सहस्स, Sansk. सहस्र.

The compound  $\hat{y}$  rš and  $\hat{y}$  rš are assimilated in Sindhī as well as in Prākrit, as:  $\hat{z}$  and  $\hat{y}$  to rain, Sansk.  $\hat{z}$  a $\hat{y}$ ;  $\hat{y}$  (Hindī  $\hat{y}$ );  $\hat{y}$  (Hindī  $\hat{y}$ );  $\hat{y}$  are preserved (of course with transition of  $\hat{y}$  and  $\hat{y}$  to  $\hat{y}$ ), as:  $\hat{z}$  darsanu, interview, Sansk.  $\hat{z}$  and  $\hat{y}$  to  $\hat{y}$  and  $\hat{y}$  to wait, Sansk.  $\hat{z}$  and  $\hat{y}$  the compound  $\hat{y}$  rš may also be dissolved into  $\hat{y}$ , and this again into  $\hat{y}$ , as:  $\hat{y}$  as:  $\hat{y}$  as:  $\hat{y}$  as:  $\hat{y}$  and  $\hat{y}$  the compound  $\hat{y}$  rš may also be dissolved into  $\hat{y}$ , and this again into  $\hat{y}$ , as:  $\hat{y}$  as:  $\hat{y}$  as:  $\hat{y}$  as:  $\hat{y}$  as:  $\hat{y}$  and  $\hat{y}$  as:  $\hat{y}$  and  $\hat{y}$  as:

c) The semi-vowel $\overline{c}$ l.

- a) ल forming a compound with another consonant at the beginning of a word, is severed from the same by the insertion of a vowel, as: सराह sarāha, praise, Prāk. सलाहा, Sansk. ख्राधा (r = 1 in Sindhī); किल्मु kilēsu, fatigue, Sansk. क्रेश (Hindī कलेम्); सलोकु salōku, a Slōka, Sansk. ख्रोक.
- β) In the midst of a word  $\overline{\mathcal{O}}$  is assimilated to any consonant, save  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$ ,  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$  and  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$ , as:  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$  bakaru, vegetables, Prāk.  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$  Sansk.  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$  or it is severed again from the compound by the insertion of a vowel, as:  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$  hot wind, Prāk.  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$  Sansk.  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$ , the initial vowel  $\overline{\mathcal{A}}$  being thrown back to serve in place of an inserted vowel.

d) The semi-vowel ৰ v.

a) व, joined to a preceding consonant at the beginning of a word, is either dissolved into u, as: मुगू surgu, heaven, Sansk. स्वर्ग; दुआर duāru, door, Prāk. दुआरो, Sansk. हार; मुआउ suāu, taste, Sansk. स्वाद; or it is totally elided (i. e. assimilated to the preceding consonant) as: जलण jalaņu, to burn, Sansk. ज्वलन; सगू sargu (besides मुगू), heaven, Sansk. स्वर्ग; साई sāī, lord, or सामी sāmī, Prāk. सामि, Sansk. स्वामिन; स-हरा sahurō, father-in-law, Sansk. शशु; समु sasu, motherin-law, Sansk. शशु. व v may also be severed from the compound by the insertion of a vowel (a or u), as: सवाइ savāḍu, taste, flavour (besides मुश्राउ), Sansk. स्वाद; द्वार duvāru, door (besides दुश्रार). व very rarely assimilates a preceding consonant, as: व ba, two, Sansk. इ (= vva = bba = b̄).

β) ব v being joined to a preceding consonant in the midst of a word, is assimilated to the same, as: um pakō (= pakkō) cooked, Prāk. um, Sansk. um; κατα, satu, strength, Prāk. सπ, Sansk. सπ.

In the abstract affix  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$ ,  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$ , the dental on the other hand is assimilated to the semi-vowel  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$ , which latter is first changed to the labial  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$ , and then to the corresponding tenuis  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$ , so that we have in Sindhī the forms  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$  pa,  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$  pō,  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$  paṇu or  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$  paṇō, as:  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{p}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$   $\overline{\mathbf{p}}$   $\overline{\mathbf$

The regular form of assimilation however is also in use, but only in a few examples;  $\overline{\phantom{a}}$  is in this way assimilated to  $\overline{\phantom{a}}$  tt =  $\overline{\phantom{a}}$  tt, and the double consonant again cleared away by the prolongation of the preceding vowel, as:  $\overline{\phantom{a}}$  chōkirāṭu, time of youth, from  $\overline{\phantom{a}}$   $\overline{\phantom{a}}$  chōkaru, a boy.

The semi-vowel may also be dissolved into u, as: परमेमुह paramēsuru, supreme lord = God, Prāk. already परमेमुर, Sansk. परमेश्वर; or it may be retained, as: दा-नेस्वरी dānēsvarī, liberal, besides: दानेमुरी dānēsurī.

- D) Assimilation of the sibilants.
- a) The palatal sibilant v š.
- a) ম š, when preceded by ব č and 3 čh, is assimilated to them, as: স্বুৰ্ ačurju, wonderful, Prāk.

- अछिरिञ्ज, Sansk. आश्चर्ये (long ā being shortened in Prākrit and Sindhī, and in compensation thereof the following consonant doubled, to restore again the quantity of the syllable); श्रानिचर šaničaru, Saturday, Sansk. श्राने-श्चर (Hindī सनीचर).
- β) The compound ৰ čč (which however is rendered in Sindhī, as all double consonants, by its simple base) arising from the assimilation of ষ, is, after the analogy of the Prākrit, frequently aspirated in Sindhī, on account of the inherent tendency of the sibilant towards aspiration (મ = ξ), as: বিহু vičhū, scorpion, Prāk. নিচ্ছুসা, Sansk. বৃষ্ণিক; पহুনাও, pačhutāu, repentance, Sansk. પશાસાપ, final પ being changed (by b = v) in Sindhī to u.
- γ) श followed by म, assimilates the same, as: एसी rasī (= rassī), a rope, Prāk. एसि, Sansk. एइम, but not necessarily; for: कश्मीरु kašmīru, Kashmīr.
- a) The compound क्ल šk (of क्ल I have hitherto not met any instances) is assimilated in Sindhī to ल (= क्र), and not to क्ल kkh, as in Prākrit; e. g. डुलालु dukālu, famine, Sansk. दुक्लाल; निकमी nikamī, useless, Sansk. निक्लमे; मुलो sukō, dry, Sansk. गुक्ल (Hindī, as in Prākrit, मुला).
- β) The compounds  $\mathbf{E}$  št and  $\mathbf{E}$  šth, are assimilated in Sindhī to tth, as: [st] dithō, seen, Prāk.  $\mathbf{c}$ , Sansk.  $\mathbf{e}$ ;  $\mathbf{n}$  gōthu, a village, Prāk.  $\mathbf{n}$ , Sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$  sitharu, obstinate, Prāk.  $\mathbf{n}$  sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$  sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$  mithō, sweet, Sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$   $\mathbf{n}$  sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$   $\mathbf{n}$   $\mathbf{n}$  mithō, sweet, Sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$   $\mathbf{n}$   $\mathbf{n}$   $\mathbf{n}$  sansk.  $\mathbf{n}$   $\mathbf$

The compound is also retained unaltered, as: §§ duṣṭu, bad; but this is only done by Brāhmans, who understand Sanskrit; the common people ignore it completely.

The cerebral 3, which has sprung from 3 or 3 by assimilation, may also pass into its corresponding media 3 dh, and this again to 5 rh, e. g. 3 kōrhu, leprosy, Sansk. 3 (the preceding vowel u having been lengthened in Sindhī to ō, to clear away the double consonant tth or ddh).

γ) The compounds દપ šp, દપ šph are assimilated to फ in Sindhī, as: वाफ bapha, steam, Prāk. वस्फो, Sansk. वाद्य (Hindī वाफ्, and even with aspiration of व: भाफ).

In compound words EU is simply assimilated to U p (= pp) as: निप्रो nipuṭrō, without a son, Sansk. निष्प.

- ε) The compound ६य šy (and ६व šv) is in Prākrit assimilated to सा ss, but in Sindhī to ए kh (= kkh) as: सिंखु sikhu, a disciple = Sikh, Sansk. शिष्य.
  - c) The dental-sibilant # s.
- a) The compound स्क sk is assimilated in Prākrit to ख kh, in Sindhī however to क k, as: कंधु kandhu, shoulder, Prāk. खंधो (खंदो), Sansk. स्कन्द (Hindī कंध्).
- β) The compounds स्त st and स्थ sth are assimilated to  $\mathbf{u}$  (= tth) and  $\mathbf{n}$  ts to  $\mathbf{v}$  (= ččh), as:  $\mathbf{u}$  thanu, woman's milk, Sansk. स्तन;  $\mathbf{u}$  thiō, become, Sansk. स्थित;  $\mathbf{u}$  thambhu, post (Prākrit on the other hand षम्भो), Sansk. स्तम्भ; वषु vathu, thing, Sansk. वसु; हथु hathu, hand, Prāk. हत्यो, Sansk. हस्त (Hindī हाथ); थागो thaṇō, place, Sansk. स्थान; अथ atha, is, Prāk. अत्थि, Sansk. अस्ति; विद्य vačhe, a buffalo calf, Prāk. वद्धो, Sansk. वस.

The compound t st however may also, instead of being assimilated, be dissolved into its constituent parts by the insertion of a vowel, and when the compound happens to be initial, by prefixing a vowel, as: x astute, praise, Prāk. y$, Sansk. t, $\text{this}$ istirī, woman, Sansk. t.

γ) स्प sp is assimilated to  $\mathbf{U} (= \mathrm{pp})$ , स्फ sph to  $\mathbf{W} (= \mathrm{pph})$ ,  $\mathbf{W}$  ps to  $\mathbf{U} (= \mathrm{pp})$  respectively as: पुरुषु phuṭaṇu, to be broken, Sansk. स्पुर; पुर्ती phuṛtī, activity, Sansk. स्पूर्ति; लपी lapī, a dish of coarse wheaten flour, Sansk. लिपाता; but  $\mathbf{W}$  may also remain unassimilated, as: लपी.

In compound words स्प sp may be preserved, as: विस्पित, vispate, Thursday, Sansk. वृहस्पित; or the compound, especially at the beginning of a word, may be dissolved into its constituent parts, as: पासु pārasu, the philosopher's stone, Sansk. स्पर्श (मिश्र), Hindī likewise पारम्.

- ठ) The compound स sn, when beginning a word, is either dissolved into its consistuent parts by the insertion of a vowel, as: सनान sanānu, bathing, Sansk. सान; सनेहो sanēhō, a message of love, Sansk. सिंह; or the preceding स is cast off altogether, as: नीह nīhu, love, Sansk. सिंह (Hindī नेह), Prāk. also ऐसी; नुह nuhu, daughter-in-law, Prāk. गोगह, Sansk. सुवा.
- s) The compound स sm is assimilated to स s (= ss) as: विसाई visāī, stupor, Sansk. विस्मय; or dissolved again by the insertion of a vowel, as: सुमर्गु sumaraņu, to remember, Sansk. सृ; विसामगु visāmaņu, to be stunned, Sansk. विस्मिश् (विस्मय, Prāk. विम्ह्यो); or s is changed to h and placed after म (similarly to दम), as Prākrit मह = सा, in the pronominal forms तुम्हे, असो (cf. Lassen p. 331, 4; p. 329, 5), In Sindhī the म of the conjunct मह is also changed to v, as तर्व्हीं tavhī, you, instead of तुम्हीं tumhī.

ζ) The compound  $\[ \mathbf{z} \]$  sy is assimilated to  $\[ \mathbf{H} \]$  s (= ss) and thence farther to  $\[ \mathbf{E} \]$  h, as:  $\[ \mathbf{H} \]$  fill fully etc., which must have sprung from an original form  $\[ \mathbf{H} \]$  etc., Prāk. already  $\[ \mathbf{H} \]$  f,  $\[ \mathbf{J} \]$  (thence also the other Prākrit forms  $\[ \mathbf{H} \]$  so,  $\[ \mathbf{J} \]$  etc.,  $\[ \mathbf{J} \]$

d) The compound & kš.

This compound letter is assimilated in Sindhī:

α) Το ख kh (= kkh), as: ऋखि akhe, eye, Sansk. ऋछि; खोर khīru, milk, Sansk. श्रीर; खारो khārō, brackish, Sansk. श्रार; खेतु khetu, field, Sansk. श्राद; खिना khimā, patience, Sansk. श्राना; खी khī, wellfare, Sansk. श्रेम; रखणु rakhaṇu, to keep, Sansk. रक्षण; खां-दि khande, patience, Sansk. श्रान्त.

All these instances are against Prākrit usage, according to which x ought to have been assimilated to x čh, though v is also admissible in Prākrit, and prove distinctly, that the Sindhī has followed its own course, independently of the Prākrit.

β) स is also assimilated to छ čh, after the precedent of the Prākrit, as: रिकु ričhu, a bear, Sansk. सुरा; छुरी čhurī, a knife, Sansk. सुरा; छिनणु čhinaņu, to pluck, Sansk. सिण; लह्या lačhaņu, sign, Sansk. स्राण but लख्या lakhaņu is also in use in Sindhī.

According to Prākrit rule every consonant (the nasal n excepted), which is joined to \(\mathbb{Z}\), must be dropped; but the Sindhī so far deviates from the Prākrit, that it separates any such consonant by the insertion of a vowel, as: Prāk. रुखी, but Sindhī रुखिमी lachimī, the wife of Vishnu, Hindī likewise रुखमी, Sansk. रुख्मी. On the other hand the Sindhī assimilates the nasal in the compound ह्या kṣṇ to ख (kh = kṣ), whereas the Prākrit changes the same to एह, as: Sindhī तिखो tikhō (= tikkhō), quick, Prāk. तिग्ह, Sansk. तीहण.

A change of with (= kš) to the spiritus to his found in Hindī, after the analogy of the Prākrit, as: Hindī cifent right (opposed to left), instead of the more common caray, but not in Sindhī, which simply clears away the doubling of the letter in Prākrit by the prolongation of the preceding vowel, as: sitevi dākhinō, right, southerm.

§. 17.

F) The spiritus $\xi$ h.

The spiritus  $\xi$  cannot be assimilated to any other consonant. If therefore  $\xi$  be joined to any other consonant, the compound is again separated into its component parts in the following way:

a) In the compounds ह hn, स hm, ह is put after the nasal, a euphonic transposition, which is already common in Prākrit, as: बाहि bāhe, fire (instead of बाहि bāhe), Prāk. वगही, Sansk. वहि; चिन्हु činhu, mark, Sansk. चिह; the hardened Prāk. form चिन्ध or चेन्ध is not used in Sindhī.

The compound मह (instead of स hm) is in Sindhī, on account of the preponderance of the labial, already exchanged for मा mbh, as: बांभणु bāmbhaṇu, a Brāhman, Prāk. वाहण, Sansk. बाह्यण.

b) U hy is assimilated to प् jh (by transposition: hy = yh = jh), as: गुज़ gujhō, concealed, Prāk. गुज्जाओ, Sansk. गुज्जाओ.

c) ই hv is assimilated to મ in Sindhī (hv = vh = bh), whereas in Prākrit the following semi-vowel is simply elided, as: জিম jibha, tongue, Prāk. जীহা, Sansk. জিহা, (Hindī জীম).

E) Assimilation of three conjunct consonants.

In Sindhī, as well as in Prākrit, a compound, consisting of three consonants, can only then be tolerated, if the first consonant happen to be a nasal: as: is candru, moon, in cantation.

As regards the assimilation of three conjunct consonants the preceding rules come into operation. If no assimilation takes place, the one or the other of the consonants thus joined together, is severed from the rest by the insertion of a vowel, as: wife() šastirī, a Shāstrī, learned in the Shāstras (a usūal title of a Brāhman), from the Sansk. We. In reference to the assimilation itself the following rules are to be observed.

a) If one of the consonants happen to be a semivowel, it is dropped, and the assimilation of the remaining two consonants is effected according to the usual method, as: मराठी marāṭhī, a Marāthī man (or. adj.), Sansk. महाराष्ट्र; अग्यों agyō, the foremost, Sansk. अग्य; पासो pāsō, side, Prāk. पास, Sansk. पार्श्व.

The semi-vowel ય alone, when preceded by a dental, forms an exception to this rule, this compound being changed to the corresponding palatal (see §. 15, γ), as: મંદ્રા sanjhō, evening, Prāk. મંદ્રદા, Sansk. મન્યા.

b) When of three conjunct consonants the two former or the two latter can be assimilated, preference is given to the stronger assimilation, as: How machu, fish, Prāk. How, Sansk. How; in this instance to so (ččh), the assimilation of it being stronger than that of the two #### §. 19.

G) Elision of a double consonant.

The doubling of a consonant renders the same so much stronger, that even a long vowel, preceding it, must give way and is weakened to its corresponding short one. On the other hand a double consonant, as noticed already, may again be rendered simple; but in this case the preceding vowel, to make up for the quantity of the syllable, must be prolonged, as: Tin rate, night, Prak. Tal, Sansk. The kamu (= kammu), business, Prak. Thind on the other hand ann.

It is quite against the genius of the language, to elide totally a double consonant; notwithstanding this some few examples of this kind are to be met with in Sindhī, as: sant duāre, illness, sant, adj. duārī, ill, Prāk. car, Sansk. car; han miō, friend (corroborated already by the Prākrit, which however preserves also the original from han). In these and such like examples the process cannot have been such, that a double consonant is elided at once, but it must first have been reduced to its simple base by the prolongation of the preceding vowel, as: han mitō, instead, of han; from this base has sprung again, according to the usual laws of elision, the form han mīō, in which, against the ordinary process, long ī has been shortened to ĭ, has been shortened to ĭ

In the forms gant and gant, original double be must have been changed to vv (both letters, b and v, being already identical in Prākrit) previous to its elision; but it is quite an extraordinary phenomenon, that the following vowel has been lengthened instead of the preceding one.

Far more easily may one of the compound consonants be elided, when preceded by a long vowel, which renders the assimilation impossible, especially if one of the compound consonants be a semi-vowel, as: बाधु vāghu, a tiger, Sansk. बाध; सामी rāṇī, queen, Sansk. साभी pāsō, side, Sansk. पार्श्व.

H) A double consonant at the beginning of a word.

A compound consonant at the beginning of a word is subject to the same laws of assimilation, as in the midst (or end) of a word. But as a double consonant would not be utterable at the beginning of a word, one of the assimilated, i. e. doubled consonants is simply cast off, so that only the simple base of the consonant remains, as: जल्म jalanu, to burn, instead of: जल्म jjalanu, Sansk. जल्म; वाघु vāghu, tiger, instead, of वाघु vvāghu; क्युं kandhu, shoulder, instead of क्युं kkandhu. But if a word be compounded, the common laws of assimilation are applied (to the second), as:

Those compounds, which are not susceptible of assimilation, are dissolved into their component parts by the insertion of a vowel, as: किल्मु kilēsu, weariness, Prāk. किल्म, Sansk. का; मुमाणु sumaraņu, to remember, Prāk. मुमा, Sansk. सा (सृ); or the first letter of the compound is cast off, which is particularly the case, if this happen to be a sibilant, as: नीह nīhu, love, Prāk. मणह saṇēha, Sansk. सह; but if the sibilant be followed by a semi-vowel, the latter, as the weaker, is dropped, as: साह sāhu, breath, Sansk.

न tr and द dr, which in Sindhī are commonly changed to the corresponding cerebrals, keep their place as well at the beginning as in the midst (or end) of a word, as: ट्रे एंग्ह, three; ह्राख drākha, grape, but Hindī दाख, Sansk. द्राक्षा.

THE SINDHI ALPHABET.

Up to the present time various alphabets have been in use in Sindh, the Muhammadan portion of the community using the Arabic characters, loaded with many dots, to express the sounds peculiar to the Sindhi, and the Hindu population employing different alphabets of their own, which vary very much, according to the locality, in which they are used, though all of them are originally derived from an old Sanskrit alphabet. latter alphabets, which are known in Sindh by the name of the Banya characters, are utterly unfit for literary purposes, as they have become greatly mutilated in the course of time and are very deficient in the vowel and consonant system, so that the Hindū merchants themselves, after a lapse of time, are hardly able to reproduce with accuracy what they have entered in their ledgers. No alphabet suits the Sindhī better, than the Sanskrit alphabet, the Sindhī being a genuine daughter of Sanskrit and Prākrit. But appropriate as the Sanskrit characters are to the Sindhī sounds, they will under the present state of society in Sindh be hardly in their right place, religious prejudices preventing the great majority of the population from using them in their writings. Sindh has been the first Indian country, which has succumbed to the fury of the Moslim invaders, and Hinduism and the culture of Sanskrit literature has been so completely swept away from its borders, that it is now, as has been stated, "a country without castes and Brahmins."

The Muhammadans of Sindh, as soon as they tried to employ their native idiom for literary purposes, detected, that the Arabic system, which had been forced upon them as a necessary consequence of the Islām, was deficient in many sounds, and they endeavoured to make up for this deficiency by dotting the nearest corresponding Arabic letters. The manner, in which they have done this, has not been very satisfactory. They were not led by any system and therefore the emendation, they attempted at, stopped half-way.

In the guttural class the Arabic base  $\mathcal{S}$  (k) was indiscriminately used to express the sounds k, kh; g, gh,  $\bar{g}$ ; the aspiration (kh, gh) was left unnoticed, and for the media g not even the corresponding Persian letter ( $\mathcal{S}$ ) was supplied; the guttural  $\dot{n}$  was expressed by the compound  $\dot{\mathcal{S}}$  (nk).

In the palatal class the aspirate ch was happily distinguished by an additional dot (=  $_{\Xi}$ ), and jh marked likewise; also the peculiar Sindhī  $\bar{j}$  (dy) was not forgotten and marked by  $_{\Xi}$ ; the palatal  $\hat{n}$  (ny) was again expressed by the compound  $\dot{\xi}$ , so that in this class all sounds were provided with distinguishing marks.

In the cerebral class, which is completely wanting in the Arabic system, the bases of the dentals were retained and the dots distributed in such a way, as to distinguish them from the corresponding dentals, viz.:  $\dot{\omega} = \dot{t}$ ;  $\dot{\omega} = \dot{t}$ ;  $\dot{\varphi} = \dot{d}$ ,  $\dot{\varphi} = \dot{d}$ ,  $\dot{\varphi} = \dot{d}$ , a method, which is not without ingenuity; but the cerebral  $\dot{r}$  and the cerebral  $\dot{r}$  were again completely forgotten (i. e. they were expressed by the corresponding dentals  $\dot{r}$  and  $\dot{r}$  and left to the knowledge of the reader.

The dental class did not offer many difficulties; only the aspirates had to be provided with diacritical marks, which was done in the following way: = th, = dh.

The same was the case with the labial class, where the aspirates only were to be pointed out by peculiar marks; but here their skill seems to have left them. In order to express ph, refuge was taken to the peculiar Arabic and Persian letter : (f), which was provided with two additional dots = :, bh having been expressed already by :; the peculiar Sindhī b was dexterously rendered by :.

The Sindhīs had in this undertaking apparently the Sanskrit alphabet before their eyes, where the aspirates are written and treated as one sound. Accordingly they tried to express the aspiration of a letter by additional dots, which overloaded the few Arabic bases with diacritical signs.

The necessity further, to provide marks for the cerebral class, compelled them, to distribute afresh the dots for the dental aspirates, so that the eye finds only with difficulty a resting-place in the confuse mass and position of diacritical marks, as:  $\dot{\mathbf{u}} = \dot{\mathbf{t}}$ ,  $\dot{\mathbf{u}} = \dot{\mathbf{t}}$ ;  $\dot{\mathbf{u}} = \dot{\mathbf{t}}$ ;  $\dot{\mathbf{u}} = \dot{\mathbf{t}}$ ;  $\dot{\mathbf{u}} = \dot{\mathbf{t}}$ .

This attempt to adapt the Arabic characters to the sounds of a Prākrit language is very interesting, though the method applied has followed a wrong track and has not been extended to all the sounds of the language. The way, in which this has been done in Hindūstānī, is far more correct, in fact, the only course, which can be taken in adapting the Arabic letters to an Indian language. The Arabic system knows no as pirates, and consequently the aspiration must be expressed by an additional and h, if the original character of the Arabic alphabet is to be preserved in any way; else a quodlibet will be made out of it, which may be designated by any name but Arabic.

It was therefore soon found, when European scholars began to pay attention to the Sindhī, that the common Sindhī characters would not do for scientific purposes. New characters were in consequence composed by a Bombay civilian and unfortunately introduced into the government schools of Sindh, without being first submitted to the examination of competent scholars.

This new system, instead of striking at the root of the previous confusion, merely endeavoured to make up some deficiencies of the old, while retaining all its errors, so that it cannot even boast of the compactness of the old system.

In the guttural class, where the old system was most deficient, as we have seen, the Persian letter  $\mathcal{S}$  g has been justly taken in, and from the Hindūstānī, the aspirate  $\mathcal{S}$  gh, of which we fully approve. We should now reasonably expect to find the compound  $\mathcal{S}$  kh corresponding to  $\mathcal{S}$  gh; but to our utter surprise we find the old error repeated, and 'kh' again rendered by the simple base  $\mathcal{S}$  k. So it has happened, that all the prints published in this character are disfigured by the letter  $\mathcal{S}$ , which is now used throughout as the simple base for k, whereas it is well known, that  $\mathcal{S}$  is only used at the beginning of a word, when connected with a following letter and in the midst of a word only, when unconnected with the preceding and connected with the following letter, and that it is in no way differing, as regards its pronunciation, from  $\mathcal{S}$ ; as a final letter the shape of  $\mathcal{S}$  has never been seen before.

The guttural n, which in the old system was consequently rendered by in (nk), has been expressed in the new system by in which is quite inappropriate; for the base is not 'g', but 'n', pronounced with the guttural organ, and in the Arabic consonantal system it can only be rendered by a compound letter (in ng). The peculiar Sindhī ḡ is marked if; we have only to point out the inapplicability of two dots beneath in and the frequent confusions, to which it will give rise.

In the palatal class we meet with the same inconsequence; the aspirate the has been taken over from the old system (), whereas for jh the Hindustānī compound has been borrowed. In the other letters of this class only the dots have been differently distributed; j (in the old system marked ) has been expressed by and the palatal n by , which is less to the point than the old , which was as correct as it could be rendered.

In the cerebral class only the dots have been differently arranged as: t = c (old system c), th = c (old system c); d = c (old system the same), dh = c (old system the same), dh = d (old system the same), dh = d (old system the same); the cerebral r, which had not been marked at all in the old system, has been borrowed from the Hindūstānī (j), and the cerebral 'n' is marked by the antiquated method of placing a d above it (d), which is highly inconvenient in writing, and has therefore been justly discarded in Hindūstānī, where formerly the cerebrals used to be marked by the same letter.

In the dental class the old system has been retained unaltered.

In the labial class the base ن was retained for ph, with additional dots (= "; old system"); bh was rendered by ب, as in the old system.

We fully allow, that the old Sindhī system of writing did not answer its purposes, quite abstracted from its deficiency; but instead of emendating the old system by a different distribution of dots and inserting a few Hindūstānī letters, we consider it far more advisable, to adopt the whole Hindūstānī consonantal system, and to mark those sounds, which are peculiar to the Sindhī, by convenient dots.

The Sindhī language is restricted to the comparatively small province of Sindh; we cannot therefore see any reason, why the Hindūstānī alphabet, which is known throughout the length and breadth of India, and which is a compact system in itself, should not be preferred to such a motley composition?

The number of the Indian alphabets should not be augmented, but rather, wherever possible, be restricted, as they only serve as barriers to mutual intercourse. If therefore the old system of writing proves unfit for literary purposes, we consider it for the best, to substitute one universally known, instead of emendating imperfectly a local alphabet, which has no chance to spread beyond its narrow borders.

As under the present circumstances it is not likely, that the Hindū portion of the community will adopt the Hindūstānī alphabet, owing to religious scruples on their side, we have chosen for them the Hindū characters, with some slight deviations from the system employed by Capt. Stack, which were imperatively necessary, and which will be noticed further on. We may say the same of the Hindū alphabet, what has been remarked on the Hindūstānī; it is well known throughout India, and the common vehicle of literature amongst the whole Hindū population. An emendation of the old Banyā characters would have been far more useless, than that of the Arabic system current amongst the Moslims.

This method of computation is called abjad, from the first four letters, which are pronounced as a group. The following technical groups are:

The Arabs have borrowed this whole system from the Hebrews and have therefore also followed the order of the Hebrew alphabet; the first nine letters represent the units 1—9; the nine following the tens, the nine following the hundreds and the last  $\dot{z}$  a thousand.

The order of the Hebrew alphabet goes only as far as  $\omega$  (400); from thence the Arabs have gone their own way, by using those letters, which are peculiar to their own language.

1) The Gutturals.

The gutturals k, g are pronounced in the common manner; their aspirates, kh, gh, as all other aspirates, form, according to the Sanskrit system, one sound, and must therefore be pronounced by a strong breathing of the respective simple base. Peculiar to the Sindhī is the guttural n, which is throughout used as an independent sound (like the english ng in "sing"), and never precedes the letters of its own varga or class. in which case Anusvāra or simple n is employed (see Introduction §. 5). In the Hindi alphabet it is expressed by 3, it being an original Sanskrit sound, but the Arabic system, which knows only one dental n (...), offers great difficulties in this as in other respects. In Hindūstānī an independent guttural n is not to be met with; we have therefore been compelled to circumscribe it by the compound in ng, which comes nearest to it, following therein the track of the old Sindhī alphabet. But one difficulty still will remain, that the guttural simple in can thus not be distinguished from the guttural n preceding a letter of its own varga, as: انگ ( সাজু) anu, body, and نك (अंगु, or more properly: अङ्ग) angu (angu) a limb. In the alphabet, now in use, an attempt has been made, as has been adverted to, to obviate this difficulty (viz.:  $\mathcal{J} = \dot{n}$ ), but we cannot agree, that the problem has been solved satisfactorily, a false base having been chosen for the guttural nasal. Practically the difficulty will be easily surmounted by any careful student, as there are only a few nouns in the language, in which simple guttural n is found.

We subjoin here an alphabetical list of all those words, in which the simple (unconnected) guttural nasal is to be found:

أنگاري m. anarō, Tuesday. آنگاري m. anārō, Tuesday. آنگاري f. anārī, a disease of the gums etc. آنگاريو m. anāryō, a bruise in the sole of the foot; اَنگُرُ n. anaru, coal; m. anuru, a finger's breadth. آنگُر f. ānure, a finger; toe; آنگۇتھۇ m. ananu, courtyard; آنگۇتھۇ m. ānūthō, the thumb; بَهَانگو f. ānūṭhī, a thumb-ring. بَهَانگو m. bhānō, share, and its derivatives, as: بهَانگَاتِتو adj. bhānaitō, in shares; بهَانگِيرو m. bhānērō, a sharer. پهينگُٺو m. phēnaņō, the orbicular excrement of camels (يهينگِنِي f. phēniņī, the orbicular excrement of sheep etc.). جَانگُورو m. jānūrō, the wild Beru fruit; جَانگُورِي f. jānūrī, the wild Beru tree; جنگو adj. čanō, good, and its derivatives. تَانگوَرَنُ m. dhināī, a manufacturer of saltpetre; دُونَا عَنگائِي v. a. d̄ānoraṇu, to flog; ثُنكِري adj. d̄uniṭō, stout; ثُنكِري f. duniri, a stick to beat clothes with (in washing); m. dhuninō, name of a fish. زَنْگُ m. ranu, colour; v. a. rananu, to dye, and its derivatives; زنگن m. rano, a carpenter's chalk-string. سَانگاهَ f. sānāha, or: سَانگَاهِتو f. sānaha, care, and its derivatives (as: سَانگَاهِ سَانگَاهِ adj. sānāhitō, careful, سَانگَاهُو, adj. sānāhū, ditto); سَانگَاهُر،ُ v. n. sānāhaņu, to be careful. سَنْکُ m. sanu, connexion by marriage, and its derivatives; سِنگُ m. sinu, born, and its derivatives; سِنگاري f. sinārī, name of a fish (or: سِيگَاري sīṇārī); سَنگُرُ m. saṇaru, the seed-pod of the thorntree; سَنگن v. a. sananu, to point out; سَنگن f. sīna, bow. كَانگو m. ḡānō, or گانگو f. ḡānī, name of a fruit and shrub (Grewia betuloefolia). لنك m. lanu, lameness adj. lanō, lame); لِنكُ m. linu, limb; لِنكُ f. lina, a trip in carrying; لِنَكُوْ m. linō, time, turn (besides: مُنكُ f. linā, ditto). لَنكُ f. mana, a betrothed girl; لَنكُ m. munu, a grain of mung; مُنكُرُوْ m. manaru, fire; مُنكُرُوْ v. a. mananu, to ask, to beg, and its derivatives; مَنكُوْ adj. mōno, having the colour of mung; نِنكُنُوْ adj. & adv. ninunō, entirely, wholly. وَانكُنُ f. hinu, Assafoetida; مِنكُرُوْ m. hinirō, name of a fruit of an aquatic plant.

Another letter peculiar to the Sindhī is J, Ţ, ġ; it is not found in Hindī or Hindūstānī, nor in any of the cognate dialects, and we have therefore been compelled to provide it with a mark of its own. After the precedent of the Paštō we have added a hook below the under parallel line, which marks off this letter strongly enough, without giving rise to any confusion or misconception. The pronunciation of g is quite peculiar; it is that of the letter g uttered with a certain stress in prolonging and somewhat strengthening the contact of the closed organ, as if one tried to double the sound in the beginning of a word, as gga. The pronunciation is so far quite in accordance with the origin of this and the other three letters, peculiar to the Sindhī, though they are now treated to all intents and purposes as simple letters; e. g. र्हा बहुंग, the front, Prāk. अग्रा, Sansk. 契 (compare Introduction §. 15, b); lagō, applied, Prāk. ন্তান, Sansk. ন্তম (see Introduction §. 14); יָּבְּאֶׁלָ, bhagō, broken, Prāk. אָזין, Sansk. אָז. In other instances, where an original doubling of g cannot be proved etymologically, the use of this harsh g must be explained by the influence of the following letters, as: َوْتَهُـ gōṭhu, a village, Prāk. गोट्ट, Sansk. गोष्ट; in this, as in similar cases, the weight of the double tth, which in Sindhī has been reduced to its simple base by the prolongation of the preceding vowel, seems to have been thrown forward on g. Such an influence is especially exercised by a following r, as: گرو garō, heavy, Prāk.

Both letters, g and  $\bar{g}$ , must be carefully distinguished in pronunciation, as the signification of a word varies considerably according to the use of one or the other letter, as:  $\bar{z}$  garō, mangy, but  $\bar{z}$   $\bar{g}$  garō, heavy etc.

2) The palatals.

The palatals  $\xi$  j and  $\xi$  č, and their respective aspirates جب jh, and جب čh, are pronounced in the common Indian way as simple sounds, and are grammatically treated as such, though they are, according to their present pronunciation, compound sounds. Originally they cannot have been pronounced, as they are at present, for else the grammatical rules of Pāṇini would be incomprehensible. In our days & is pronounced as english j, and as english ch, that is to say, as dž and tš respectively; how these sounds, if they are to be treated as simple ones, should be aspirated or doubled by any human organ, is past our conception. The old pronunciation of these letters 1) must have gone through great variations, till they have become the compound sounds of the modern Indian idioms.2) In the Roman transcription they have therefore not been marked by the palatal stroke (\_\_\_), but by the same sign, with which the sibilant sh (= \*s) is provided, to point out their modern pronunciation.

<sup>2)</sup> The pronunciation of the Marāthī \( \) and \( \) as ts and dz respectively before the vowels a, \( \) a, u, u, ai, \( \) o, does not fall under this head, as this is owing to Drāvidian influences and only occurs in words of non-Arian origin.

The Sindhi has preserved the palatal nasal n (3) as an independent sound, which never precedes the letters of its own varga, for which purpose anusvāra (and in Hindustani writing simple (1) is used. The Hindustānī being destitute of a palatal nasal, we had to provide a new character. Following the analogy of the old Sindhī alphabet we chose for it the compound which comes nearest to it, for the palatal n of the Sindhī is properly a compound sound, and is pronounced ny. The proper circumscription by نى would not do for this reason, that the palatal ń is still considered by the Sindhī as a simple sound and rendered in Sanskrit writing by 3; it ought therefore to be pointed out, as near as possible, as such, for which purpose the compound غ answers much better, than ني, which latter would give rise to many misconceptions. In the Romanized transcription it has simply been furnished with the palatal line =  $\acute{n}$ .

The sign chosen for it in the alphabet at present in use viz.: , is not to the purpose, as the base is not , but the nasal , with a subsounding y.

The sibilant ش, which we have inserted in our scheme in the palatal row, is no longer a palatal sound at all, but a pure dental sh = š. The original pronunciation of is more than doubtful; now-a-days it is in no way differing from our common sh, and might therefore be as well classed under the dentals. The Arabic-Persian ش is always rendered in Sanskrit writing by it is also found in pure Sindhī words, as: شینهٔ šīhu, lion etc. compare; Introduction §. 5.

Peculiar to the Sindhī is , , , j. It is now treated as a simple sound, but it has in most cases, as etymology proves, sprung from a double jj (= , and is still pronounced as a compound sound = dy; e. g.: أَ قَرَّا (= adyu), to-day, Prāk. अज, Sansk. अद्य (on the assimilating process see Introd. §. 15.); vijā, science, Prāk. विज्ञा, Sansk. विद्या; رَجًا vēju, physician, Prāk. विज्ञा, Sansk. विद्या; رُجًا vēju, physician, Prāk. विज्ञा, Sansk. विद्या; مُتَا بُعَانِي vēju, physician, Prāk. وَعَانِي vēju, physician, phy

3) The Cerebrals.

The cerebrals t and 3 d, and their respective aspirates, 4 th and 3 dh are common to all the North-Indian vernaculars; they are pronounced by turning the tip of the tongue towards the roof of the mouth whilst sounding the dental bases, t, d, etc. respectively.

The Sindhī has likewise preserved an independent cerebral ..., which is not bound to the letters of its own varga as: ﴿ vaṇu, a tree (Sansk. वनं) لَهُنَ thaṇu, the teat of an animal, Hindī पन, Sansk. स्तन. It is pronounced very hard and resembles much the compound nṛ (in Paṣtō it is therefore very frequently rendered by nṛ).

In Sindhī it exchanges therefore occasionally its place with the cerebral r, as: مَا تِعُون māṇhū, man, or: مَا تِعُون māṇhū. The cerebral ö d, which in Prākrit already frequently supplants the dental d, has in Sindhī given birth to two other cerebral sounds, viz.: ö, ¸ ¸ and this again aspirated, ع, ¸ ¸ ¸ r, $\ddot{\mathbf{S}}$ ,  $\mathbf{\bar{S}}$   $\ddot{\mathbf{d}}$  is pronounced in a similar way as  $\bar{\mathbf{g}}$ ; the cerebral  $\mathbf{d}$  ( $\ddot{\mathbf{S}}$ ) is uttered with a certain stress in prolonging and somewhat strengthening the contact of the closed organ, as if a double  $\mathbf{d}$  was to be pronounced.

Originally it is, as ḡ, a double d̄, as may be still proved in most cases by etymology; e. g.: عُرُّةُ vad̄o, great, Prāk. चाइहा. But the Sindhī, which is very fond of hard cerebral sounds, often employs this letter d̄, where no original doubling of the cerebral has taken place, especially at the beginning of words, where the full stress of the voice can be laid upon it, as: عَنْ d̄olī, a kind of sedan chair, Prāk. عَنْ الْمَا اللهُ اللهُ

It has therefore been a great mistake of Capt. Stack, that he has not distinguished $\overline{3}$ d from $\overline{4}$, and marked both sounds by the same discritical dot (= $\overline{3}$), though he has been aware of their different pronunciation. A Sindh will never confound $\overline{3}$ d with $\overline{3}$ d; they are in his mouth thoroughly distinct from each other and have been differently marked already in the old Sindh alphabet (viz.: $\overline{4} = \overline{9}$, and $\overline{d} = \overline{3}$). We were therefore compelled in this respect to deviate from Capt. Stack's Sanskrit alphabet, retaining for the simple cerebral $\overline{d}$ the original Sanskrit letter $\overline{3}$, and marking the sound of $\overline{d}$ by a line beneath $\overline{3}$ (= $\overline{3}$), the dot beneath $\overline{3}$ being reserved for some other sound, which we shall presently notice.

The cerebral ;, ; r, and its aspirate s; ; rh have sprung from the cerebral s d and s dh respectively (see Introduction §. 7, 2), as: s guru, molasses, Sansk.

Js; Lés; drirhatā (sent) firmness, Sansk.

We have noticed already (l. c.), that by far the greatest number of words, in which r or rh is to be found, is taken from some aboriginal tongue, which is now lost, and wich must have had a great predilection for cerebral sounds (as the Drāvidian idioms of the south) and to the influence of which the preponderance of the cerebrals in the north Indian vernaculars must be ascribed.

Trumpp, Sindhī-Grammar.

The two peculiar letters  $\mathbf{Z}$  (tr) and  $\mathbf{S}$  (dr), which Capt. Stack in his Sindhī Grammar has advocated for the Sindhī under the cerebral class, are found, on nearer investigation to be compound sounds (see Introduction, §. 15.) and may therefore be safely discarded from the alphabet, as they ought to be written  $\mathbf{Z}$  tr and  $\mathbf{S}$  dr respectively, as:  $\mathbf{Y}\mathbf{Z}$  putru, son, Prāk.  $\mathbf{Y}\mathbf{R}$ , Sansk.  $\mathbf{Y}\mathbf{R}$ ; Sansk.  $\mathbf{Y$

We have not inserted the cerebral § ¶ in the Sindhī alphabet, though in Capt. Stack's Sindhī Dictionary a few words are written with ¶. This letter is completely ignored by the common people and left unnoticed in the old Sindhī alphabet; only a Brāhman now and then uses it, to show his knowledge of Sanskrit (compare Introduction §. 5).

4) The dentals.

The dental row offers nothing particular;  $\mathbf{\zeta}$  r; which is considered a cerebral in Sanskrit, has become a pure dental in the modern idioms.

5) The labials.

It is to be noted, that , , , , , ph, is to be pronounced as the aspirate of , , p, and never as f, which is of Arabic or Persian origin, wherever found.

The nasal of this class is m; but when preceding a letter of its own varga it is supplanted by simple n (or anusvāra), as in all the other rows; e.g.: اَنْبُ (عَنْهُارُ (عَنْهُارُ (عَنْهُالُ ) ambu, a mango; کُنْبَهَارُ (عَنْبُهَالُ ) kumbhāru, a potter.

On the purely Arabic letters.

The Sindhī, as well as the Hindūstānī, has, in consequence of the forced introduction of the Islām, been considerably mixed up with Arabic elements, and though the vulgar pay no attention to the particular pronunciation of the genuine Arabic sounds, the original Arabic orthography has been generally adhered to.

Under the guttural class we find the letters: ¿, ¿, ¿, ċ, ċ, the Roman transcription of which we have conformed to the Standard alphabet, though these letters are somewhat differently pronounced in Sindhī. ¿, which is in Arabic treated as a consonant, is generally ignored and only its accompanying vowel articulated, as: عَمْل intelligence, is sounded: akulu. In the midst of a word ¿ is either passed unnoticed (i. e. only the respective vowel is uttered) as:

nisamata) or e with its accompanying vowel is pronounced as a long syllable, as: à ferrier, is sounded like: nālbandu (properly: naslbandu) and by ignorant people also written accordingly; or the e with its respective vowel is dropped altogether; as: food (taṣāmu) is commonly pronounced: tāmu. The same is the case at the end of a word, where with its vowel is contracted by the vulgar to a long syllable, as: receipt-account (jamaṣa) is pronounced like jamā, and mostly written accordingly; only the Mullās, who pretend to a knowledge of Arabic, affect the deep guttural articulation of the Arabic. In Sanskrit writing e is therefore simply rendered according to its accompanying vowel, and not dinstinguished by any particular mark or dot.

The deep Arabic ح h is treated in the same way and pronounced as simple h, as: الله hālu, state, is sounded: hālu. The Arabic and Persian خ ي is commonly pronounced by the vulgar (especially the Hindūs, who are quite unable to articulate x) as kh, as: شِيمَ šīxa, a spit, is sounded: šīkha (Pers. سِيم).

The Arabic or Persian ἐ γ is pronounced in Sindhī as simple g, and very frequently exchanged for ζ in writing, as: ἐἰς bāγu, garden, is sounded as: bāgu; ἐ γamu, grief, as: gamu etc.

The deep guttural تر q of the Arabic is articulated in Sindhī like simple k, as: تَوْمَ qōma, a tribe, clan (Arabic قَرْم), is pronounced like: kōma; قَرْم), word, like: kaulu etc. The Hindūs ignore all these foreign letters in their writings and render them by the nearest Sanskrit consonants, as has been adverted to.

The lingual letters, which are peculiar to the Arabic, are not distinguished in Sindhī pronunciation from the corresponding dentals; غ t is sounded like common t, and غ g like z; غ and غ z likewise as z. The Hindüs on the other hand pronounce غ and ف like j, and render these letters promiscuously according to their actual pronunciation, which is frequently done by the Musalmans likewise, especially the unlearned.

The Arabic letters, which figure under the dental row, viz.: $\omega$, $\omega$, $\omega$, and $\omega$ z (the two latter of which are also common to the Persian) are pronounced in Sindh (and India generally) as follows: $\omega$ like s, $\omega$ and $\omega$ like z, whereas the Hindūs pronounce these two latter con sonants like $\omega$ and render them also accordingly by $\omega$, which is not unfrequently done by the Moslims also.

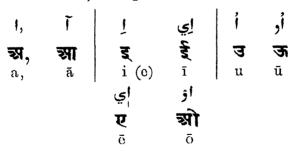

The Arabic and Persian if is sounded by the Muhammadans as f, but by the Hindus as ph, and rendered in their writings by T.

II. The Sindhī vowel system.

We next subjoin a tabular survey of the Sindhī vowel system.

1) Simple vowels:

2) Diphthongs:

1) Simple vowels.1) The Sindhī uses all the vowels, common to the Sanskrit and Prākrit; but it is to be noted, that i, when preceded or followed by h, or when closing a word, has the sound of short e (see Introduction §. 2. b).  $\bar{\mathbf{E}}$  and  $\bar{\mathbf{o}}$  are in Sindhī, as already in Prākrit, simple (and not Guna) vowels (see Introduction §. 2. d), and consequently always long (and not anceps, as in Prākrit).

As the Arabic is destitute of the sounds ē and ō, a great difficulty arises in Sindhī as well as in Hindūstānī, how to distinguish ī from ē, and ū from ō. The Indian grammarians have therefore invented the term for the يَاتَى عَجُهُول yā-e majhūl, or the unknown ي for the sound 5, and وَاوِ عَجْهُول vave majhūl, or the unknown, for the sound o; but at the same time no practical measures were taken, to mark off ē and ō by any diacritical sign, and the reader was left to help himself, <sup>1)</sup> As we shall further on employ only the Hindustani characters, we cannot enter here more minutely on the Sanskrit vowel system, and we refer therefore the student for nearer information to any Sanskrit grammar. We shall only make use of the Sanskrit characters in the course of this grammar, as occasion may call for.

as best he could. But as the distinction of  $\bar{\imath}$  from  $\bar{e}$  and  $\bar{u}$  from  $\bar{o}$  is somewhat difficult for a beginner, especially a European, and for the right understanding of the language very important, we have contrived to distinguish  $\bar{e}$  from  $\bar{\imath}$  by a perpendicular line, as:  $\bar{k}$   $\bar{k}$ , some,  $\bar{k}$   $\bar{i}$ , somewhat; and  $\bar{o}$  from  $\bar{u}$  by placing the sign  $\bar{u}$  above, as:  $\bar{u}$   $\bar{i}$   $\bar$

In Arabic writing the short vowels a, i, u are not expressed in the body of the consonants, but by mere marks, placed above or beneath the consonant, after which they are to be sounded; if the consonant happen to be an aspirate, the vowel mark is placed led نُحُم fathah (in Persian زَنر zabar); the mark for i is ___, and is called کَسْرَه kasrah (in Persian زير zīr, pronounced in India: zēr); the mark for u is -, and is zammah (in Persian پیش pīš, pronounced in India: pēš) e. g. نَنُ fana, فِن fini, فُنُ funu. But if a noun commence with a short vowel, I (alif) must serve as base for the these vowels, the vowels themselves being considered only as auxiliary signs for the consonants, as: ana, اِن ini, أَن unu. In Arabic initial I is in these cases always provided with hamzah, as: أُنْ ,إِن ,أَنْ but in Hindustānī it is dispensed with, to which practice we shall also adhere in Sindhī.

The three long vowels: ā, ī, ū are expressed in the body of the consonants by the letters !, ,, with the addition of the respective vowel points; in this case sākin, or quiescent, because they are not moved by a vowel of their own; e. g.: مَارُو hārī, a peasant; مَارُو mārū, a beater; مُوزِي mūrī, capital (in trade) جَيكَاتُ čīkātu, creaking. The same holds good with reference to the vowels ē and ō, which are not (originally) distinguished in writing from ī and ū, as: چهيرو čhērō, whetting. 1)

Long a, when initial, is expressed by I and the sign ~ placed above it, as: عَلَّمَ ādaru, courtesy. This sign is called مَدَّه maddah, i. e. extension, and is properly an alif placed above horizontally. Long i and u, when initial, must be preceded by alif, to support the respective vowel point, as عمل بله themselves are quiescent; e. g.: اِيهْوْ آأَرُهُوْ, this very person; اِيكُوْ قَرَّهُ, so large, اِيكُوْ قَرَّهُ, near.

يْر and , when quiescent, should be provided with the sign jazm (-), to indicate thereby, that they are not moved by a vowel of their own, as: اُزْهو اِيْهو pīru; but this practice is generally neglected in Hindūstānī, as superfluous. If on the other hand و and و be moved by a vowel put above or beneath them, they are no longer quiescent, but regular consonants, as: يَازُ yāru, friend; يَانُ niyāṇu, a tank; يَانُ vaṇu, tree; يَانُ vaṇu, tree; يَانُ vaṇu, wind.

<sup>1)</sup> In some Arabic nouns final على (generally without dots) is used with the power of alif, as: عَيْسَى بَعَةَة بَالْكُورَى مُلَوْت مُلَوْت مُلَوْت مُلَوْت مُلَوْت يَعْقَلُون مُلُوت zalāt, prayer, تَوْرَيْت taurāt, the Thōrah (pentateuch), which is falsely pronounced in India: taurēt.

2) The diphthongs ai and au.

The diphthongs ai and au are expressed in Arabic by a preceding fathah and a following quiescent و or , which should be provided in this case with jazm, to prevent mistakes, as: مَنْرَاكِي aitru, spinning wheel; مَنْرَاكِي caudhārī, an ascetic; عُنْرُاكِي authō, impure; مُنْرُاكِي caudhārī, round about. At the end of a noun no diphthong is admissible in Sindhī; compare Introduction, §. 1, 2.

3) The nasalized vowels or Anusvāra.

We have noticed already, that the simple dental n (ن) is now used in Sindhī before the letters of any varga indiscriminately, which in Sanskrit writing is commonly expressed not by the dental न, but by the sign called Anusvāra ( ்) e. g.: نَاكَانُ (वंगानु) kangālu (properly: kaṅgālu) poor; نَنْدُ (أَمَا) ganjō, scald-headed; نَنْدُهُ (أَمَا) nanḍhō, small; نَنْدُ (عَلَمَا) رَنْدُ (عَلَمَا) لَهُ الْمَاهُمُ الْمَاهُمُ الْمَاهُمُ الْمَاهُمُ الْمُعَالِيَةِ (عَلَمَا) لَهُ الْمَاهُمُ الْمُعَالِيةِ (عَلَمَا) لَهُ الْمُعَالِيةِ (عَلَمَا) لَهُ الْمُعَالِيةِ (عَلَمَا لَهُ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيّةِ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيّةِ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيّةُ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيةِ الْمُعَالِيةُ الْمُعَالِيةُ الْمُعَالِيةُ الْمُعَالِيةُ الْمُعَالِيةُ الْمُعَالِيَعِلِيّةِ الْمُعَالِيةُ الْمُعَالِيةُ الْمُعَالِيةُ الْمُعَالِ

But besides this full nasal the Sindhī also uses the proper Anusvāra, which only communicates to the respective vowel a nasalizing touch, very extensively, and as both, full n and the nasalizing touch, which is communicated to a vowel, are expressed in Sanskrit writing by Anusvāra, and in Hindūstānī by the dental n (.), some confusion necessarily arises from this practice, to obviate which the following remarks should be carefully attended to.

a) Anusvāra (or ن) preceding another consonant must always be pronounced as a full nasal, if the vowel of the syllable be short, as: أو pandhu, journey; but if Anusvāra precede 'h' in a short syllable, it is always to be pronounced as such, i. e. only a slight nasalizing touch is thereby communicated to the vowel,

- b) Anusvāra preceding a consonant in a long syllable is to be pronounced as a full nasal, as: बांदि, فانق bānthe, ravenousness; पाँच, پینگهٔ pīngha, a swing; pīngha, a swing; kūndhu, a young man; बेंदो, بندو, vēndō, going; النبئ lōmbaru, a male fox. But if the long vowels, provided with Anusvāra, be followed by h, s or v, they are to be pronounced with a nasalizing touch only, as: पांहर, مائن māsu, meat, पांवर, تهانهٔ thāhara, steadiness; मांद, مائن māsu, meat, पांवर, تهانهٔ thāvaru, Friday; मोह, مينهٔ mīhu, rain; मेहि, مينهٔ mēhe, buffalo etc. Where full n precedes h in a long syllable, it must be rendered by न (in Hindūstānī writing a further distinction is impossible), as: पांहरे, بانهی bāha, arm.
- c) At the end of a word Anusvāra always retains its proper nasalizing touch, be the final vowel short or long, as: أَلَّ بَالِينِ prī, friend; أَلُونَ لِلْمَا bhū, earth; mūhē (Formative of the I. pronoun sing.); also in compound words, as: أَلُونَ بَهُونَ بَهُونَ بُهُونَ لِمُعَلِيْنَ bhū bhū, buzzing. This rule is based on the fact, that in Sindhī every word must needs end in a vowel (which however may be nasalized).

d) Anusvāra, placed between two vowels, be they short or long, always retains its proper nasalizing sound, as: عَانِيْنَ بَقَانَمُ قَارَ مَانِيْنَ شَرِي قَارَمُ مَانِيْنَ بَقَانَمُ سَقَابِينَ مَعْنَانُ مَنْ قَالَمُ مَانِيْنَ بَعْنَانُ مِنْ قَالَمُ مَانِيْنَ بَعْنَانُ مِنْ قَالَمُ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ قَالِمُ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ قَالَمُ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ قَالِمُ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ قَالِمُ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مَانِيْنَ مَانِيْنَ مَانِيْنَ مَانِيْنَ مَانِيْنِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مِنْنِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَانِ مِنْ مَانِيْنَانِ مِنْ مَانِيْنِيْنَ مِنْ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنَانِ مِنْ مَانِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنِ مِنْ مَانِيْنِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنِ مِنْ مَانِيْنِيْنَ مِنْ مِنْ مَانِيْنِ مِنْ مَانِيْنِ مِنْ مَانِيْنِ مِنْ مَانِيْنِيْنِ مِنْ مَانِيْنِيْنَ مِنْ مَانِيْنِيْنِ مِنْ مِنْ مَانِيْنِ مِنْ

The same holds good with reference to Anusvāra, following a diphthong (see: Introduction §. 1, 2), as:

أَنْسَاءُ, raūšō, merriment (= rāušō); الله مَيْنَةَهُ, maǐṭha, madder (= māiṭha).

In the Romanized transcription, which we shall add throughout this grammar, the two different sounds of Anusvāra are rendered in this way, that the sound of full n is always expressed by n, whereas the nasalizing touch, which is communicated to a vowel by Anusvāra, is marked by the sign — placed above it, as:

| In the Romanized transcription, which we shall add throughout this grammar, the two different sounds of Anusvāra are rendered in this way, that the sound of full n is always expressed by n, whereas the nasalizing touch, which is communicated to a vowel by Anusvāra, is marked by the sign — placed above it, as:

We have already adverted to the great difficulties, under which the Hindūstānī labours to mark the original sound of Anusvāra, as it has only one n (and this the dental n) at its disposal. The difficulty is already great in Hindūstānī, and still greater in Sindhī, which is so much addicted to the use of nasalized vowels. In addition to what has been stated already, we beg to turn the attention of the student, as far as the Hindūstānī characters are concerned, to the following points:

Final ن has always the sound of Anusvāra proper (see under c) and need therefore not perplex the student, as: وَالُون māṛhū, man; وَالُون zālū, women; اِكَان iã, from this place, تِتَان tiã, from that place.

Anusvāra, separating two short or long vowels (see under d) is rendered by ..., and can be recognized as such by its position; in this case, to obviate all misconceptions, we have furnished the second vowel with hamzah, to point out thereby, that the following vowel is not to be read together with the preceding, but that closes the first syllable, as: إِنَّ (देंग्र) آ-a, thus; تَنَّ (गंड) gãũ, cow. If the second vowel chance to be a long one, و (without dots) provided with hamzah must precede the same, to serve as basis for the vowel point (see further on under: Hamzah), as: سَانتُين sãĩ (साँड) lord; عِنَانُ وَنَقُوْر (दिंश्रा) hīō, mind; عِنَانُ وَنَقُوْر it has been said by them.

In such like instances, as exhibited under a and b, the Hindūstānī alphabet offers no means of distinguishing the full nasal from Anusvāra proper, as:  $\dot{b}$ ānhī, a slave-girl,  $\dot{b}$ bāha, arm, and these difficulties can only be overcome by practice. In the old Sindhī alphabet and in that now in use no notice whatever is taken of these and such like intricacies.

On the other orthographic signs.

- 1) The sign = (عَنَّ maddah, prolongation) is placed on initial alif, to render it long, as: آتهَا ātharu, pack-saddle. In the midst and at the end of a word maddah is not placed on alif, if the preceding consonant be moved by fathah, in which case alif is called سَاكِن mā-lā, garland; but if the preceding consonant is provided with jazın (i. e. not moved by a vowel), alif must have the sign of maddah, as commencing a syllable, e. g.: وَبَانَ qur-ānu, Qorān, not qu-rānu.
  - 2) The sign عَزْمِ) jazm, abscission), placed above a consonant denotes, that the consonant thus marked is not moved by a vowel, as: بدالة vel-hō, idle; مَوْنَى vel-hō, idle; مَوْنَى maṛ-du, man; مَوْنَى sar-gu, heaven. In old Sindhī writings the use of jazm is hardly to be met with, as they preferred to provide such a mute letter with kasrah, the sound of which was hardly heard in pronunciation, as: مَوْنَى maṛ-du, and served quite the purposes of jasm. We cannot adopt this system, as in many cases it will give rise to confusion and misconceptions.

- 3) The sign (تَشْدِيد tašdīd) corroboration, placed above a consonant denotes, that the letter in question is to be doubled. In the old Sindhī writings the tašdīd is hardly ever to be met with, as they were in the habit to express even an originally double letter by its simple base, e. g.: لَا لَهُ kamu, business, instead of لَا لَهُ kamu. It is now used only in such instances, where the doubling of a consonant is rendered necessary in order to distinguish two in other respects identical words, as: اللهُ unna, by him, and اللهُ unna, wool.

A final short vowel, preceded by ā, ū, ō is usually supported by the sign hamzah alone, as: بَهَاء bhā-u, brother;

pō-e, after; هُوهِ hū-e, sound. But if, be radical in a word, hamzah with its accompanying vowel is placed upon, as: نَانَوُ nãu, fame, Formative نَانُو nãva; هَازِهُون gãũ, cow; مَازِهُون māṛhũa, Formative of: مَازِهُون māṛhū, man.

In the Formative Singular of such nouns, which end in ī, hamzah is dropped for brevity's sake, as: هَنْدِي handī, a pot, Formative: هَنْدِيَ handia (instead of هَنْدِيَ handia (instead of هَنْدِيَ sāī, lord, hamzah must be retained in the Formative, to prevent mistakes, as: سَانتِنَا هَانتُنا sāīa.

Note. The sign ~ (رَصْل) vasl, conjunction) only occurs in Arabic phrases and constructions; it joins two words, the latter of which begins with alif, the accompanying vowel of which is dropped and the final vowel of the preceding word drawn over or rather joined to the following; c. g.: عَبْدُ ٱلْمِلِكِ عَبْدُ ٱلْمِلِكِ abdulmaliki (instead of: عَبْدُ ٱلْمِلِكِ bismi-llāhi.

The use of the so-called Tanvīn (i. e. 5, 7, pronounced in Arabic 'un', 'an', 'in') in Sindhī is to be disproved of, as the Tanvīn is only a fanciful invention of the Arabian grammarians, and by no means fit to express the Sindhī nasalized short (and least the long) vowels.

SECTION I.

THE FORMATION OF THEMES IN SINDHI.

Chapter I.

The termination of Sindhi nouns.

In the formation of themes the relative position, which the Sindhī holds to the Sanskrit-Prākrit on the one side, and to its modern sister-tongues on the other side, is most clearly delineated.

The peculiarity of the Sindhī, and at the same time the great advantage, which is possesses over the kindred idioms consists therein, that every noun, substantive, adjective, pronoun, participle and infinitive ends in a vowel. By this vocalic termination the Sindhī has preserved a flexibility, and at the same time a sonorousness, of which the other modern vernaculars are completely destitute.

After what has been remarked on the nature of the diphthongs in Sindhī (see Introduction §. 1), it may be easily gathered, that no Sindhī noun can end in a diphthong. A Sindhī noun may therefore end in a, i (e), u; ā, ī, ū, ō; no noun ever ends in ē, and those, which seem to do so, are not in the Nominative, but in the inflected case. A final vowel may also be nasalized, as:

***salized**, as: *** māṛhū, man, *** čōthō, the fourth; *** prī, friend, which is especially the case, if a word terminate in a long vowel, but this constitutes, after what we have said on the nature of Anusvāra, no exception to the general rule.

In the formation of themes the Sindhī has in the main followed the course pointed out by the Prākrit, but it has created many new formations, independent and irrespective of the Prākrit. The levelling process of the modern idioms has already gained the ascendancy, and terminations, which the Prākrit, though seized already by the same tendency, has as yet kept asunder, have been thrown together into one class in Sindhī.

The Sindhī has lost the neuter, which has been already discarded in the Apabhransha dialect of the Prākrit, the immediate predecessor of the modern Sindhī. This, as it seems, has been the first step, to break the fetters of the old compact mother-tongue, and to initiate the levelling process of the present idiom.

Inasmuch as the Sindhī requires a vocalic termination for every noun, the distinction of the gender is not so perplexing as in the other dialects, which offer great difficulties in this point to the student. The terminations, which have been already fixed for the Prākrit, have been mostly retained in the Sindhī, with the exception of neuter nouns, which have been, for the most part, transferred to the masculine terminations, less to the feminine.

I. The termination u.

1) Masculine themes in u.

By far the greatest number of nouns end in Sindhī in u, and are, with a few exceptions, masculine. This short final u corresponds to the Prākrit termination ō, which, according to the testimony of the old Prākrit grammarians, has been already shortened to u in the Apabhransha dialect. 1) To this class belong in Sindhī:

<sup>1)</sup> In Marāṭhī final ③ (= Sindhī u) has on the whole become already quiescent; the same is the case in Bangālī, except when final a is preceded by a double consonant, in which case it is heard. In Panjābī, Hindī and Hindūstānī final a has quite disappeared; for nouns like piu, father, māū, mother etc. are in Panjābī exceptional cases.

- a) such nouns, as end in Prākrit in ō (= Sanskrit final ﴿ ), as: نَامَ naru, a man, Prāk. ﴿ ), Sansk. ﴿ (Sansk. ﴿ ), kamu, business, Prāk. ﴿ ), Sansk. ﴿ (Sansk. ﴿ ), kamu, business, Prāk. ﴿ ), Sansk. ﴿ ), To this class belongs also a number of adjectives (though the majority of them has retained the termination ō), as: نَامَ talu, hidden; اَعَالَ ajaru, imperishable; اَعَالَ ačetu, careless. Most of the adjectives, borroved from the Arabic or Persian, assume this termination, as: عَالَى نَامَ عَالِيهُ وَمِعَالِهُ وَمِعْلَمُ وَمِعْلَمُ وَمُعَالِهُ وَمِعْلَمُ وَمِعْلِهُ وَعَلَيْكُونِهُ وَمِعْلِهُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمِعْلِمُ وَعِلْمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَعِلْمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُ وَمُعْلِمُعْل
- b) such nouns, as end originally in u, as: اله vāu, wind (Sansk. वायु n.; مَدُ madu, liquor, Sansk. मधु) n.
- c) such nouns, as end in Sanskrit in tā (crude form tṛ), Prāk. ā (by elision of t), or which add in Prākrit the termination āro, as: إِنَّ piu, father, Sansk. पाता, Prāk. पिञा; المَّارِي bhāu, brother, Sansk. भाता, Prāk. already भादु (in Sindhī again with elision of d); bhatāru, husband, Prāk. भतारो, Sansk. भता (see Varar. V, 31).

2) Feminine themes in u.

These are, comparatively speaking, few in number; to this class belong such nouns, as end in Sanskrit in u, and are feminine as: عَنْ f. thing, Sansk. عَيْنُ dhēṇu, a milk-cow, Sansk. عَيْنُ sasu, mother-in-law, Sansk. عَيْنُ vijū, lightening, Prāk. विज्ञू, Sansk. विद्युत.

In a few themes original ā has been shortened to u, the Sindhī following herein the levelling process no-

II. The termination o.

Besides the nouns ending in u, those ending in  $\bar{o}$  are the most numerous in Sindhī; they are all without exception masculine. The old Prākrit termination  $\bar{v}$  ( $\bar{o}$ ) has been split in Sindhī into two classes, in one of which  $\bar{o}$  has been shortened to u and in the other of which it has been retained unaltered.

A strict rule seems not to have been attended to in settling these two terminations, but usage alone seems to have decided for the one or the other; in many instances both terminations are promiscuously used. It is worthy of notice, that many nouns, which end in Sindhī in ō, have retained the corresponding termination ā (masc.) in Hindī and Hindūstānī and to a great extent also in Marāthī, Bangālī and Panjābī, and similarly those nouns, which terminate in Sindhī in u, have dropped the corresponding vocalic termination (i. e. N, a) in the dialects quoted.

Examples: ﺗﺮﯗ tarō, the sole of a shoe (Sansk. אוֹנ salō, the throat (Sansk. אוֹנ m.), whereas on the other hand שُلُ galu, cheek, corresponds to the Sansk. אוֹנ m., שניטורף lurkō or שניטורף lurku, a tear; سونارף sōnārō, goldsmith (Sansk. मुवर्णकार); on the other hand बंबी luhāru, blacksmith (Sansk. लोहकार).

We may however lay down some rules, by which the Sindhī seems to have been guided in retaining the original Prākrit termination ō:

Adjectives derived by secondary affixes from other themes generally retain the termination ō, as: بَالِكُو بَالِهُ بَاللَّهُ وَالْكُو بَاللَّهُ بَاللَّهُ وَالْكُو بَاللَّهُ وَاللَّهُ وَ

2) Verbal nouns, which are derived from the root of verbs by lengthening the root-vowel, take the termination  $\bar{o}$ , as:

ghāṭō, decrease, from گَهَتَنُ to decrease. گَهَاتُنُ čārhō, increase, from چَاڙِهُوْ to rise.

The termination u however is also in use, especially with such themes, in which the root-vowel is not lengthened, as:

marku, boasting, from مَرْكُنُ to boast. مَرْكُنُ to snatching, from مَرْكُ to snatch.

3) Nouns of agency, which are derived from verbal roots by prolonging the root-vowel (if it be short) take likewise the termination  $\bar{o}$ , as:

vāḍhō, carpenter, from وَقَّهَنُ to cut. وَقَّهَنُ to dive. تُوبُو to dive. تُجِنَىُ to split. چِيرَنُ čīrō, sawyer, from چِيرَنُ

- 4) Some nouns of foreign origin change (original) final ā or ah to ō in Sindhī, as: بَابؤ bābō, father, Hindūst. (turkish) دَرُوَارَة ; بَابَا
- 5) All participles present and past end in ō, as: مَارِينْدُو halandō, going; هَارِينْدُو haliō, gone; مَارِينْدُو mā-rīndō, beating, مَارْيو māryō, beaten.
- 6) It is seldom the case, that an original final ā (fem.) has been changed to ō, and rendered thereby masculine, as: تَارِقْ tārō, star (Sansk. नारा fem.); Hindī likewise नारा masc. (Paštō: ستوْرَيْ stōrai m.); in Marāthī it is both masc. and fem.

Note. If we turn to the cognate dialects, we find, that the Gujarātī comes nearest to the Sindhī in this respect; for nearly all the nouns, which end in Sindhī in ō and u, have retained the termination  $\bar{o}$ . As the Gujarātī has preserved the neuter, it forms a regular neuter ending in  $\vec{3}$   $\tilde{u}$  from masc. themes in  $\bar{o}$ , as:  $\vec{3}$  and  $\vec{o}$  dog (in general), but  $\vec{3}$  a male dog. This neuter termination we consider identical with the Sindhī vocalic termination u, with the only difference, that Anusvāra, as the sign of the neuter, has been added.

In Marāṭhī, Hindī and Panjābī, final ō of the Sindhī and Gujarātī has been changed to ā. The Panjābī and Hindī (Hindūstānī) have lost the neuter, but the Marāṭhī, which has preserved it, forms from the masc. termination ā a regular neuter ending in ē (v), which is in its origin nothing else but another masc. termination with the addition of final Anusvāra, just as in Gujarātī (compare on this point: Lassen, Instit. linguae Prāk. p. 429, 14); e. g.: arci n. a plantain, Hindī: arcī m., arcū, inf. (properly a neuter verbal noun, as in Sanskrit), Sindhī inf. (hindī arcī karna (m.), Gujarātī:

In Bangalī the termination ā (= ō of the Sindhī) is only to be met with in a few nouns, as: gādhā, ass, ghōrā, horse etc. (nouns like: pitā, kartā, do not come properly under this head, as they are Sansk. Nominatives); as a masc. termination of adjectives ā is unknown in Bangālī.

III. The termination u (masc. and fem.).

Nouns ending in ū correspond generally to the Sanskrit-Prākrit termination u, which in Prākrit is lengthened in the Nom. Sing. to ū; those nouns, which end already in Sanskrit ū, retain this termination unaltered in Sindhī. Some feminine nouns, ending in ū, shorten their final ū again to u, adding at the same time one of the feminine terminations i (e) or a; e. g.: عَلَى عَلَى اللهِ عَلَى اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهِ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ الل sion of final k in Sindhī); آبِرُو ābirū, honor (or آبِرُو ābirūe) Pers.

Under this head fall many appellatives and adjectives, ending in ū, āū and ākū, corresponding to the Sansk. affixes uka (عَمَا عَلَى and āku (عَالَى as: عَارُو tārū, a swimmer (= tāruka), مَعَادُ, rahākū or: رَهَادُو khaṭāū, profitable (from رَهَادُو khaṭāū, profitable (from كَهَادُ f. profit).

In some nouns ending in ū, a more complicated contraction has taken place, as: مَاتِعُون māṛhū, man, Prāk. माणुमो, Sansk. मानुष (n of the Prākrit interchanging with r, and H being exchanged for h); تُأَوَّعُون أَوَّا اللهُ وَالْقِيْمِ لَمُعْمِل إِللهُ لِمُعْمِل أَنْ اللهُ ال

IV. The termination a.

Nouns ending in ā correspond generally to the Sanskrit-Prākrit termination ā (आ) and are all feminine, as: दंगें cintā, anxiety, Sansk. चिना; چَنْتَا čintā, anxiety, Sansk. चिना; چَنْتَا jāṭrā, pilgrimage, Sansk. याचा; کَهِمَا khimā, patience, Prāk. खमा, Sansk. खमा.

There exists a small number of masc. nouns, now ending in ā, which must not be confounded with the preceding fem. nouns, as they are of quite a different origin; they are derived from Sansk. themes ending (in their crude forms) in an (عرام) and r (عرام), and in the Nom. Sing. in ā, as: أَنَا atmā, soul; kartā, the agent (in grammar). There are also a few foreign words, ending in ā, as: آشنا āšnā, an acquainstance, Pers.

A few adjectives end likewise in ā (or ā) as: اَقَاعًا dātā, liberal; تَاكُرِي tālā, exhausted etc.

V. The termination ă.

The vocalic ending ă is shortened from the preceding fem. termination ā, just as u has been shortened from ō. To this class belong in Sindhī:

- 1) such nouns, as end in Sanskrit and Prākrit in ā, as: جبهَ jibha, tongue, Prāk. जीहा, Sansk. जिहा; أَنْهُ nũha (besides نُنْهُ daughter - in - law, Sansk. जुषा; دهيخ dhia (besides: دهخ), daughter, Prāk. धीटा or धीस्रा; sa-ina, sign, Sansk. सञ्जा; مِنْجَ mińa, marrow, Sansk. H. Further a great quantity of nouns, the formation of which is peculiar to the Sindhī, and which may be derived from every verbal root. This formation corresponds exactly to the Sanskrit affix vs (ā), which is added to the verbal root, to form fem. nouns, as Sanskrit: भिदा, breaking, from भिद्र etc. In Sindhī the derivation of such nouns from verbs is quite general, and the language acquires thereby a great facility to form verbal nouns, as: ﴿ cokha, investigation, Infin. كُذُنْ guḍa, pounding, Inf. کُذُنْ guḍa, pounding, Inf. چۇكھَنْ (root: کُذُّ). The Sindhī always falls back on the Prākrit, especially in such nouns, as differ already from the Sanskrit, by dropping either a final consonant in Prākrit or affixing a new vocalic ending, as: آسِيسَ āsīsa, blessing, Prāk. श्रासिस, Sansk. श्राशिस.
- 2) The feminines of such adjectives. as end in the masc. in u, as: کُبهَ kubha, fem. of کُبهُ kubhu, unfortunate; سُجَانُ sujāṇa, fem. of سُجَانُ, well-knowing.

Only a very small number of adjectives ends originally in a, which remain unchanged in gender, number and case, as: جَامَ jāla, or جَازَ jāra, abundant; جَامَ

3) Many nouns fluctuate, as regards their termination, between a or i (e), as both short vowels form the common fem. terminations in Sindhī, e. g.: نَانَ nāra or نَارَ nāre, woman; آرَ āra or آرَ āre, affection; خَهُنَ rīra or رِيرِّ rīra or رِيرِّ rīre, quarrel. From the adjectives, ending in u, the feminine may be formed in final a or i (e), as: تَوْرُ عَنْ قَالَ atōre, what cannot be weighed, masc. چَرْيَتَ اَتَوْرُ čaryaṭa or چَرْيَتَ čaryaṭa or چَرْيَتِ čaryaṭa, mad, masc.

This accounts easily enough for the phenomenon, that such nouns, as end in Prākrit in ī, have adopted in Sindhi the termination ă (simply exchanging one fem. termination for another), as: بهين bhēṇa (besides: بهين), sister, Prāk. बहिणी Sansk. भगिनी; مثر dhure, origin, Prāk. पुरा, Sansk. पुरा. But, though the respective fem. terminations are often exchanged, the original gender is commonly strictly adhered to in Sindhī, and the case is very rare, that an original masc. noun has been changed to a feminine, as: بَانِهُ bapha, fem. steam, Sansk. बाष्ण masc. (in Hindī it has become likewise a fem.).

Note. As regards the cognate dialects, the Bangālī has throughout preserved the original fem. termination ā; the Marāthī too has remained more faithful to the Prākrit, but it has already in many cases shortened ā to a, and then dropped it altogether (in pronunciation at least) as: TH jībh, tongue, TI vāt, way etc. In the other dialects long final ā has either been preserved, or it has been thrown off altogether (after having first been changed to ă).

As in Sindhī every noun must needs end in a vowel, such fem. nouns, as are borrowed from the Hindūstānī, frequently adopt the fem. termination 'a' in Sindhī, as: Hindūst.

earth, Sindhī رَمِينَ zamīna; Hindūst. مِلْک (f.) property, Sindhī مِلْک milka. In a few nouns the gender has been changed, as: Hindūst. كِتَابُ kitāb (fem.), Sindhī كِتَابُ kitābu, masc.

VI. The termination ī. (masc. et fem.)

Themes in ī are in Sindhī of both genders; they are either masculine or feminine.

1) Masc. themes ending in ī.

The termination i in masc. nouns corresponds:

- a) To the Sansk. affix ī (= in), as: دَهُرْمِي dharmī, religious (Sansk. धिमेन्), Nom. Sing. धर्मी; سرَامِي svāmī, lord (Sansk. स्वामिन्); هَاتِهِي hāthī, elephant (Sansk. हिस्तिन.
- b) To the Sansk. affix ika (देन = न), by eliding k and lengthening i to ī; e. g.: هَارِي hārī, a peasant, Sansk. हालिन); وَتَهِي ōṭhī, a camel-rider (from نَهِيكري; ṭhēkirī, a seller of earthen ware (from تَهِيكري, earthen ware).
- c) To the Sansk. adjectival affix य y, by changing य to ī, as: پرین prī, friend, Sansk. प्रिय; پرین abhāgī, unfortunate, Sansk. श्रागय.
- - e) To Sanskrit masc. crudes, ending in i, which generally have final i lengthened to ī in Sindhī, as: کَرِي kavī, poët, Sansk. किंदा; کلیکال kalī-kālu, the Kāli-period; in some nouns though original short i has been preserved, as: مَر hare, Vishņu (Hindī: हिर्दे and हरी); pa-e, lord, master (= पित).

There remains a number of words in ī, which are masculine, the origin of which is unknown, as: بيلي belī, servant; باندهي bandhī, a log of wood floating in the river; مَانِهِي mānjhī, a brave man.

Note. The Bangālī and Marāṭhī agree with the Sindhī in this respect, as Bang. svāmī, Marāṭhī hattī etc. On the other hand both idioms have retained the masc. termination i, as Bang. pati, lord, Marāṭhī kavi, poët. In Panjābī, Hindī (Hindūst.) final i of masc. themes is occasionally preserved, but more generally dropped, as har = hari; kav = kavi; or lengthened to ī, as in Sindhī, as kalī = kal, kali.

- 2) Feminine themes ending in ī.
- a) Feminine nouns, which end in Sanskrit and Prākrit in ī, remain unchanged in Sindhī, as: نبي nadī, river, Sansk. नदी: سَني satī, a virtuous woman, Sansk. सती: راني rāṇī, queen, Sansk. राज्ञी.

The Prākrit termination (fem.) is occasionally changed to ī in Sindhī, as: رَائِي vāī, speech, Prāk. वासा, Sansk. वाच f.; in some nouns ī (Prāk.) is shortened to i (e), as: مَا يَعْ diṭhe, sight, Prāk. رَجَاء , Sansk. हिंह. Neuter nouns, which end in Sansk. in ĭ, may accept in Sindhī the fem. termination ī, as: تُعِي dahī, sour milk, Prāk. رَاقِي شَعْلِي mākhī, honey, Sansk. المَّالِي شَعْلِي شَعْلِي سَعْلِي شَعْلِي شَعْلِي أَلْمُ الْعَلِي سَعْلِي أَلْمُ الْعَلِي سَعْلِي أَلْمُ الْعَلِي أَلْمُ الْعَلِي الْعَلَى أَلْمُ الْعَلَى الْعَلَى

b) The fem. termination  $\bar{i}$  corresponds to the Sanskrit-Prākrit affix  $\bar{i}$ , by which feminines are formed from masculine themes. In Sindhī this termination is used to derive feminines from masc. bases ending in ō and u, as: بهائيه bhalī, fem. good, from the masc. base piنبهائي gōlī, a slave-girl, from كولي بهاؤ bāmbhaṇī, the daughter or wife of a بَانْبهَنُ or Brāhman.

- c) The fem. termination ī is frequently applied to express littleness, smallness, neatness, as: كَاتِي kātī, a small knife, from مَاتِي kātu, a large knife; مَاتِي māṭī, a small jar, from مَاتَّة māṭō, a large jar etc.
- d) The fem. affix ī, which corresponds to the Sansk. abstract affix ā, derives abstract nouns from adjectives and substantives, as: چۇر čōrī, theft, from چۇر čōru, a thief; بهلۇ bhalī, goodness, from بهلۇ bhalō, good; دۇستى dōstī, friendship, from دۇستى dōstu, friend.

VII. The termination i (ĕ) fem. (m.)

The ending 'i', which, with a few exceptions, denotes fem. nouns, corresponds to the Sanskrit-Prākrit termination ī; in others again is has been shortened from ī, in the same way, as final a from ā; e. g.: بُدهِ budhe, intelligence, Sansk. عَلَى mate, opinion, Sansk. मित;

The termination i (e) is generally used to derive feminines from adjectives and substantives ending in u. as: اَچِيت ačēte, thoughtless, masc. أَچِيت sadhare, stout, masc. گَنُهِ ; سَدَعَرُ gaḍahe, a jenny-ass, from تَرِيتِ parīṭe, a washerwoman, from تَرِيتِ a washerman.

In some few nouns the original gender has been changed, as: রুঁ āge, fire (fem.), Prāk. স্থানি (m.), Sansk. आपि m.; إلى dēhe (fem.), body, Sansk. देह (m. and n.); in the cognate dialects both are alike fem.

It is further to be observed, that in Sindhī final i (e) very frequently interchanges with final ă, both vowels constituting the regular fem. terminations, e. g.:

j āre or j āra, fondness; j gōre or j gōra, thunder etc. Among these we must also reckon forms like changed for i (e).

In Sindhī, as well as in the cognate dialects, some few masc. nouns have retained the original Sansk. termination i, as: مَعْنِي hare, Vishņu, رَسْبَتِ viraspate, the planet Jupiter (Thursday) يَتْمَى pa-e, lord, husband (= पति); in others again i has been shortened from ī, as: كِيهَا لَهُ لَهُ اللهُ sahāe or عَهَادِّى sahāē, a helper.

To some nouns of foreign origin the termination i has also been added, as: مِنْكُ يُعلَّمُ يُعلَّمُ يُعلَّمُ يُعلَّمُ يُعلَّمُ يَعلَّمُ عَلَيْهُ عَلِيهُ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهِ عَلَيْهِ عَ

Some adjectives, mostly such, as have been borrowed from a foreign source, take also the termination i (m. and fem.), as: شَادِ بَانُوش يَعْدُونُ بِينَاد (Pers. شَادِ čaurase, four-square, Sansk. चतुस.

Chapter II.

Primary themes.

§. 7.

With reference to the formation of themes the Sindhi conforms on the whole to the system of the Prākrit, inasmuch as Prākrit themes are directly received into the Sindhī with such modifications, as are peculiar to the Sindhī; but besides this the Sindhī has set up new formations of themes, whereby the inherited stock of vocables, be they of Ārian or non-Ārian origin, is peculiarly remodelled. As regards the themes taken directly from the Prākrit, we must refer to the Sindhī system of sounds in our Introduction, which alone can give the necessary clue as to the origin or derivation of a theme from the Prākrit; in the following we shall only treat of those themes, which have been formed either by modifying the old inherited stock, or by new rules altogether, irrespective of the Prākrit. Nouns of Arabic or Persian origin we shall exclude from our present investigation, as they have nothing in common with the genuine Sindhī forms, but are intruders, without which the Sindhī may well exist; they partake so far of the general laws of the formation of themes, that a vocalic termination is affixed to them, according to their respective gender, to render them susceptible of inflexion.

Whe shall divide the Sindhī formation of themes after the precedent of the Sanskrit into two classes, viz: that of primary and secondary themes, that is, such themes, as are directly derived from verbal roots, and such, as are derived from primary nouns, by means of affixes.

§. 8.

I. Formation of abstract nouns.

- 1) Themes in ă, ĭ (ĕ); u, ō (ī fem.)
- a) Themes in a are formed from the simple root of the verb (which in Sindhī, as well as in Sanskrit, is always monosyllabical, derivative verbs excepted) by dropping the Infinitive (verbal) affix anu. In this way an abstract noun may be formed from every Infinitive of the language, exhibiting the abstract idea of the verb.

The affix a corresponds to the Sansk. affix  $\overline{x}$ , which is added to the root of the verb (as: Sansk.  $\overline{y}$ , worship, from  $\overline{y}$  to worship) to form abstract nouns; in Sindhī final  $\overline{a}$  has been shortened to  $\underline{a}$ ; see §. 6, V. e. g.:

أَوَّ بَاكُنُ jāga, wakefulness, Inf. جَاكَنُ to be awake. marha, pardon, Inf. مَرْهَنُ to pardon. pīṛa, pressure, Inf. پِيزَنُ to press.

تَكُهَنُ sagha, strength, Inf. سَكُهَنُ to be strong.

In some roots 'a' is prolonged to ā and 'u' to ō, as:

إن المجهَّةُ بُهُ بُهُمُانَ jhāṭa, snatching, Inf. جَهَاتَ to snatch.

و المهرُلُ bhōla, error, Inf. بهُلَنُ to err.

b) Themes in i (e) are formed in the same way as the preceding (i being only a variation of  $\check{a}$ ), with this difference, that the root-vowel must always be prolonged (viz:  $a = \check{a}$ ;  $u = \check{o}$ ;  $i = \check{e}$ ), e. g.:

يهَاتِ ghāṭe, descrease, Inf. گهَتَنُ to descrease. ghōme, vagrancy, Inf. گهَبَنُ to wander about. ويڙهِن vēṛhe, quarrel, Inf. ويڙهِن to quarrel.

c) The termination 'u' corresponds to the Sansk. affix স্থা, which derives abstract nouns from verbal roots, with or without prolonging the root-vowel; the same is the case in Sindhī, where the root-vowel either remains unchanged, or is prolonged. E. g.:

مَرْكُنُ marku, boast, Inf. مَرْكُنُ to boast. أَمُونُ to descent. أَلَهُنُ lāhu, descent, Inf. لَهُنُ to descent. بَهْرَنُ to crumble. بهرَنُ phēru, turn, Inf. پهيرُ to turn (v. n.).

d) Themes in  $\bar{o}$  are identical with those in u, both terminations interchanging very frequently (see §. 6, I. II.).

ghaṭō, deficiency, Inf. گهَاتْنُ to decrease. گهَاتْوُ čāṛhō, increase, Inf. چَڙِهَنُ to rise. چَڙَهُنُ jhagiṛō, quarrel, Inf. جَهَكِّرَانُ to quarrel. جَهَكِّرَانُ d̄ēkhārō, showing, Inf. دِيكهَارُنُ to show.

The masc termination  $\bar{o}$  is occasionally exchanged for the fem. termination  $\bar{\imath}$ , with some slight alteration of meaning, as:

چَاڙهِي čāṛhī, ascent, Inf. چَڙهَنُ to ascend. چَڙهَنُ dēkhārī, showing.

- 2) Themes in aņu, aņō, anī, aņe.
- a) Themes in anu coincide in Sindhī with the form of the Infinitive, which, according to the testimony of the old Prākrit grammarians, has already been the case in the Apabhransha dialect, the Infinitive of which terminated in Anii (compare: Lassen, Instit. ling. Prāk. p. 469, 5).

The old Sanskrit Infinitive in 34 (the Latin supinum) has been lost in the modern vernaculars (the Gujarātī Infinitive, which ends in 3, is properly a neuter Gerundive, and the Bangālī infinitive, which ends in tē, is a past participle, used as a verbal noun) and in its place the verbal noun in sai is substituted, which in Marāthī has remained neuter (v ē), but which in Sindhi and the other dialects has been classed under the masculine termination. The affix and is added directly to the verbal root in Sindhī, and forms abstract nouns. corresponding to our Gerunds; as:

دُسْ :disanu, seeing, root ثَسَرُنَى.

هَلْ halanu, going, root: هَلْ أَنْ

مَرُنُ maraṇu, dying, root: مَرْ The naked verbal root, as pointed out, is in Sindhī nowhere to be met with, but always ends in the Imperative, where alone its crude form comes to light, in a vowel, which is either u (in intrans. verbs) or i (e) (in transitive verbs). According to the final vowel of the Imperative the junction vowel of the Infinitive or verbal noun varies in Sirō, as: مَارِنُ māriṇu (to beat), lēṭaṇu, to recline, but in Lār no regard is had to this circumstance, and all Infinitives (irrespective of their transitive or intransitive signification) terminate in anu.

b) Themes in ano (which is originally only a variation of anu) express in Sindhī more a lasting action, occupation or state; e. g.:

diaṇō vaṭhaṇō, giving and taking (debt and بُرَّتُنُو وَتُهَنُوْ and credit), besides: ثِتَنُ وَتَهَنُ, which is also in use. بهَرِنْوْ bhariṇō (or bharaṇō) embroidering (literally: filling up).

māniņō (or mananō) betrothal (literally: asking [for a bride]).

Note. It is remarkable, that all the other dialects, with the exception of the Bangālī and Gujarātī, have retained this termination of the Infinitive, as: Marathi atti (ē being originally identical with ō, see Lassen §. 144, 2), Hindī (Hindūst.) करना, Panjābī: karnā.

c) More frequently than the termination ano, the feminine ending ani is used in Sindhi, serving at the same time to express smallness, neatness etc. of a state or action:

چَوَنِي čavaṇī, saying, Inf. چَوَنُ to say. halaṇī, going, gait (comely), Inf. هَلَنِي to go. بهَرِنِي bhariṇī, embroidery, Inf. بهَرِنِي to cut. وَدَّهَنُ vaḍhaṇī, carpentering, Inf. وَدَّهَنُ

Occasionally the termination ani is shortened to ani (ane), as:

يَهَنِ gehaṇe, swallowing (besides: کِهَنِي), Inf. کِهَنِي to swallow.

The affix anī (or inī) joined to roots of causal verbs, signifies: expense for, wages for, as:

khaṇāṇī, expense for carrying or lifting up (porterage), Inf. کهَنَائِي to cause to carry.

چَارَنُ čārāṇī, expense for grazing cattle, Inf. چَارَنُ to cause to graze.

دهُنَّارِنِي dhuāriṇī, expense for washing, Inf. دهُنَّارِنِي to cause to wash.

3) Themes in ti.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix  $\widehat{\mathbf{n}}$ , by which abstract nouns are derived from verbal roots, besides those, which are taken over directly from the Sanskrit. The junction vowel in Sindhī is ă, as:

khapate, expense, Inf. کهَپَنْ to spend. کهَپَنْ vaṇate, pleasure, Inf. وَنَنْ to please (act.).

تَوْتِ جَاوَتِ avate javate, income, expense (literally: coming, going); as Infinitives they are not used in Sindhi, but in Hindi.

چَهُدُّنُ čhadate, remission, Inf. چَهُدُن to go.

4) Themes in ațu, āțū (ā-ū), āțī (fem.).

These affixes correspond to the Sansk. Unādi-affixes an, and which Bopp has justly referred to the Infinitive affix  $\mathbf{g} = \mathbf{g}\mathbf{H}$ . This is borne out by their signification, which in Sindhī nearly coincides with that of the Infinitive, as:

ghēraṭu, surrounding, Inf. گهيزُنُ to surround. خَهِيزَنُ čhimkāṭu, jingling, Inf. چهِنْكَانُ to jingle.

بَهُنِكَاتُ bhuṇikātu humming, Inf. بَهُنِكَنُ to hum. (by elision of ṭ.)

پهيرَاتِي phērāṭī, giddiness, Inf. پهيرَاتِي to cause to turn.

Note. A feminine may thus be derived nearly from all masc. bases.

5) Themes in atru (or: itru).

The Sindhī affix atru (or itru) corresponds to the Sansk affix 37, and denotes an instrument, wherewith any thing is done or executed. In Lār this affix is assimilated to atu (= attu) whereas in Sirō the original compound is preserved (only with transition of t into t); the root-vowel is lengthened in some themes; e. g.:

to sound. وَجَنُ vajaṭru, a musical instrument, Inf. وَحَنُ to sound. وَعِنْ vahiṭru, a beast of burden, Inf. وَعِنْ

6) Themes in ikō.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix 344 (the junction vowel 'a' having been changed to i in Sindhī), which in Sanskrit forms nouns of agency, but in Sindhī also abstract nouns; as:

تُوَوَّنُ d̄aṛikō, quarrelling, Inf. تُوَوَّنُ to quarrel.

piṭikō, beating the forehead, Inf. پِتَّنُ to strike one's head in grief.

§. 9.

II. Formation of appellatives and attributives.

7) Themes in ō.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix হাব (final being commonly elided in Sindhī), and forms attributives from verbal roots, which imply habitual action or possession. The root-vowel, if it be short, must be prolonged, as in Sanskrit; e. g.:

to cut. وَدَّهَنُ vāḍhō, carpenter, Inf. وَادَّهُوْ čīrō, sawyer, Inf. چيرؤ to split.

to dive. تُبَنُ to dive. تَوْبؤ ghōrō, seeker, Inf. کهوْرَنْ to seek.

In some few instances the full Sansk. affix has been preserved, as:

to sing. كَاثِنُ gāiku, singer, Inf. كَاثِنُ to

8) Themes in ū.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix sq (final beeing elided in Sindhī and u lengthened) and forms verbal adjectives or attributives, implying a habitual or characteristical action or state. The root-vowel, if short, is commonly prolonged before the accession of this affix; as:

vādhū, increasing, Inf. وَدَهُنَ to increase.

to swim. تَرَنُ tārū, a swimmer, Inf. تَارُو to quarrelsome person, Inf. وِرْهَنُ to quarrelsome

پهژرو phōrū, a robber, Inf. پهژرو to rob. پهژرو ghōmū, a vagabond, Inf. گهرئر to stroll about.
Without prolongation of the root-vowel:

رَهُونَ rahū, inhabitant, Inf. رُهُونَ to stay. مُهُنُ sahū, patient, Inf. سَهُونَ to bear.

9) Themes in āku, ākū, āū.

This affix denotes the same idea of a habitual state or action, as the preceding. It corresponds to the Sansk. affix xiq which is added to the verbal root either unaltered, or with final 'u' lengthened, or with elision of  $\mathbf{a} = \bar{\mathbf{a}} \cdot \bar{\mathbf{u}}$ . In some instances the root-vowel is prolonged. E. g.:

رَهَاكُوْ rahākū, inhabitant, Inf. رَهَاكُوْ to stay. رَهَاكُوْ rahā-ū, inhabitant, Inf. رَهَاكُوْ to drink. piāku, drinker, Inf. پِنَّانُ to drink. ورْچَانُو to be wearied. ورْچَانُو vēkāū, for sale, Inf. ورَجَانُو to be sold. پِتَانُو pēṭāū, ill-wishing, Inf. پِتَانُو

10) Themes in ando (and Indo).

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix N, Prāk. N (in Sindhī with change of the tenuis into the media), and forms in Sindhī, like as in Sanskrit and Prākrit, present participles. According to the final vowel of the Imperative the participle ends in andō (Imperative u) or īndō (imperative i); some participles are formed irregularly.

ا كَنْدُو lagandō, applying, Imper. كُلُ, Inf. كَنُ to apply. أَكُنْ to apply. وَسُنْ disandō, seeing, Imper. قِسَنُ Inf. قِسَنُ to see. فِسَنُ bhēlīndō, trampling, Imper. بهيلَنُ to trample.

تهِينْ، Inf. تهِيئُن thīndō (irreg.), Imper. تهِيئُن to become.

Note. We advert to the fact, that all the other dialects have dropped the nasal in the Prāk. affix affix the Panjābī has preserved it in a few forms, as: hundā, being, jāndā, going, but in the regular present participle the affix is always da, with change of the tenuis into the media, just as in Sindhī. In Gujarātī the present participle ends in tō, as: लख्ती lakhtō, writing; in Hindī (Hindūst.) in tā, as: likhtā, hōtā, being etc. Hinduī tu, as: लिखत likh-tu, writing. The Marāthī has formed two present participial affixes from the Sanskrit affix आत; one in ta, corresponding to the Hindi form, as: [ [ ] [ ] [ ], writing, with which affix the terminations of the substantive verb coalesce into the forms to, tos etc.; the other in at or īt. The Bangālī has discontinued the use of the present participle (with the exception of a few Sanskrit participles ending in at) and only employs the same in conjunction with the substantive verb āchī, as: dēkhitēčhi, I am seeing; but dēkhitē is by no means to be confounded with the Infinitive, as it is commonly represented in Bangālī grammars, it is the Locative form of dēkhit, and signifies literally: I am in seeing (the Locative of the present participle is similarly used in Sindhī and Hindī).

11) Themes in āru, ārū, ārō.

These affixes correspond to the Sansk. affix and form in Sindhī verbal nouns, which imply a habitual action or occupation; their number is not very considerable; as:

a pedlar, Inf. گهژرارژ ghōrārū, a pedlar, Inf. گهژرارژ pūjārō, a worshipper, Inf. پُوجَارژ to worship. پُوجَارژ pīńārō, a cotton carder, Inf. پینجارژ to card pēnāru, a beggar, Inf. پِنَنُ to beg.

12) Themes in ibō.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix त्य, incredible as this may appear. In Sindhī त has been elided and vv (= य) hardened to b (= bb). It forms now in Sindhī present participles passive, though its original use and signification has still been preserved in the formation of the future passive; as:

بُوسَاتَىنُ būsāṭibō, being choked, Inf. بُوسَاتَىنُ to choke. بُوسَاتِبو قروهِبو d̄rōhibō, being cheated, Inf. تروهِبو to cheat. پَوسَانُ jhalibō, being seized, Inf. جَهَلِبو to seize.

13) Themes in iņō.

We have in Sindhī two themes in inō, which are quite of different origin and signification.

a) The affix ino, added to such verbs, as end in the Imperative in u, corresponds to the Sanskrit affix the affix ana has been changed to ino; e. g.:

هَلُ haliṇō, going, Imper. هَلُ أَمْرُكُ murkiṇō, laughing, Imper. مُرْكِنْهُ ضَرِّكُ chirkiṇō, shying, Imper. چَهِرْكِنْهُ bhuriṇō, crumbling, Imper. بَهُرُ piniṇō, begging, Imper. يِنُ

Some of these attributives are also used substantively, and as such they are also susceptible of the fem. termination, as:

čhiņkiņō, rattle, i. e. that which rattles.

phirinō, spooling-wheel, i. e. that which turns round.

دهَنْوَن dhavane, a pair of bellows, i. e. that which blows (the fire).

b) The other affix ino or ano corresponds to the Sanskrit affix 3.71, by which the future passive participle is formed in Sanskrit. Thus in Sindhī a Gerundive may be derived from every transitive verb by means of this affix, as:

مَارِنُ mariṇō, one who is to be beaten, Inf. مَارِنُ to beat. مَارِنُ diaṇō, what is to be given, Inf. دُنَّنُو to give.

to wash. دهُنَّن dhuaṇō, what is to be washed, Inf. دهُنَّن to wash. تَهَنُو raṭhaṇō, what is to be taken, Inf. وَتُهَنُو

In the same way a gerundive is derived form causal verbs, as:

رَائِنْوَ varāiṇō, what ought to be returned, Inf. وَرَائِنْوَ to return (act).

دهنارنو dhuāriṇō, what ought to be caused to wash,
Inf. دهنارن to cause to wash.

Note. In Hindī and Hindūstānī the Gerundive coincides with the Infinitive, with this difference, that the Gerundive is properly a masc. substantive, and therefore only a Gerund; very rarely the Infinitive is employed as a Gerundive proper (i. e. future passive participle), agreeing with its governing noun in gender, as in Sindhī. The Panjābī on the other hand quite agrees with the Sindhi in this respect, using the Infinitive as a regular Gerundive, agreeing with the governing noun in gender, number and case, like an adjective. The Marāthī forms the Gerundive by the affix आवा (आवी, आवें), which corresponds to the Sansk. affix तथ, Prak. तड, in Marathī त has been elided and in its place 'a' lengthened, as: करावा faciendus, Hislan dirumpendus. In a similar way the Gerundive is formed in Gujarātī by the affix अवो (= ता as: लखवो scribendus: In Bangali occurs no proper formation of a Gerundive, but the Infinitive (in distinction from the verbal noun) is generally employed to express the idea of a Gerund, like in Hindi, as: amākē jāitē hai, mihi eundum est; but many original Gerundive forms are borrowed directly from the Sanskrit, as: kartavya etc., the affix anīya is also in use.

14) Themes in io or yo.

The affix iō or yō is used to derive perfect participles; it corresponds to the Sanskrit affix  $\overline{\mathbf{n}}$ , Prākrit already  $\overline{\mathbf{c}}$ , and frequently altogether elided, for which reason y or i is inserted in Sindhī, to prevent the hiatus.

The perfect participle of transitive verbs always implies a passive signification, whereas that of intransitive verbs only expresses the idea of the Præterite.

In many instances the Sindhī has preserved the original Sanskrit-Prākrit forms of the perfect participles, modified according to the laws of elision and assimilation current in Sindhī.

pasyō (or پَسَيْو pasiō) seen, Inf. پَسَيْو to see. جَهَلَنُ jhalyō (or: جَهَلِثُو jhaliō) seized, Inf. جَهَلِيْو to seize.

mōṭyō (or: مؤتَّنُ mōṭyō (or: مؤتَّنُ mōṭiō), returned, Inf. مؤتَّنُ to return.

ثِسَنُ địthō, seen; Sansk. દેશ, Prāk. दिहो; Inf. ثِسَنُ to see.

utō, said; Sansk. जत्त, Prāk. जती; Inf. أَتَنُ to say.

Note. In reference to the formation of the perfect participles (the perfect participle active in has completely disappeared from the grammar of the modern vernaculars) a great variation is to be noticed in the cognate dialects. The Panjābī, Gujarātī, Hindī and Hindūstānī quite agree in this point with the Sindhī, as Panjābī: ghalliā, sent, Inf. ghallnā; Gujarātī: lakhyō, written; Hindī (Hindūst.): likhā (without insertion of euphonic i or y in the place of elided t or d), Inf. likhnā.

The Marāthī differs considerably in this respect from the idioms mentioned; it forms the perfect participle by affixing to the root of the verb (with the junction vowel a or i, according to the intransitive or transitive signification of a verb). The first traces of this affix must be sought already in Prākrit; the Sansk.  $\pi$  has been changed in Prākrit to the corresponding media  $\mathbf{z}$ , and this again to  $\mathbf{z}$  (d); see Lassen: Instit. linguae Prāk., p. 363. We have seen already (Introd. §. 6, 4) that  $\mathbf{z}$  is frequently changed to  $\mathbf{z}$  in the modern idioms, and this is again exchanged for 1; as:  $\mathbf{z}$  gone, Inf.  $\mathbf{z}$  is  $\mathbf{z}$  broken, Inf.  $\mathbf{z}$  is  $\mathbf{z}$ .

The Bangālī coincides in this point quite with the Hindī, as: dēkhā, seen (without insertion of euphonic i or y).

Chapter III.

Secondary themes.

§. 10.

Under this head we shall class all those themes, which are derived from other nouns by means of an affix. We shall pass again all those forms, which have been taken directly from the Sanskrit-Prākrit, and only treat of those formations, which are peculiar to the Sindhī.

I. Formation of abstract nouns.

Abstract nouns may be derived either from substantives or adjectives, the affixes which the Sindhī uses for this purpose, agree all, more or less, with the primitive Sanskrit-Prākrit affixes.

1) Themes in ī. (f.)

By the affix  $\bar{\imath}$  a very numerous class of abstract nouns is formed, which, after the analogy of the Persian, may be derived from any noun. The final vowel is always dropped before this affix, but in other respects the noun undergoes no change whatever.

The affix ī corresponds to the Sanskrit affix ಫ (n.); in Sindhī as well as in the other dialects the feminine form ī, which is already current in Sanskrit, has alone been retained; e. g.:

čōrī, theft, from چۇر čōru, thief.

mandō, wicked. مَنْدُو mandō, wicked.

kamī, deficiency, from کَبِي kamī, deficient.

2) Themes in āī. (f.)

The affix  $\bar{a}\bar{i}$  is only a variation of the preceding affix; final  $u (= \bar{o})$  and  $\bar{o}$  are not dropped, as before the preceding affix, but changed to  $\bar{a}$  (as in the other dialects) to keep their place; e. g.:

يَوْمَلُ nirmalāī, purity, from نِوْمَلُ nirmalu, pure. نِوْمَلُ kūṛāī, falsity, from كُوزَائِي kūṛō, false.

Both forms are therefore frequently used indifferently, as:

بهَاي bhalī, goodness, or: بهَار bhalāī, from بهَاي bhalō, good.

3) Themes in tā and tāī. (f.)

The affix tā forms in Sindhī a very numerous class of abstract nouns from attributives and adjectives; the final vowel is always dropped and the union-vowel i inserted (except when the noun ends in i). The affix tā corresponds to the Sanskrit affix  $\Pi$ , which is used for the same purpose in Sanskrit. Besides the affix tā, the emphatic form with I (tā-I) is also in use; e. g.:

ghațita, کهَیّ ghațitāī, کهیّتاثِی ghațitāī, کهیّتاثِی jōgitā, fitness, from جؤكتا بركتا

4) Themes in te; tī. (f.)

The affix te, which is else only used with primary formations, is in Sindhī also (though very rarely) found with secondary formations; the affix tī, which is also occasionally to be met with, is only a variation of te (i having been lengthened to ī); as:

sāvate, straightness, from سَنْوِتِ sãō, straight. کَهَتِي ghaṭitī, deficiency, from کَهَتِي

Note. The affix tī is also used in Hindūstānī, as: كَبْتِي deficiency, from كُمْ

5) Themes in ane or aine. (f.)

These affixes form a numerous class of abstract nouns from adjectives implying colour or some other inherent quality. They correspond to the Sanskrit affix EHA, which forms abstract masc. nouns. In Prākrit the termination NA may already be lengthened to NU (cf. Var. V, 47); in Sindhī H (m) has been elided, which is rather uncommon, and a feminine termination substituted for the masculine; the i of iman has been dropped = āṇe, whereas in the form āiṇe i has been inserted after ā, to render the 'a' more prominent. E. g.:

ačhāne, whiteness, from اَچهانِ ačhō, white. vēkirāne, breadth, from مِيكِروُ vēkirō, broad.

vaḍāṇe, greatness, from زُدُّو vaḍō, great.

The affix āṇe (āiṇe) is very often exchanged for the affix āī (see 2.), and with many nouns both affixes are promiscuously used, as: كَارَائِي or كَارَائِي blackness.

Note. In Hindī and Hindūstānī the affix ma (= $44) is rarely used, and no longer as a masculine; e. g.: garimā, f., importance. In Gujurūtī the affix ān is used (as neuter) e. g.: is

6) Themes in pō, pā, pāī, pi; paṇu, paṇō; taṇu; āṭu. These affixes form a very numerous class of abstract nouns from substantives and adjectives. We can see in this instance, how the Sindhī has menaged to derive from one and the same Sanskrit affix a whole series of abstract affixes, which at the first glance seem to have nothing in common.

The affixes pō, pa, pāī, pī are derived from the Sansk. abstract-affix \overline{A} tva, which is assimilated to \overline{A} (see Introd. §. 15, D, b.); from this the Sindhī has formed the various terminations pā, pa, pāī, pī.

From the self-same affix  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$ , which has become  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$  in Prākrit (from an original  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$ ), and which has been assimilated in the Apabhransha dialect to  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$  (see Lassen, p. 459, 9.) the Sindhī has derived the affixes paņu or paņō.

From the same source has also sprung the affix tanu, but by a different process of assimilation, the semi-vowel v being assimilated to the preceding dental (cf. §. 15, D, b.).

Another form of assimilation is the affix āṭu (viz: tva = tta = ṭṭa = āṭa, the double consonant being cleared away by lengthening the preceding vowel), which is only rarely used.

The final vowels undergo various changes before the accession of the above mentioned affixes; final u is generally changed to 'a' or 'i', with the exception of the fem. nouns ending in 'u', which preserve 'u' (as radical) before all affixes; final ō is either weakened to 'a' or changed to ō; final ī is either shortened to 'i', or with a subsounding 'a' to 'ia', which is mostly the case before the heavy affixes paṇu, paṇō; final ū is shortened to 'u' with a subsounding 'a' (= ua) before the heavy affixes paṇu, paṇō; long ū though keeps now and then its place before them; before the lighter affixes pō, pa, pāī, pī final ū is shortened even to 'i' (for euphony's sake). Final short 'a' may be lengthened to ā, to distinguish the feminine themes from those ending in 'u'; but this depends on usage.

a) final u:

panditapano, m. The duty of a pandit; from المَنْدُنُ from.

دُوكِرَاكُ čhōkirāṭu, m. The time of youth; from چهؤکړ čhōkaru, a boy.

تَهُتَ vathupa; f. assistance; from تَّهُ fem. laying hold of.

b) final ō:

تَنْدُّهَ nandhapāi, f. كَنْدُّهَ مَهْ nandhapāi, f. Time of youth; from تَنْدُّهَ مَهُ الَّذِي تُنْدُهُ مَهُ nandhāpāṇu, m. nandhō, small.

c) final $\bar{i}$ :

vāhipa, f. واهِي vāhipō, m. The duty of a واهِيو m. or watchman.

كَاندهِ لَهُ kāndhiapa, f. kāndhī, one who gives a shoulder in carrying a corpse.

mukhitaṇu, the duty of a مُكهِتَنُ mukhī or headsman.

d) final $\bar{\mathbf{u}}$ :

أَنْهِيوْ māṇhipō, humanity, from مَانْهُونِ māṇhuapaṇo, humanity, from مَانْهُنَوْ māṇhuapaṇo, mirūpaṇō, bestiality, from مِرُون mirū, wild beast.

ranāpaṇu, widowhood, from رَنَ ranā, a widow. ِزَالَ zālapaṇu, womanhood, from زَالَ a woman.

Note. These abstract affixes are to be met with in all the cognate idioms. The Hindī and Hindūstānī use the affixes pan, panā and pā, corresponding to the Sindhī forms paņu, paņō and pō. The Gujarāthī: paṇ and paṇū (both neut.); the Marāṭhī: paṇ (n.) and paṇā (m.); the Panjābī: puṇā. The Bangālī comes nearest to the Sanskrit in this respect, having retained the original abstract affix tva unaltered.

7) Themes in kāru, kārō, kāra, kāre.

These themes fall under our consideration in this place not so much on account of their formation, as their signification, for we have here not to deal with an affix, but with an adjective, used to form compounds, and signifying: making, effecting. In Sindhī the original signification of at has been already obliterated, and it is now used in the same way as an affix, to form a number of abstract nouns; e.g.:

ا لُچهِكَارِوُ lučhikārō, uneasiness, properly: that which makes لُجهَا lučha, or being tossed about.

vaṇakāru, wood, forest; properly: that which وَنَكَارِ vaṇakāre, produces trees (وَنَى).

تهَدهِكَار thadhekāra, cool temperature; properly: that which makes coolness (تهَده).

8) Themes in kō and ō.

The affix kō serves originally to derive adjectives, and corresponds to the Sansk. affix 37; but in Sindhī it is sometimes used (as the preceding affix 37) to form abstract nouns; the affix ō is identical with kō, k having been elided. E. g.:

الْچِهِكَارُوُ lučhikō, uneasiness; the same as: الْچِهِكَارُوُ. dhūryō, a duststorm; properly: that which makes sand (دهُوڙ).

§. 10.

II. Formation of apellatives, attributives and possessives.

9) Themes in ī.

This affix, which in Sindhī and the kindred idioms is so frequently employed, has sprung from three different sources:

a) The affix ī, corresponding to the Sanskrit affix 34.

This affix forms attributives and appellatives of various significations; the root-vowel is generally lengthened before the addition of this affix, i. e. 'a' becomes  $\bar{a}$ ;  $\ddot{i}$ :  $\bar{e}$ ; ' $\ddot{u}$ ':  $\bar{o}$ ; e. g.:

اوتهِي ōthī, a camel-rider, from اوتهِي uṭhu, camel. bākirī, a seller of vegetables, from بَكُرُ bakaru, vegetables.

تهيكري ṭhēkirī, a seller of earthen-ware; from تهيكري ṭhēkiru, earthen-ware.

b) The affix  $\bar{i}$ , corresponding to the Sansk. affix  $\bar{\xi}u$ ,  $\bar{\xi}u$ .

This affix denotes in all the modern vernaculars descent or relationship. Before its addition to a noun a final short vowel is dropped, long  $\bar{u}$  is shortened to 'u', and  $\bar{o}$  is changed to  $\bar{a}$ . In some instances final short 'u' (shortened from  $\bar{o}$ ) is changed to  $\bar{a}$  (=  $\bar{o}$ ) and thus preserved; e. g.:

ينْدهِي sindhī, of Sindh, from سِنْدهِ f. sindhu, the country of Sindh.

هِنْدُوْ hinduī, relating to a Hindū, from هِنْدُوْ, hindū, a Hindū.

ا گَرْتِي lāṛī, of Lāṛ, from گُرُّةُ m. laṛu, Lower Sindh. گُرُّةً الْمُعِي الْمَاءِ الْمَاءِ الْمُرَائِي sirāī, of Sirō, from سِرَائِي sirō, Upper Sindh.

c) The affix  $\bar{\imath}$ , corresponding to the Sansk. affix  $\bar{\xi}$ . (Nom. Sing.  $\bar{\imath}$ .)

The Sindhī affix ī serves to form possessive nouns, like the Sansk. affix इन; e. g.:

َهُ dāhī, complainant, from دَانْهِي dāha, complaint. rōgī, sick, from رُكُ rōgū, sickness. وَكُلِي mālī, gardener, Sansk. मालिन्.

In such formations, as are peculiar to the Sindhī, a final short vowel may keep its place before the affix  $\bar{i}$ , as:

mataī, tenacious of one's opinion or sect, from مَتَثَي make opinion or religion (final 'e' being exchanged for 'a', for euphony's sake).

· 10) Themes in āi.

The affix  $\bar{a}\bar{\imath}$  is only a variation of the affix  $\bar{\imath}$  (9, a), final 'u' and  $\bar{o}$  of such themes, as end in 'u' and  $\bar{o}$  being again changed before it to  $\bar{a}$ ; nouns thus formed imply an occupation, habit or tendency, as:

بَاكَاتِي bāgāī, gardener, from بَاكُ bāgu, garden. بَيْجَاتِي nēčāī, a maker of huqqah-snakes, from نِيْجَاتِي nēčō a huqqah-snake.

جَهُكِّرُائِي jhagirāī, a quarreller, from جَهُكِّرُو jhagirō, quarrel.

11) Themes in ū.

The affix  $\bar{\mathbf{u}}$ , corresponding to the Sansk. affix  $\mathbf{San}$ , is added to substantives, by means of which, as in the primary formations, apellatives and adjectives are derived, denoting an habitual action or state. A final vowel is always dropped before the addition of this affix;

in some nouns the first vowel is lengthened at the same time; e. g.:

hāńū, injurious, from هَانِجُ hāńe, injury.

vērū, revengeful, from بيرُو vēru; enmity.

خهَا خِهَا خُهَا دُّهُ čhāpirū, a mountaineer, from چهَاپرو čhaparu, a range of hills.

بَاكهِروْ, bākhirū, a man of Bakhar, from بَكَهُرُ bakharu, a town of upper Sindh.

12) Themes in aū.

The affix  $\bar{a}\bar{u}$  is identical with the preceding, the only difference being that the final vowel of the theme is lengthened before the affix  $\bar{u}$  (fin.  $u = a = \bar{a}$ ).

دَّهُ مُاتُو dharmāū, religious, from هُوُمَا لَو dharmu, religion. هُوُمَاتُو šarmāū, bashful, from, شَرْمُ šarmu, shame, modesty.

13) Themes in āð.

The affix  $\bar{\mathbf{a}}$  is already so much corrupted, that its origin is scarcely recognisable; it corresponds to the Sanskrit affix  $\mathbf{H}\mathbf{Z}$ , which forms adjectives, denoting "made of, consisting of." The labial m has been elided in this affix as well as in the abstract affix  $\mathbf{Z}\mathbf{H}\mathbf{Z}$ , and a has been lengthened in compensation thereof. The semi-vowel y has likewise disappeared,  $\bar{\mathbf{a}}$   $\bar{\mathbf{o}}$  =  $\bar{\mathbf{a}}$ y $\bar{\mathbf{o}}$ ; the final Anusvāra is altogether euphonic and more or less option  $\mathbf{a}$ ; e. g.:

haidrāō, made of هَيْدُرَ haidrāō, turmeric.

َ jāmbhō, a kind جَانْبِهَاتُونِ jāmbhō, a kind of oil-seed.

lohu, iron. لوهُ lohaō, made of لوهَادُون

14) Themes in ō.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix 3; it forms adjectives and attributives in the largest sense. The final short vowel of a noun is always dropped before this affix, and  $\bar{u}$  and  $\bar{\imath}$  are shortened. The root-vowel either remains unaltered or is lengthened, viz: 'a' to  $\bar{a}$ ,  $\bar{\imath}$  to  $\bar{e}$  and 'u' to  $\bar{o}$ ; as:

saghā, strength. سَكَةُ saghā, strength. ونكُّ vingō, crooked, from ونكُّ vingū, a crook.

إنكُ bhakūō, stupid, from ونكُ bhakū, a blockhead.

إلا كُونُ vičū, midst.

إلا كُونُ bārōčō, of a Beluch, from بَارُوْجِوْ bārōčū, a Beluch.

إلا كُونُ أَنْ bārōčō, of a camel, from اوتهوا وققوق وققق, of a cow, from المَّالِينُ وقيقة وققوق, of a cow, from المَّالِينُ وقيقة وقيقة māhyō, of a buffalo, from مينهه mēhe, a buffalo. ماهيو saiō, hundredth (per cent), from مَاهيؤ sau, hundred.

15) Themes in āru (aru), ārō; ālu.

These affixes correspond to the Sansk. affix significant (in Prākrit likewise significant of. Var. IV, 26), which forms possessive nouns. In Sindhī r and l are interchanged, and in some nouns āru has been shortened to aru. The root-vowel commonly remains unaltered, but in some nouns 'u' is changed to ō (i. e. 'u' takes Guṇa); as:

mēhāru, or a buffalo keeper, from مِيهَارُ mēharu, buffalo.

čōṭyaru, having a چۇتىي čōṭī, bundle of hair on the crown of the head.

دهَنْارُ dhaṇāru, a herdsman, from دهَنْارُ dhaṇu, a herd of cattle.

oṭhāru, a camel-herd, from اُتهُ uṭhu, camel. javālu, containing barley, from جَوَالُ jau, barley. Some of these formations, with the affix ālu or ālō, are used in a substantive sense, their original possessive signification being more or less lost, as:

a Gong; literally: containing or كَهَاتِيَالُو ghaṛyālu, a Gong; literally: containing or عَهَالُونَالُو ghaṛyālō, expressing the hour (گَهَالُونَالُو diālu, candlestick; literally: having a light (وُتَـُونُ).

jhuṛālō, cloudiness; literally: containing clouds (جَهُوَّالُوْ 16) Themes in īrō and īlō, or: ērō and ēlē.

These affixes correspond to the Sansk.  $\S$  and  $\S$  and form attributives, signifying: habit, quality or intensity;  $\tilde{e}r\tilde{o}$  and  $\tilde{e}lo$  have sprung from the Prākrit affix illa (Var. IV, 25); e. g.:

كهَانْدهِيروُ khāndhīrō, patient, from كهَانْدهِيروُ khāndhe, patience.

haṭhīlō, obstinate, from هَتْهِيلُو haṭhu, obstinacy. خَهَانُويرو čhẫvērō, shadowy, from چَهَانُويلُو čhẫvēlō, shadowy, from چَهَانُويلُو čhẫva, shade. تَهَرِيلُو tharēlō, of the Thar, having the custom of the Thar or desert.

čamēlō, leathern, from چَہيلوڠ čamēlō, leathern

17) Themes in iru.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix \(\) (with the union-vowel i) and forms attributives and appellatives as well as possessive nouns; a final vowel, short or long, is always dropped before the addition of this affix; e. g.:

sandhiru, a house-breaker, from سَنْدهِ sandhe, a hole in a wall.

jhātīru, a peeper, from جهَاتِي jhātī, looking through a hole.

خْفِينْبِهِر čhīmbhiru, a rebuker, from چْفِينْبِهِر čhīmb bha, rebuke.

أَجْهِرُ jhapiru, one who snatches, from جَهَيْوُ jhapō, a snatch.

pētiru, a glutton, from پیتر pētu, belly. vihiru, poisonous, from وهُو f. poison.

18) Themes in atu and ālū.

This affix has sprung from the Sanskrit affix H\(\bar{\pi}\) by elision of \(\mathbr{H}\); in some nouns 'a' has been lengthened, to compensate for the elision of m; it forms possessive nouns, just as in Sanskrit; e. g.:

bharī, a man's بهَرْيَت bharyatu, a porter, from بهَرْيَت bharī, a man's پورهِيو pōrhiatu, a labourer, from پورهِيو pōrhiō, labour. وَرَهِيَتُ d̄iaṇyātu, a debtor, from ثِنَّنِياتُ d̄iaṇī, a debt.

19) Themes in ētō (itō).

The Sindhī affix ētō corresponds to the Sansk. affix ₹7, denoting "to be provided with", to possess as one's own. The short i of the Sansk. affix has in Sindhī been produced to ē, on account of the accent; the final vowel is always dropped before this affix; e. g.:

paṭru, son. پُتْرِيتوْ puṭrētō, having a son, from پُتْرِيتوْ

مَوْمَيْتُو dhiētō, having a daughter, from مُومِّقُيْتُو dhia, daughter.

jōētō, having a wife, from جوء jōe, wife.

bhāitō, having a brother, from بهَادِّتوْ bhāu, brother.

20) Themes in āitō.

This affix is identical with the preceding in derivation and signification, the only difference being that final ō, 'u' and 'a' are changed before it to ā, as:

vārāitō, adj., at the right time, from وَارَاكِتوَ vārō, time.

sajhāitō, adj., opportune, from جَهَايْتنوُ sajhu, opportunity.

vāṭāitō, having a road, from وَاتَاكِتُو vāṭa, a road.

21) Themes in ru and lu.

a) The affix ru corresponds to the Sansk. diminutive affix  $\mathbf{I}$ , and is affixed to adjectives and participles present, with some slight variation of the original meaning; when added to adjectives the root-vowel is now and then lengthened. Final 'u' and  $\bar{o}$  are changed to 'a' before the addition of this affix;  $\bar{i}$  remains unaltered.

لَهُ khābaṛu, left-handed, from كَهَبُوْ khābō, left. sājō, right-sājō, right. أكهَسُ khasaṛu, sterile, from كَهَسُ khasu, not fully developed.

kāčhirō, of the province of Kačh, from كَاچِهِيّ, a Kāčhī.

jaikhandaru, a writer, from كَهَنْدُو part. pres. writing.

b) The affix lu is identical with the affix ru (r [r] = 1) and turns preterite participles into simple adjectives; it is seldom found with adjectives, the signification of which it does not change materially.

vialu, lost, from وِئْقُ viō, gone, lost. وَتَهُوْ diṭhalu, seen, from وُتَهُوْ diṭhō, seen. visūralu, simple-minded, from وِسُورَّوْ visūrō, simple-minded.

Similarly in Prākrit the affix r or 1 (dimin.) is added to nouns and adjectives, without essentially altering their signification (cf. Varar. IV, 26), as Sansk. aga lightening, Prāk. as a fas or as for lightening, Prāk. as a fas or as for lightening.

The same affix ला we notice in the Marāṭhī, where it is added to preterite participles to turn them into real adjectives, as: चाललेला gone (from चालला); मोडिलेंग broken (from मोडिला); the same holds good in Gujarātī, as: लखेलो, written (Adj.) (from लखो).

22) Themes in iryō.

The affix iryō is originally compounded of the diminutive affix  $\mathbf{T}$  (= r) and the adjectival affix yō ( $\mathbf{T}$ ); it forms adjectives and attributives denoting inclination or hesitation; e. g.:

sadhiryō, half-wishing; literally: being somewhat disposed to wish.

كهوْرِتِيوْ ghōriṛyō, a pedlar; i. e. one who is inclined to seek out.

پيرڙيو pēriryō, a walker; literally: disposed to travel afoot.

پَرَمَتِّيو paramatiryō, easily persuaded; literally: disposed to take another's counsel.

23) Themes in āku and ākū.

These Uṇādi-affixes, which else only occur with primary themes, are in Sindhī also used (but very rarely) in secondary formations, as:

jhērāku, duarrelsome, from جهيزًاكُ jhērāku, contention.

24) Themes in ikō.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix 1 (in Sindhī with the addition of the union-vowel i) and forms adjectives, denoting relation, quality etc. A final vowel, short or long, is dropped before this affix; final ū alone is shortened to 'u' and takes the union-vowel 'a' instead of 'i'; e.g.:

vāpārikō, mercantile, from وَاپَارُكوْ vāpāru, trade. وَاپَارُكوْ vāṇikō, relating to a وَانِكُوْ vāṇyō or shopkeeper. وَانِكُوْ hārikō, relating to a هَارِي hārī or peasant.

miruakō, brutal, from مِرُوكو miruakō, a wild beast.

25) Themes in īčō or ēčō.

These affixes have sprung from the Sansk. affix ξā, and form adjectives denoting descent or origin. In Sindhī 'i' has been lengthened to ī or even to ē, and the guttural k has been exchanged for the palatal č. The final vowel, short or long, is always cast off before these affixes; e. g.:

وَتَهِيجِوْ ḡōṭhēčō, of the same village, from وَتَهِيجِوْ ḡō-thu, village.

pārēčō, of the same quarter, from پَاڙِيچو pārō, quarter.

pārēčō, of the opposite side, from پَارِ adv., opposite.

vērhīčō, of the jungle, from ويرهيجوو vērhīčō, of the jungle.

26) Themes in ōkō.

This affix, which is added only to nouns or adverbs, denoting time, is identical with the affix \(\beta\); the union-vowel \(\bar{\phi}\) is peculiar and not to be met with elsewhere; every final vowel, short or long, is dropped before it; e. g.:

varehōkō, yearly, from وَرِهُوَكُوْ varehōkō, yearly, from وَرُهُوَكُوْ rātōkō, nightly, from رَاتِوْكُوْ hānē, now. adj. هَانْوُكُوْ hānē, now. adj.

كَالَهُ kālhōkō, of yester (day or night), from كَالَهُ kālha, yesterday, adv.

parōkō, of last year, from چَرْوَكوْ (fem.) last year.

A few other adjectives are formed by the same affix, with the further difference, that the root-vowel is lengthened, as:

چَاندٌروَكوَ čānḍrōkō, moonlight, from چَاندٌروَكوَ čanḍru, moon.

27) Themes in āņō (aņu, iņō), ānikō.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix  $\overline{\xi}$ , and forms adjectives denoting relation or descent. It is remarkable, that the original union-vowel 'i' has been dislodged in Sindhī and ā substituted in its place (compare with this such Latin forms, as: romānus, africānus). The adjectives, formed by the affix ānō may moreover add the affix kō (with the union vowel 'i'), so that we thus have adjectives with a double affix, which do not materially differ from the simple forms in ānō; e. g.:

cōrāṇō, چۇرانۇ cōrānikō, of a thief, from چۇرانكۇ čōrūnikō, lučāṇō, rascally, from لَيْ lučō, rascal.

dhiāṇō, of a daughter, from دهِمَّانو dhiaṇō, of a daughter.

مِرْتَانْدِ miruāṇō, of a wild beast, from مِرْرَان miruāṇō, wild beast.

بهَايَانُوْ bhāyāṇō, of a partner, from بهَاتِّي bhāj, partner.

In a few nouns a short root-vowel is lengthened, as:

خَانَّدُرَانُو رَقَّمَاطِتُمْ رَانُو رَقَمَاطِتُمْ رَانُو رَقَمَاطِتُمُ رَانُو رَقَمَاطِتُمُ رَانُ وَقَمَاطِتُمُ وَانَّالُ وَنَوْ وَمَاطُتُمُ وَانَّالُ وَنَوْ وَمَاطُتُمُ وَانَّالُ وَنَوْ وَمَاطُتُمُ وَانْكُمُ وَنَوْ وَمَاطُتُمُ وَانْكُمُ وَنَوْ وَمَاطُتُمُ وَانْكُمُ وَنَوْ وَمَاطُتُمُ وَانْكُمُ وَنَوْ وَمَاطُتُمُ وَمُعَالِّمُ وَمُعَالِّمُ وَمُعَالِّمُ وَمُعَالِمُ وَمُعَلِّمُ وَمُعَلِّمُ وَمُعَلِّمُ وَمُعَلِّمُ وَمُعَلِّمُ وَمُعَلِمُ وَمُعَلِمُ وَمُعَلِمُ وَمُعَلِمُ وَمُعَلِمُ وَمُعَلِمُ وَمُعَلِمُ وَمُعِلِمُ وَمُعِلَمُ وَمُعِلِمُ وَمُعِلِمُ وَمُعِلِمُ وَمُعِلِمُ وَمُعِلِمُ وَمُعَلِمُ وَمُعَلِمُ وَمُعِلِمُ ومُعِلِمُ وَمُعِلِمُ ومُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ ومُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ ومُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ ومُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ ومُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ ومُعِلِمُ مُعِلِمُ مُعِ

28) Themes in ūnō (ūnikō).

a) This affix is identical with the preceding, but the union-vowel has been exchanged for ū; in signification there is no difference; e. g.:

sēṭhūṇō, of a Sēṭh, from سيتهُونو sēṭhe, a wholesale merchant.

vātu, mouth. وَاتُونُوْ vātuņō, oral, from وَاتُونُوْ agūņō, preceding, from اَکُونُو agū, front.

كَالُهُ kālhūṇō, of yester (— day or night), from كَالُهُ لَهُ kālha, yesterday.

To the affix uno the affix ko (iko) may be superadded, without altering the signification in any way, as:

agūṇikō, the same as: اَكُونِكُو agūṇikō.

b) There is another affix uno, which is joined to numerals, identical in form with the preceding, but of different origin. It is derived from the Sansk. noun नुसा (quality), with elision of g in Sindhī and prolongation of ū. In Panjābī both forms, guņā and uņā, are in use, so that there cannot remain any doubt about its derivation.1) It forms adjectives from numerals, signifying: having such a quality, or: manifold, as:

هيكُرنْو hēkūṇō, single (having a single quality), from hēku, one.

panjūņō, quintuple, from پَجُّونُو panjūņō, five. saūnō, hundredfold, from سَوُّن saū, hundred.

29) Themes in āņī.

This affix, corresponding to the Sansk. affix Mufa, forms patronymics or nouns denoting descent; the short final 'i' of the Sansk. affix has been lengthened in Sindhī, as in other similar nouns. A final short vowel is dropped before this affix, likewise ō; final ī is changed to y (= i) and ū is shortened; e. g.:

تَحْبُودَ mahmūdāṇī, son or descendant of تَحْبُودَانِي mahmūdu.

آرِيَانِي āryāṇī, son of آرِيَانِي ārī. آدُو āḍuāṇī, son of آدُتُانِي āḍū. bāgāṇī, son of بَاكُانِي bāgō.

30) Themes in īņō.

This affix corresponds to the Sansk. affix § and forms adjectives denoting relation or descent; as:

sanīṇō, affianced, from سَنگينْو sanu, connexion by marriage.

vasīṇō, subjected, from وَسِينُو , power.

31) Themes in āṭhō.

This affix coincides with the Sansk. affix NIC (with transition of t into th); it forms possessive nouns, as in Sanskrit; e. g.:

پَانِيَاتُهوْ pāṇyāṭhō, damp (containing water), from پَانِي pāṇī, water.

چَهَبَرَاتُهوْ čhabarāṭhō, containing چَهَبَرُ čhabaru, a kind of grass.

32) Themes in āsō (āsū).

This affix, corresponding to the Sansk. affix T, forms adjectives, denoting "to be full of", to be provided with"; as union-vowel ā has been inserted; as:

vāryāsō, sandy, from وَارِيَاسُو vārī, sand. وَارِيَاسُو vāryāsō, sandy, from مَوَّاسُ mavāsu, full of pride, from مَوَّاسُ

33) Themes in hāru or hārō.

This affix is in Sindhī and in the cognate dialects added to verbal nouns (i. e. the Infinitive); it forms a kind of participle, which is commonly used as a sub-In Marāthī it forms the participle stantive noun. future, as it implies at the same time the notion of some future act or state; in Sindhī too it is now and then used in a future sense. It is to be noted though, that the Marāthī affix is not WII, as commonly shown in Marāthī grammars, but आ; a like mistake is generally to be met with in Gujarātī grammars, where it is stated to be ATI. In Marāthī and Gujarātī the form of the affix is clearly enough आ, corresponding to the Sansk. adjective and, making, doing, with elision of a. In Sindhī, Hindī and Panjābī it is hār, which form is to be explained in this way, that initial a has been originally aspirated by the following \(\mathbf{\cei}\) (which is very frequently the case in Sindhi), and then elided, leaving h (see Introd. §. 8). In Sindhī the form hāru, hārō, is only added to the Infinitive, in other themes the original form kāru has been retained unaltered; e. g.:

sirjaṇahāru, the creator, Inf. سِرْجَنَهَارُ to create. الْكَهَنَهَارُ likhaṇahāru, a writer, or one, who is about to write; Inf. الكهَنَا to write.

34) Themes in kāru, karu.

The original adjective form kāru (in Sindhī also shortened karu) is also (but rarely) in use; it forms adjectives and attributives from substantives; as unionvowel ā is inserted:

jhēṛākāru, duarrelsome, causing quarrel, بهيزًاكُرُ jhēṛō, quarrel. جهيزًاكُرُ

35) Themes in vānu.

The Sindhī has preserved in this affix the Nom. Sing. of the Sansk. affix  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$  (=  $v\bar{a}$ n), and discarded the Prākrit form  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$ ; the same is the case in the cognate dialects, with the exception of the Gujarātī, which uses the termination  $\overline{\mathbf{q}}$ . It forms adjectives, implying possession; e. g.:

دَيَاوَانَ dayāvānu, compassionate, from دَيَاوَانَ dayā, compassion.

vijāvānu, learned, from رِجَاوَانُ vijā, learning. وَجَاوَانُ sīlavānu, virtuous, from سِيلُوانُ sīlu, virtue.

36) Themes in vārõ.

This is one of the most useful affixes of the modern vernaculars; it may be joined to any verbal noun or substantive, and denotes an owner or actor; this affix is most extensively used in Hindūstānī (vālā), where it is used as a substitute for different formations. It corresponds to the Sansk. affix  $\overline{40}$ , from which it has been derived by lengthening the root-vowel. It is to be observed, that if must be joined to the formative or oblique case of a noun.

gharavārō, owner of a house, from كَهَرَوَاروْ house.

gharanevārō, owner of houses.

قِتُنَوَاروْ diaṇavārō, a giver, Inf. قِتُنَوَ diaṇavārō, to give. وَچَوَاروْ vičavārō, mediator, from وِچَوَاروْ viču, midst. وَجُوَاروْ bēṛiavārō, boatman, from بِيرِّعُوراروْ

37) Themes in yō.

The affix yō, corresponding to the Sansk. affix 4, forms adjectives from substantives, as:

بهَاكُ bhāgyō, fortunate, from بهَاكُ bhāgu, fortune; luck.

vikevikhyō, a grumbling person, from وَكِوكِيو vikevike, grumbling.

jōyo, effeminate, from جؤيؤ ) jōe, wife.

Chapter IV.

Formation of Diminutives.

§. 11.

The Sindhī evinces a great facility in forming different kinds of Diminutives; it surpasses in this respect all the kindred dialects, being able to derive diminutives from any substantive, adjective or even participle.

The one method, to express the idea of a diminutive, is, to substitute the feminine termination for the masculine, the feminine expressing generally: smallness, littleness, nicety, as: الله kātu, m. a large knife, كَاتِي kātī, fem. a small knife (cf. §. 5, VI, 2, c).

An old diminutive formation has been preserved in a few straggling words, ending in ōṭru (ōṭrō) or ōṭu (ōṭō); the same formation is still current in the Paṣṭō (ōṭa, ūṭai), where diminutives are regularly derived by mears of this affix. The origin of this diminutive affix is rather uncertain; e. g. Sindhī:

بَاهُوتِي bāhōṭī, a small fire, from بَاهِ bāhe, fire; jāmōṭru, the headman of a village (literally: a little جَامُ jāmu or Jām, prince); ثِنَّاتِي ḍiāṭī, a small light, from ثِرَّةُ وَرَّهُ d̄iō, an oil-light.

Besides these formations the Sindhī uses for the purpose of forming diminutives proper two affixes, which are originally identical; viz.: ēro (= rō, the union-vowel i' having been produced to ē, on account of the accent), which is added to adjectives only, and rō, which is promiscuously joined to adjectives and substantives. Both these affixes correspond to the Sanskrit diminutive affix \(\mathbf{\chi}\) r, from which the Sindhī, after its own peculiar method, has menaged to form two separate diminutive affixes. The other diminutive affix of the Sanskrit, \(\mathbf{\chi}\) k, is not in use in Sindhī, but is so in Hindī, Marāthī and Panjābī.

1) The affix ērō.

This deminutive affix is, as noted already, added to adjectives only and implies: somewhat more or less (as the case may be), rather, very; e. g.:

زگهيرو drighērō, somewhat long, adj. قُرِگهو drighō, long.

تهوريرو thōrērō, rather little, adj. تهوريرو thōrō, little. گهتيرو ghaṭērō, rather deficient, adj. گهتيرو ghaṭe, deficient.

2) The termination ro, fem. rī.

This diminutive affix is joined to substantives and adjectives, even to such, as have already received the affix ērō; it denotes smallness, littleness, deficiency, tenderness or contempt. In order to point out more effectually the idea of the diminutive, the feminine termination rī may be chosen, instead of the masculine. The Sindhī poëts use the diminutives with great taste and delicacy, and know to give different shades to their pictures by their proper application. The final vowels undergo the following changes before the addition of the affix  $r\bar{o}$  ( $r\bar{i}$ ):

- 1) Final u (m.) is changed to 'a' or 'i', with the exception of fem. nouns ending in 'u', wich remain unaltered.
- 2) In the same way final ō is changed to 'a' or 'i'.
- 3) Final 'a' remains unaltered.
- 4) Final 'i' remains unaltered or passes (for euphony's sake) into 'a'.
- 5) Final ī and ū are shortened with a subsounding 'a' (as union-vowel).

Final 'u'.

pandharō, a short journey, from پَنْدُهُ pandhu, journey.

haṭiṛī, a small shop, from هَتْ haṭu, shop.

jindurō, short life, from جِنْدُرَوْ vijurī, a small flash of lightening, from رُجُِّّرِي viju, fem., lightening.

Final ō.

hĩarō heart (endearing), from هِنتُو hĩō, heart.

بهوَلِرَّوْ bhōliṛō, a small monkey, from بهوَلِرَّو monkey.

very little, from تهۋرور thōrirō, الله thōrerirō, extremely little.

Final 'a'.

دهِيِّةِ dhiaṛī, a little daughter, from دهِيًّة dhia, daughter.

Final ".

akhiṛī, a small eye, from اَكِهِ akhe, eye.

galharī, a short word, from كَالهِ ḡālhe, word.

Final ī and ū.

مَنْدهِ مَا mandhiaṛō, a small churning staff, from مَنْدهِ مِنْدهِ mandhī, a churning staff.

بَهَتُّرِي bhaṭuaṛī, a small scorpion, from بَهَتُّرِي bhaṭū, a scorpion.

Chapter V.

Compound nouns.

§. 12.

I. Nouns compounded with a preceding particle.

1) Nouns compounded with the negative particles a, ana, nā, nir, ni, ma.

All these negative particles are of Sanskrit origin and used in the same way and in the same sense, as in the Sanskrit. The negative particle 'a' is only used with adjectives, and chiefly with participles and Gerundives, rarely with adjectives; nā with adjectives, and the shortened form na with Gerundives and participial adjectives; nir and ni (with assimilated r), only with adjectives (and abstracts, derived from adjectives). We have not mentioned expressly the negative particle dur (द्ध), which belongs to the same class, as it occurs in such formations only, as are borrowed directly from the Sanskrit and have already passed through the process of assimilation, usual in Sindhī, as: ชั่ชี่ สิ้นหลิlu, famine, Sansk. दुष्काल (see Introd. §. 16, B). For the sake of a general survey we have summed up here all the negative prefixes, though the nouns compounded with them belong to the subsequent classes of compounds, as far as their composition is concerned.

Prefix a: آچيٽ ačētu, thoughtless; thence.

acētāī,
thoughtlessness.

Prefix ana: اَنَتهِمَّنو anathiano, impossible.

اَنَيْجِهْوْ aṇapučhō, unasked. اَنَيْجِهُوْ aṇavēsāhō, unbelieving. اَنُويسَاهِيَ aṇavēsāhī, s. f., unbelief.

Prefix nā: نَاكَارِوْ nākārō, useless. nāčaṅō, unwell. نَاچَنْگُوْ nāčaṅāī, illness.

Prefix nă: نَتَهِمُّنُو nathiaṇō, impossible.

تَهِمَّنِي nathiaṇī, impossibility. nakhaṭū, profitless.

Prefix ma: ﷺ mačhaḍū, not giving up. مَكَهَتُّر makhaṭū, profitless.

Prefix nir and ni: نِرْدَتِي nir-daī, unfeeling, Sansk. निरैय. أن nir-āsu, hopeless, Sansk. निर्मा. نِرَاسُ ni-dhaṇikō, masterless (دَهَلِي).

2) Nouns compounded with the privative particles rē, without, and bē, without.

The privative particle re, which is also used as a preposition, and as such always requires the Formative (oblique case), is derived from the Sanskrit preposition  $\overline{v}$  (Prākrit  $\overline{t}$  =  $\overline{t}$ , and contracted  $\overline{t}$  rē) without, excepted; bē is borrowed from the Persian and corresponds originally to the Sansk. prefix  $\overline{t}$ . These prefixes are in Arabic writing generally written separately and not joined to the noun, as:

rē-kamō, useless. ري کَــو rē-pāṇyō, waterless. rē-čayō, untractable.

bē-saghō, powerless. bē-dīnō, irreligious. bē-lajō, shameless.

3) Nouns compounded with the particles of qualification su, well, ku, badly, and ava (au), away, from.

su: سُكَالُ sukālu, good time = cheapness. غپيت sučētu, attentive. نيرين suprī, good friend = sweetheart.

ku: کُپَتِ kupate, dishonesty. خُپتيوْ kupatyō, dishonest. خُنِيَاءُ kuniyāu, bad justice = oppression.

kuḍhangō, ill-bred. كُذَّهَنْكُوْ ava (au): اَوَکُنُ avaguṇu اَوَکُنُ avaguṇu, } vice.

auguṇu, }

avataṇu, }

a bad landing place.

4) Nouns compounded with the possessive particle sa (shortened from the Sansk सह), implying "with", "provided with".

saphalō, fruitful.

مَبوْجهو sabōjhō, intelligent. مَپُترو sapuṭrō, having a son.

II. Nouns compounded with a substantive, adjective or numeral.

The Sindhī generally follows in the formation of its compound nouns the rules of the Sanskrit, though the compounds cannot be formed in Sindhī in the same unlimited number, as in Sanskrit, the want of case-inflexions offering an essential obstacle. No compound can be formed from more than two nouns, a noun compounded of three words is a linguistic impossibility in Sindhī, as in such a compound all idea of coordination or subordination would be completely lost. We shall consider the compounds current in Sindhī under the received Sanskrit appellations.

1) So-called Tatpuruša compounds, or conjunction of two nouns, of which the former stands in a caserelation with the latter.

These compounds are rarely used in common conversation, but more extensively in poëtical compositions. The former of the two nouns, which is dependent on the latter, must consequently be placed in the Formative, to express thereby its grammatical dependency. In reference to the method of writing these compounds there is no fixed rule; some of them, in which the idea of unity prevails so much, that they are considered as one word, are joined in writing accordingly; others again, in which the conjunction is more loose, are written separately; e. g.:

utara-vāu, north-wind. أَتَرَ وَالْهُ ghara-dhaṇī, master of the house.

mathē-khāū, torturer, literally: eating one's head.

نْيسَ نِكَالوْ dēsa nikālō, banishment.

كَرَن تْرُتَّرْوْ karane-ṭruṭrō; a lazy fellow; literally: broken of hands.

بَانَ بِهَرُ, pāṇa bharū, selfish; literally: filling oneself.

A peculiar kind of compound is formed by an adjective joined to a substantive, which by the addition of the affix vārō (see §. 10, 3, b) is turned again into a possessive noun; the adjective must in this case agree with its substantive in gender, number and case. Such compounds are, as far as their signification is concerned, Bahuvrīhis, but according to their composition Tatpuruṣ̃as; for the latter reason we have inserted them in this place; as:

- أَبِيِّي دُيسَوَارو biē dēsavārō, a foreigner (a man of another country).
- تكهِىَ سُرْتِوَاروْ tikhia-surtevārō, a man of sharp understanding.
- چَنگِي پَهَوَارو čane pahavārō, a man of good counsel.

  More poëtical are compounds like:
- vaḍia dile dātā, a munificent giver (a giver of a great heart).
- 2) So-called Dvandvas, or aggregation of nouns.

In the sense of the Sanskrit Grammar there are no Dvandvas in Sindhī. Two nouns are frequently joined in Sindhī, expressing one common idea, but grammatically they are treated as two separate words. In Sindhī, as well as in the other cognate dialects, two nouns are frequently joined together, of which the latter is without a proper meaning, and only added to render the sound more full; these compounds are called alliterations.

vaṭhu puju, f., hurry; literally: taking (وَقَهُمْ يُخِيَّ arriving (پُخِيُ).

چَنگو بَهَلو čańō bhalō, very good; very well.

سَتَ maṭa saṭa, exchange (سَتَ and سَتَ, both signifying exchange).

ghațe vadhe, less or more.

يُهُوّ يُهُوّ jhuru phuru, rainy weather (يُهُوّ cloudiness; يُهُوّ drop).

أَجْ صُبَهَنَ aju subahā, in a day or two; literally: to-day, to-morrow.

baka šaka, prattle; بَكَ شَكَ talking, chatting, being a meaningless alliteration.

But more frequently than by aggregation the Sindhī joins two nouns by inserting the Persian copula  $\bar{o}$  (frequently nasalized  $= \tilde{o}$ ); the final vowel of the preceding noun is dropped before it and both words are joined into one and written accordingly; in some instances though the final vowel of the preceding noun keeps its place before  $\bar{o}$ . These compounds are Dyandvas in a grammatical sense, only the latter noun being subject to the laws of inflexion.

رَاتؤثِينْهُ, rātōḍ̄īhu, night and day.

handhōhandhu, every place. هَنْدُهُوهُنْدُهُمْ rate-ō-rāte, every night; night by night.

parōpare, kind by kind = every kind.

The conjunction may also be effected by the Persian copulative particle  $\bar{a}$ , in the same way as by  $\bar{o}$ ; this  $\bar{a}$  too is very frequently nasalized in Sindh $\bar{i} = \bar{a}$ ; the final vowel of the preceding word always disappears before  $\bar{a}$  or  $\bar{a}$ ; as:

أمكهَامُكهِي mukhāmukhī, meeting; literally: tête-à-tête. مُكهَامِيلوْ mukhāmēlō, assembly; literally: face and meeting.

ويرَادُويرَ vērāvēra, adv., always; literally: time and time. أُرْدِيرَاً.

3) So-called Karmadhārayas, or descriptive compounds.

The Sindhī is now too simple, to admit of new compounds of this kind; the common rule is, as in the other dialects, that the adjective precedes its substantive and agrees with the same in gender, number and case. Some remnants however of original Karmadhāraya compounds have been preserved in Sindhī, and what is still more remarkable, the Sindhī has formed some similar compounds out of its own resources, in which the adjective is joined to the substantive in its original (else not occurring) crude state. It is to be noted, that all compounds of this description are written in one word; e. g.:

أرام mahārāju, a great prince.

أمهَرَاجُ maharāju, a glutton (great eater).

أمهَرَاجُ vaḍākhāū, a glutton (great eater).

أمهَارُهُ ghaṇaghurō, well-wishing.

أمهَارُهُ maṭhaghurō, ill-wishing.

أرامُنُ paramārthu, benevolence.

أرامُنُ paralōku, the other world.

4) So-called Dvigus, or collective compounds.

This class of compounds, which is formed by a preceding numeral, is in frequent use in Sindhī; e. g.:

أ بِيَهُرِي bipaharī, midday; compounded of بِيَهُرِي bǐ, two and يَهَرِي, a watch of three hours.

bihare, a pair of water wheels.

خُومَاسة čaumāsō, a space of four months = the rainy season.

خُوْرَاتُوْ čauvāṭō, a place, where four roads meet; literally: having four roads.

پنْجَسْنَانِي panjasnānī, washing of the five parts of the body (= head, two hands, two feet).

بَارَهَنْمَاسِي bārahāmāsī, a year = a twelvemonth.

5) The so-called Bahuvrīhis, or relative compounds.

This class of compounds, denoting posssession or relation, which again comprises all the four preceding classes, by changing them into adjectives, is still very numerous in Sindhī; for either original Bahuvrīhi compounds are borrowed directly from the Sanskrit, or new compounds are formed according to the same principles, which are laid down in Sanskrit. The final noun receives generally the adjectival affix ō (see §. 10; 14); in such compounds, as are taken directly from the Persian, the final noun may remain unchanged, its relative signification having been fixed already in Persian.

a) Bahuvrīhi formations from Tatpuruša compounds.

rata-varanō, having the colour of blood. رَتُورَنوْ rata-varanō, haughty; from مَتهَ نهبُهُ (صَنهُ top, and مُنهُ mouth.

pēṭārthī, glutton; from پیتّارْتهِي pēṭu, belly, and مِیتّارْتهِي arthī, having an object; having the belly for one's object.

b) Bahuvrīhi formations from Karmadhāraya compounds.

تَّزَوَاتَوْ vadavātō, loquacious; literally: having a big mouth.

كهَنَجِوْ ghaṇa-bijō, having much seed.

تهۋرَويرَمۇ thōra-vēramō, having little delay = quick.

sāfu-dile, having a pure heart; Pers.

يَالُ يَعْيَالُ xuš-xiālu, joyful; Pers.

- c) Bahuvrīhi formations from Dvigu compounds. چُوْدَروْ čaudarō, having four doors. تَهْمُوْدُ وَ bimaṇō, containing two maunds.
  - بَارَهَنْبَاهو bārahāmāhō, yearly = containing twelve months.
- d) Bahūvrihi formations from such compounds, as are preceded by an adverb or prefix.

sapuṭrō, having a son. سُپُتروْ sučētu, attentive.

kumatyō, dishonest.

Chapter VI. Gender of nouns.

§. 13.

It has been stated already, that the Sindhī has lost the Neuter, most of the original neuter nouns having assumed a masculine, a less number the feminine termination. The gender of a Sindhī noun is easily recognizable, as every noun must end in a vowel; some terminations admit of no exceptions, others are common to both masculine and feminine nouns.

The termination  $\bar{o}$  is masculine without any exception; the termination  $\check{a}$  is feminine without any exception; all the other terminations contain more or less exceptions.

1) The termination 'u'.

The termination 'u' is, according to its origin, generally masculine; but as original Sanskrit-Prākrit themes, ending in 'u' and being of the feminine gender, have been mixed up with it, a number of nouns have retained the feminine gender. In some of them an original feminine termination has been dropped and 'u' substituted in its place, whereas the gender of the noun has been preserved; in others again no reason can be detected, why they have been treated as feminines in Sindhī, the masculine gender having been retained in the cognate dialects; some few of them are of unknown origin, on which we cannot venture any conjecture.

As a general rule we may state, that, abstracted from the termination, all nouns are feminine, which imply a female being, as: الله māu, mother; معنى dhiu, daughter; مَنْهُ nūhu, daughter-in-law; مُنْهُ sasu, mother-in-law; معنى bhēṇu, sister; كَنْرُن gãū, cow; with some of them the feminine termination 'a' is also in use, as: عَنْنُ nūha, فهينَ bhēṇa.

The following is a list of nouns ending in 'u', which are feminine: au, f., slimy excrement, origin unknown.

َ aju, f., to-day; Sansk. अद्य, adv., Hindī اَنَّ ansu, f., offspring; Sansk. अंग, m.; Hindī अंस, m. أَنْتُ angu, or: اَنْكُ anghu, f., a rent, tear; origin unknown.

بَبْرُ baburu, f., the acacia tree; Sansk. वर्दुर, m. Hindī बबूर, f.

barkhu, f., shortened from بَرُكَهَت barkhata, blessing (Arab. بَرُكَت ; in Sindhī k has been aspirated by the influence of r) pronounced as a good omen in beginning to count = one.

bindu, f., semen virile; Sansk. विन्दु, m., Hindī बिंदु, m.

بَهُسُ bhasu, f., ashes; Sansk. भसन्, n.; Hindī भस्, m. پُرُ paru, f., last year; Sansk. परुत्, adv.

پُونَيِّ pūna-u, f., the day of the full moon; also پُونَيِّ pūna-e; Sansk. पवेन, n.

tāku, f., a leathern vessel; origin unknown.

تَنْكَ tandu, f., thread, wire; Sansk. तन्तु, m.; Hindī तांत, f.

ثهُرُ tharu, f., cream; origin unknown.

रिंदं thańu, f., woman's milk; Sansk. स्तन, m.; Hindī थन्, m.

تَرَكُ traku, f., the spindle of a spinning wheel; Sansk. مَجَعَة; in Sindhī r has been pushed forward, to keep its place the more easily in conjunction with the cerebral; see Introd. §. 15, B, a.

jaru, f., leech, afterbirth. Two words have been apparently melted into one. إِذَ leech, corresponds to the Hindūstānī كُلُّ zalū (properly Persian), which has sprung from the Sanskrit आहुवा; the final syllable kā has, as elsewhere, been cast off, but the original gender retained. إِذَ afterbirth, has been shortened from the Sansk. বাবু, m., Hindūstānī jēr (Greek: γῆρας). In Hindūstānī the gender of seems to be doubtful, for Shakespear is silent about it; in Hindī it is considered masculine (Thompson, Hindī Dictionary).

jindu, f., life; borrowed from the Panjābī, where it is likewise fem.

ja-u, f., sealing-wax; origin unknown.

jaukhāru, f., a salt, used in medicine; compounded of جَوْكَهَارُ barley, and كَهَارُ, which see.

jhilu, f., name of a plant (Indigofera pauciflora); origin unknown.

خْپُ čupu, f., or: چِپُ čipu, silence; taken from the Hindī, in which it is fem.

čilu, f., name of a vegetable; origin unknown.

ča-u, f., a jeweller's weight; origin unknown.

رُهَارُ čhāru, f., ashes; originally identical with چَهَارُ, Sansk. सार.

chilu, f., bark, peel; Sansk. عرفي خبان chilu, f., bark, peel; Sansk. خبان original fem. termination i (ī) has been lost in this noun, but the gender retained; besides خبان the form خبان is also in use.

čīzu, f., thing; tāken from the Hindūstānī (Persian) where it is fem.

كَمَاتُ dhātu, f., root; metal. Sansk. यातु, m.; Hindī यात् or यातु, m., but used as fem. in the sense of semen virile.

ثَدَّةُ dadhu, f., ringworm; Sansk. حَرِّجَ, m.; Hindī حَرِّخَ, m.

- sara-u, fem., autumn, Sansk. शाद, fem., Hindī
- المُكَنَّلُ sugandhu, f. (occasionally also masc.), perfume, Sansk. सुगन्ध, m., Hindī सुजन्ध्, m.
- ينْدَهُ sindhu, f., the country of Sindh; the Indus; Sansk. सिन्धु, m.; Hindī सिन्धु or सिन्धु, m.
- كُتْ kaṭu, f., rust (occasionally also m.); origin unknown. كُسُ kasu, f., verdigris; origin unknown.
- لَّهُارُ khāru, f., potash; Sansk. आर, m., n.; Hindī जार, m.
- kharu, f. (also masc.), oil-cake, Hindī खली, f., Sansk. खलं, n.
- كَهُنْدُرْ khandru, f., sugar, Sansk. खाड, m.; Hindī खाड, m.
- garu, f., the mange; Sansk. खर्जु, f.
- र्दें garu, f., the pulp of any fruit; Sansk. गर्भे, m.
- تَرُّ gamu, f., name of a wild grass; origin unknown. وَمُرْ gau, f., cow; Sansk. गो, f.; Hindī गाइ, गो
  - or गी.
- إِنَّمُ limu, f. The nimb tree; the same as بِنَّمُ, which see. النَّمُنِي اَقَسَ, f., devotion, love; Sansk. लय, m.; Hindī लय, f.
- maru, f., cerumen; Sansk. मलं, n.; Hindī मेल, f. masu, f., ink; Sansk. मिस, f.; Hindī मिस or मसी.
- mikhu, مِكَهُ mihu, f., marrow; Sansk. मजा, Hindī मजा, f.
- mailu, f., dirt; see مَرُ with which it is identical.

inimu, f., the nimb tree; Sansk. निम्बूक, m.; Hindī नीम्बू or लीमू, m.

nahatharu, f., whitlow, from نَهَتُهُرُ nahu, nail and تَهُرُ, which see.

vathu, f., thing; Sansk. वस्तु, n.; Hindī वस्तु, f.

vaṭhu, f., seizure; Sansk. वृति (election); the aspiration of ṭh has been effected by r.

viju, f., lightening; Sansk. विद्युत्, f., Prāk. विज्जू, f.

vira-u, f., allowance, ration; Sansk. वर्तन, n., stipulated pay.

visu, višu, rišu, f., world; Sansk. विषय, m.; Hindī विषय्, m.

vasa-u, f., a cultivated place; Sansk. root: विषेत, provided with rain (and therefore cultivated).

vikhu, d., poison; Sansk. विषं, n.; Hindī विस् vihu, or विख्, m.

رُسُنُ vansu, f., lineage; Sansk. वंश, m.; Hindī वंस्, m.

hanju, f., a wild goose; Sansk. हंस, m.; Hindī جُنْهُ hanjhu, f., a wild goose; Sansk. हंस, m.; Hindī جُنْهُ hanjhu, hindu, f., India; originally an Arabic-Persian word, derived from the province nearest to the Persians, i. e. सिन्धु (by change of s into h); Hindūstānī: عند, m.

منٹ hinu, f., assa foetida; Sansk. हिंकु, m.; Hindī हिंग् or हींग् or हिंकु, m.

Under this head we must class all the imitative sounds, which end in 'u', and which are considered fe-minines, because their final 'u' is not subject to inflexion; the same may be stated of some Dvandvas, which consist properly of two Imperatives, ending in 'u', and which are likewise treated as feminines, being exempt from the laws of inflexion.

أَيْ وَنَ aču vańu, f., coming going (Imper.).

أَنْ خُونُ جَهُنُو خَمُو يَقْدُ وَمُعُنُو خَمُو وَمُو يَعْدُو خَمُو وَمُو يَعْدُو وَمُعَالِي وَمُعْدُو وَمُعَالِي وَعْدُو وَمُعْلِي وَمُعْلِي وَعْدُو وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُو وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُو وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُو وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُونُ وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُ وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُونُ وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُونُ وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُونُ وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُونُ وَمُعْلِي وَمُعْلِي وَمُعْلِي وَمُعْلِي وَمُعْلِي وَمُعْلِي وَعْمُونُ وَمُعْلِي وَمُوا مُعْلِي وَمُعْلِي وَمُعُلِي وَمُعْلِي وَمُعُلِي وَمُعْلِي وَمُعْلِي وَمُعْلِي وَمُعْلِ

2) The termination ū.

The termination  $\bar{u}$  is generally masculine; there are however some exceptions, the gender of which is regulated either by original Sanskrit usage, or by the practice of the cognate dialects. The imitative sounds, ending in  $\bar{u}$  or  $\tilde{u}$ , are all treated, on account of their inflexibility, as feminine. Such exceptions are:

ābirū, f. (also: آبِرُو ābirūe), honour; Hindūstānī آبِرُو , f. (Pers.)

قَالُون قَلْ, f., pride, egotism; identical with the I. personal pronoun of the Sing. J (Panjābī: haū, f.).

bhue); Sansk. ٦, f.

تَرُنُ tarū, f., a fine cord of camel's hair (root: تَرَنُ to pass through).

جُون j̃ū, f., louse (also: جُون j̃ua); Hindī जूं, f., Sansk. यूका, f.

خَجُون čamajū, f., a kind of louse, adhering to the skin (جَہُم).

kū-kū, f., imitative sound, by which a dog is called.

كَنْوُن gãū, f., cow; the same as كَنْوُن

الْون lũ, f., small hair on the limbs (also: لُنجَ lũa); Sansk. लोमन्, n.; Hindī लोम्, m.

عُونِ vahū, f., daughter-in-law; Sansk. वधू, Hindī बहू.

3) The termination ā.

The termination ā comprises, according to its origin, as we have seen, mostly feminine nouns; there are however a few masculine nouns, ending in ā, the gender of which is, in most cases, already fixed by the signification of the noun itself, or by the language, from which the noun in question is taken; such exceptions are:

رَجَا, rājā, prince; Sansk. Nom. राजा, m.

রিরি, master; lord; Hindī তাতা.

kartā, the agent (in grammar); Sansk. Nom. कती. عُرْتَا قَtma, soul; Sansk. Nom. श्रात्मा, m. māxūlia, melancholy, Arab.; Hindūstānī, masc.

हैं व़ैंevatā, Deity; Hindī देवता, f.; Sanskrit देवता, f.

4) The termination ī.

The termination ī is, as stated already, divided between masculine and feminine nouns, yet so, that the feminine prevail considerably in number. All nouns denoting a male being (man or beast) are of course masculine, whereas nouns, denoting a female being, inanimate objects or abstract qualities are feminine; contrary to this general rule the following nouns are masculine:

āsirī, a large kind of tamarisk tree.

bāndhī, a log of wood floating in the river.

بُنْدِي bundī, the muzzle of a gun-barrel.

بَهَچَّتِي bhačaṭī, name of a plant (Desmochaeta lappacea).

pākī, razor (by the Hindūs used as fem.)

pāṇī, water.

pakhī, bird. پَکهِي

تُهُدُّى thuḍ̄ī, the lower stalk of a plant.

بَكِي ṭikī, a cake.

خهَتْهِي čhaṭhī, a religious ceremony, performed on the sixth day after childbirth.

دوكي dōgī, a thick stick.

دَّقَتِي dhaṛī, a coloured edge to a cloth.

surjamukhī, sunflower.

كُنْتُّ لِي kundalī, horoscope.

ghitī, a lane, alley.

لَاثِي lāḍī, the ropes of a boat.

muštarī, the planet Jupiter. مُشْتَرَى mundhī, head. مُنْدُهِي

mōtī, pearl.

vangī, a stick with ropes hanging from it, to carry water pots, etc.

5) The termination i (ĕ).

The termination 'i' (ĕ) is, with that of ă, the regular feminine ending in Sindhī. There are however a few masculine nouns, ending in 'i', which are mostly borrowed from foreign languages. As in conformity with the Sindhī laws of sound no word can end in a silent consonant, the quick and hardly perceptible sound 'i' (ĕ) has been added to some words, which end originally in a silent consonant, to render them susceptible of inflexion; to some foreign nouns too, which end in ā, the short vowel 'i' has been added, for euphony's sake, which however may interchange with 'u' in some cases.

ahmade, Nom. prop.

ين ير xudāe, God (Pers.).

xizire, Nom. prop. of a fabulous prophet.

رَاء رَاء rā-e (or: ارَاء), prince; Hindī राइ. sēṭhe, a Hindū wholesale merchant; Hindī.

qaisare, Cæsar.

In some few instances original final ĕ of the Sanskrit has been preserved, without having been lengthened, as is usually the case in Sindhī, as:

پَتْيِ pā-e, lord (also: پَتِي patī); Sansk. पति. رَسْپَتِ viraspate, the planet Jupiter; Sansk. वृहस्पति. أَمْ hare, Višnu; Sansk. हिर्; Hindī हिर् or हरी.

In others again original i has been (contrary to the usual rule) shortened to i, as:

kēhare, lion, or: کیشر kēsare, Sansk. केसरी. کیفر kūe, street, besides: کوئی kūī, Pers. کوئی sahāe, helper, besides: سَهَادِ sahāē.

Others again are to be taken as Bahuvrīhi compounds, in which final i (ĕ) may be preserved (see §. 12, 5. 6.), as:

sāfudile, a sincere man = having a pure heart. مَانُدِيلِ adhō-adhe, half-sharer = having half and half.

Chapter VII.

Formation of the Feminine from masculine bases.

§. 14.

The formation of the feminine from masc. nouns agrees in the main with Sanskrit and Prākrit usage. In some instances feminine derivatives have been taken directly from the Sanskrit or Prākrit, subject, of course, to the peculiar assimilating process of the Sindhī, as; راني rāṇī, queen, Sansk. القال (see: Introd. §. 14, b.). Such like formations we shall pass by in the following remarks and only attend to the laws still current in Sindhī.

The Sindhī possesses in some cases separate words, to express the idea of the feminine, so that the process of deriving the feminine from the masc base is superseded. These instances however are restricted to nouns, implying relationship, and the names of the commonest domestic animals, where the language has preferred to create separate words, instead of deriving them from the corresponding masc base; as:

بهين bhēṇa, sister; بهاء bhāu, brother.

إنتر puṭru, son. وهي puṭru, son.

daughter;

أن māu, mother; بين piu, father.

إن yahū, daughter-in-law; مَاء jāṭrō, son-in-law.

وهُو daghō, a male camel.

يَّ ga-ū, cow; اَنْدُ dِāndu, ox. آنْدُ mễhe, a female buf- سَانُ sānu, a male buffalo. falo;

From other masc, bases the Sindhī forms regularly a feminine, as far as this is admissible; some nouns are only extant in the feminine, the masculine being out of place or having disappeared from the language.

1) Formation of the Feminine from masc. nouns in 'u'.

From substantives ending in 'u' the Sindhī forms the Feminine by changing 'u' into  $\bar{\imath}$  or  $\check{\imath}$  ( $\check{e}$ ); with adjectives the termination 'i' (e) or 'a' may be optionally used. In the case of the substantives the use of the termination  $\bar{\imath}$  or 'i' (e) is more or less optional, but in some of them one or the other is preferred.

يَرْفِ gaḍāhe, jenny-ass, from گُهُ gaḍāhu, jack-ass. يَرْفِ parṭe, washerwoman, from يَرْفِ parṭu, washerman. دهِيرُ dhīra or دهِيرُ dhīra, from دهِيرُ dhīra, adj. m.

Besides this common formation of the feminine another method of forming the same by means of the affixes nī, ni, ānī, āini, is in use, which are however only added to nouns denoting human beings, castes, occupations etc. very rarely to names of animals or to adjectives.

All these affixes correspond to the Sansk affix श्रानी (= न, see Bopp, Compar. Gram. §. 840), as: इन्द्राणी the wife of Indra etc. In Sindhī the original affix ānī (with change of the dental to the cerebral) has either been preserved, or ā (see Bopp sub loco) has again been cast out, and only nī (ne) added. All these affixes are joined to the feminine termination (i, seldom to a), as:

يَ jatinī, the wife of a خُجِّ Jat. عَتْ jaty-āṇī, gāhiṇe, گاهِنَ gāhyāṇī, a female singer; masc. not in use. بَروْجُ أَنِي barōčāṇī, the wife (or female) of a بَروْجُانِي or Beluch. sĩhu, lion. شِينْهُرُ šĩhaṇe, lioness, from شِينْهُن خَهُوتِّنِ čhūtiņe, خُهُوتِّنِ čhūtiņī, swift, from چُهُوتِّنِي čhūtu, adj. m. خُهُوتِيَانِي čhūtyāni,

2) Formation of the Feminine from masculine nouns in ō.

From masc. nouns ending in ō the feminine is formed by changing ō into ī, as:

čhōrī, a female orphan, from چهوري čhōrō, orphan, m.

gōlī, a slave-girl, from گؤلئ gōlō, a slave m.

Besides this feminine termination the affixes nī, ni, āṇī, āiņi are also in use with nouns denoting caste, trade or occupation, as:

لَنگهِزَ langhiṇī, the wife (or female) of a لَنگهِنَانِي langhyāṇī, langhō or drummer (by caste). langhyāiṇe, J لَنكَهِيَائِنِ

3) Formation of the Feminine from masculine nouns in ū.

Masc. nouns ending in  $\bar{u}$  form the feminine by the affixes  $n\bar{l}$  or  $n\bar{l}$ , with the union-vowel i, by which final  $\bar{u}$  is dislodged; final  $\bar{u}$  may also be shortened to 'u', which serves at the same time as union-vowel, e.g.:

The affixes āṇī or āiṇi are also in use, before the addition of which final ū is always shortened to 'u', as:

4) Formation of the Feminine from masculine nouns in ī and ĭ.

From masc. nouns ending in  $\bar{i}$  and 'i' (e) the feminine is formed by means of the affixes  $n\bar{i}$ ,  $n\bar{i}$  or  $\bar{a}n\bar{i}$ ; final  $\bar{i}$  is shortened to 'i', and serves thus as union-vowel; as:

Note. The cognate dialects form the feminine from masc. nouns in the same way as the Sindhī, by changing either the masc, termination to the feminine, or by adding one of the above-mentioned fem. affixes.

The Hindī and Hindūstānī approach the Sindhī very closely in this respect; they form the feminine either by substituting the feminine termination ī, as: التَّاكِي larkī, girl, from لَتَا المَالِيَةِ larkā, boy, بَرَاهُمَنِي brāhmanī, the wife (or female) of a Brāhman, from بَرُاهُمَنِي brāhman; or by adding one of the affixes an, in, ānī, to the masc. base, as: سُنَارَ sunāran (or sunārin), the wife of a سُنَارَ sunār, goldsmith; شيرنِي šērnī, a lioness, from مِهْتَرَانِي mehtarānī, the wife (daughter) of a mehtar, or sweeper.

The same law holds good in Gujarātī; either the feminine termination ī is substituted for the masculine, as: कुतरी a female dog, from कुतरो a male dog, or the feminine affixes रण, शी or आणी are added to the masc. base, as: वाघेण a tigress, from वाघ tiger; जंदगी, a female camel, from जंद a male camel; धरास्त्राणी mistress, from धर्मी lord.

The formation of the feminine is quite analogous in the Panjābī; for the masc. termination is either changed to the feminine, as: ghōrī, a mare, from ghorā, a stallion, or the feminine affixes an, nī, ānī are added to the masc. base, as: uskaļan, a slanderous woman, from uskaļī, a slanderous man; ūtnī, a female camel, from ūt, a male camel; mugalānī, the wife (or daughter) of a mugal.

The Marāṭhī forms the feminine from nouns in 'a' (quiescent) or ā by substituting the fem. termination ī, as: मुगली, girl, from मुगला boy; दासी, a slave-girl, from दास a slave; in nouns ending in 'a', the Sansk. fem. termination ā is occasionally to be met with, as: शूद्रा or शूद्री the wife of a शूद्र. Besides these two fem. terminations the affix īn or īn is to be found in nouns ending in 'a' (quiescent) or ī, as: वाधीण, tigress, from वाघ, tiger, पापीण a sinful woman, from पापी a sinner; धनीन mistress, from धनी master.

The Bangālī stands nearest to the Sanskrit with regard to the formation of the feminine; it substitutes the fem. terminations ā or ī for those of the masculine, as: tanyā, daughter, from tanya, son; puttrī, daughter, from puttra, son. Adjectives or nouns of agency, ending in ka ('a' being quiescent) form their feminine always in kā, as: kārikā, doing, from kārak, m., gāyakā, a female singer, from gāyak, a male singer. Nouns in ī (= in) form their feminine by the affix nī, as: hattinī, a female elephant, from hattī, a male elephant; likewise patnī, mistress, from pati, master. Also the use of the affix āṇī or āṇi is strictly in accordance with Sanskrit practice, as: āčāryāṇī, the wife of an āčārya.

We find thus, that all the north-Indian vernaculars of Sanskrit origin fully agree in the formation of the feminine.

SECTION II. THE INFLEXION OF NOUNS.

Chapter VIII.

I. Formation of the Plural.

§. 15.

The crude form of a Sindhī noun is always identical with its Nominative Singular, the Nominative Singular having no longer a case-sign in any of the modern Ārian tongues.

The Sindhī possesses no definite or indefinite article, as little as the Sanskrit or the Prākrit; if the one or the other is to be expressed for distinctness' sake, a demonstrative or indefinite pronoun (or the numeral "one") is placed before a noun. There is no longer a Dual in Sindhī, neither in Pāli nor Prākrit, nor in any of the modern Sanskritical tongues; we have therefore only to describe the formation of the Plural (Nominative), according to the respective terminations of nouns.

1) Nouns ending in ŭ.

Nouns ending in ŭ are, as we have stated already, for the greatest part masculine, a few of them only being feminine. According to their respective gender the Plural is formed, as follows:

a) Plural of masculine nouns ending in ŭ:

These nouns form their Plural by changing ŭ into ă, as: کَهُوهُ khūhu, a well, Plur. کَهُوهُ khūha, wells; varu, husband, Plur. زَوْ vara. If final 'u' be preceded by short 'a', a euphonic v is inserted in the Plural, as: ra-u, weed, Plur. رَوْ rava, weeds. But if final 'u' be preceded by any other vowel, but short 'a', the insertion of v is optional, as: گهَاوَ ghāu, a wound, Plur. گهَاوَ ghāva or: گهَاوَ ghāa, wounds; گهَاوَ dēu, a god, Plur. قَيْرَ dēva or: قَيْرَ dēa, gods; but when a long vowel, preceding final ŭ, is nasalized, the insertion of v becomes necessary, as:

.thãva, dishes تَهَانُوَ thãu, a dish, Plur تَهَانُوُّ

The following two nouns form their Nom. Plural in an irregular way:

bhāu, brother, Plur. بهَاتُر bhāura or: بهَاتُر bhāuru, brothers.

piura, fathers. پٹر piura, fathers.

Both these Plurals point back to the Prākrit forms भाञ्चरा (Nom. Sing. भाञ्चरा) and पिञ्चरा (Nom. Sing. पिञ्चरा), and are therefore, properly speaking, not irregular (cf. Varar. V, 35).

Annotation. We have already noticed (§. 5, I.), that the Sindhī termination ŭ is shortened from the Prākrit  $\overline{\mathbf{x}}$ ; in Prākrit nouns ending in  $\overline{\mathbf{o}}$  form their Plural in  $\overline{\mathbf{a}}$ , which has been shortened in Sindhī to  $\overline{\mathbf{a}}$ .

The cognate idioms agree with the Sindhī in this respect. In Hindī and Hindūstānī, this class of nouns, having already dropped the terminating short vowel in the Singular, throw the same off in the Plural likewise, i. e. they remain unaltered in the Plural. The same is the case in Marāṭhī and Panjābī; the Gujarāṭī alone adds the Plural termination ō.

b) Plural of feminine nouns ending in ŭ.

These nouns form their Plural by changing final  $\check{\mathbf{u}}$  into  $\tilde{\mathbf{u}}$ , as:

رِج vathu, a thing; Plur. وَتَهُون vathū, things; وَجُون viju, lightening; Plur. وَجُون vijū, lightenings.

The following nouns have, besides their regular Plural, also an irregular one, as:

بهینُون bhēṇu, sister (or: بهینَ bhēṇa); Plur. بهینُون bhēṇā or: بهینُرُون bhēṇā or: بهینُرُون bhēṇā or: مَائِرُون māu, mother; Plur. مَائِرُون māirū, or: مَائِرُون māirū, mothers.

dhiu (or: دهِيِّرُون dhia), daughter; Plur. دهِيِّرُون dhiū, or: مُعِيِّرُون dhiaru, دهِيَّرُون dhiarū, daughters.

أَيُّونِ nuhu (or: نَهُرِي nuha), daughter-in-law; Plur. نَهُو nuhū or: نَهُرُونِ nuharu, نَهُرُونِ nuharū, daughters-in-law.

In the levelling process of decomposition these fem. nouns have adopted the same affix ara (or for euphony's sake: ira), as the irregular Plurals of masc. nouns, and as feminines they have lengthened the same also to aru.

Annotation. In Pāli fem. nouns ending in 'u' remain either unchanged in the Plural, as: yāgu, sacrifice, Plur. yāgu, or ō (the Sansk. Plural affix (the Sansk. Plural affix

2) Nouns ending in ō (ō).

These form their Plural by changing final ō into ā, as: تَوْبُو ; رَادَّهَا vāḍhō, a carpenter, Plur. تَوْبُو ; رَادَّهَا tōbō, a diver, Plur. تَوْبُو tōbā, divers. If final ō be nasalized, which is frequently the case, the nasal is also preserved in the Plural, as: چَوْتَهَان čōthō, the fourth, Plur. چَوْتَهَان čōthā.

If final ō be preceded by short 'a' (or nasalized: ã), a euphonic v is inserted between them in the Plural, as: ثَوَا taō, a pan; Plur. تَوَا tavā, pans; تَنُون nãō, new; Plur. نَنُون nãvã; but if final ō be preceded by any other vowel, the insertion of v is optional, as: کُتُو kuō, mouse, Plur. کُرَا kuā or: مِيثُو kuvā; مِيثُو mēō, fisherman, Plur. کُبَا شائد mēā or: کَهَاتُو ghā-ō, a fish-net, Plur. کَهَاتُو ghā-ā or: کَهَاتُو ghāvā.

We have repeatedly adverted to the fact, that the Prākrit termination  $\bar{o}$  has in Sindhī either been shortened to 'u', or retained unaltered; the formation of the Plural of the latter description of nouns is quite in accordance with Prākrit usage (Sing.  $\bar{o}$ , Plur.  $\bar{a}$ ).

Annotation. In the cognate idioms the masc. termination  $\bar{a}$  has been substituted instead of  $\bar{o}$ . In Hindī, Hindūstānī, Marāṭhī and Panjābī masc. nouns ending in  $\bar{a}$  commonly change the same in the Plural to  $\bar{e}$ , a Plural termination, which is already in use in the inferior old Prākrit dialects (see: Lassen, Instit. Ling. Prāk. p. 430). The Gujarātī differs in this respect, as masc. nouns ending in  $\bar{o}$  add to the Plural termination  $\bar{a}$  the affix  $\bar{o}$ , as: čhōkarō, a boy, Plur. čhōkarā- $\bar{o}$ ; a similar formation of the Plural is already ascribed to the Māgadhī dialect of the Prākrit; cf. Lassen, p. 399.

3) Nouns ending in ū, ū.

Nouns ending in ū or, as it is more common, in ũ, be they masc. or feminine, remain unchanged in the Plural, as: بِجُهُون vičhū, m., scorpion, Plur. بِجُهُون vičhū; gaū, fem., cow, Plur. كُمُّه gaū, cows.

In Pāli, masc. themes ending in 'u', lengthen the same in the Nom. Plural to ū, as bhikkhu, a beggar, Plur. bhikkhū; and such masc. themes, as end in ū in the Nom. Sing., remain unchanged in the Plural, as: abhibhū, a chief, Plur. abhibhū (contracted from abhibhuvō). In Prākrit masc. themes ending in 'u' lengthen their final vowel always in the Nominative Sing., to which in the Nom. Plural the affix ō (= NH) is added, as: vāu, wind, Nom. Sing. vāū, Nom. Plur. vāūō, winds. This Plural affix ō may in Prāk. be again shortened to 'u', and in the modern dialects it is dropped altogether. In Sindhī ū is usually nasalized = ũ.

Annotation. In Hindī, Hindūstānī, Marāṭhī and Panjābī masc. nouns ending in ū, remain unaltered in the Plural; but fem. nouns add in Hindūstānī the Plural termination ã, as jōrū, a wife, plural jōrūã, the Prākrit Plural affix ō being changed to ā, ã. The Gujarātī keeps close to the Prākrit in forming the Plural of masc. nouns ending in ū, by adding the Plural affix ō, as: hindū, a Hindū, Plur. hindūō.

4) Nouns ending in ā (ā).

These are, as noticed already (§. 13, 3) for the most part feminine; they form their Plural hy adding the Plural affix  $\tilde{\mathbf{u}}$ , as:

hačā, f., murder; Plur. هَچَاتُانِ hačā-ū, murders.

The Plural of these nowns corresponds to the Prāk. Plural termination ā-ō or ā-u, ō (or shortened 'u') being added to final ā of the Singular (see Lassen p. 307). In Sindhī the Prāk. Plur. increment ō has been changed to ū, and at the same time nasalized.

Few nouns ending in ā are masculine; they remain unaltered in the Plural, as: ÝÝ lālā, master, Plur. ÝÝ lālā, masters.

The Prākrit Plural increment ō (ā-ō) has first been shortened to 'u', and then been dropped altogether in Sindhī.

Annotation. In Hindī and Hindūstānī fem. nouns ending in ā (ā) form their Plural by adding the increment ē, as balā, misfortune, Plur. balāē. This ē corresponds to the Prākrit affix ō, which in the inferior Prākrit dialects is frequently changed to ē (cf. Lassen, p. 398, 408). Those masc. nouns, the final ā of which does not correspond to the Sindhī ō, remain likewise unaltered in the Plural. — In Panjābī fem. nouns ending in ā add either ī or iā, the Plural increment ī being a change from the Hindī ē, and iā from the Prākrit affix ō, with euphonic 'i' or y. A few masc. nouns remain likewise unaltered in the Plural, as ātmā, soul; pitā, father etc. — The Gujarātī entirely agrees with the Prākrit, adding simply ō to the fem. nouns in ā, as: mā, mother, Plur. mā-ō, — In Marāṭhī fem. nouns ending in ā do not undergo any change in the Plural, as: mātā, mother, Plur. mātā;

some masc. nouns, falling under this head, remain likewise unaltered in the Plural.

5) Nouns ending in ă.

These nouns being all feminine, form their Plural by changing final 'a' either to ū (as in Lāṛ); or to ā (as in Sirō); تَرَان tara, nostril, Plur. تَرَان tara, nostrils.

These nouns have been, as noted already, shortened from Sanskrit-Prākrit bases ending in  $\bar{a}$ ; they either drop final 'a' before the Plural increment  $\tilde{a}$  (= Prāk. $\bar{o}$ ), or restore the original  $\bar{a}$  and drop the Plural increment  $\bar{o}$  = u, nasalising at the same time the final long vowel.

Annotation. This class of nouns is wantig in the cognate idioms, where final 'a' has become silent; e. g. Hindūstānī: jībh, f., tongue, Plural: jībh-ē, the Plural being made up by the increment ē = Prāk. ō. — Panjābī: bāh, f., arm (Sindhi: bāha), Plur. bāhā; Marāṭhī: jībh, f. Plur. similarly: jībhā. The Gujarātī is consequent in adding simply the Plural increment ō to fem. bases, ending in a quiescent consonant, as: sānjh, f., evening, Plur. sānjhō.

6) Nouns ending in ī (t).

a) Masculine nouns ending in ī remain unaltered in the Plural:

بِيلِي bēlī, a servant, Plur. بِرِين bēlī, servants; بِرِين prī, friend, Plur. پرِين prī, friends.

In Prākrit masc. nouns ending in ī form their Plural by adding the increment ō, which has been shortened to 'u' and then cast off altogether in Sindhī.

b) Feminine nouns ending in ī add in the Plural the increment ū, shortening before this affix the preceding long ī, which may also, for euphony's sake, be changed to y; as: كَوْلِيُنِ gōlī, a slave-girl, Plur. كُوْلِيُونِ nihāī (or: nihāī), a potter's kiln, Plur. نهايُونِ nihāyū.

Feminine nouns in  $\bar{\imath}$  add in Prākrit likewise the affix  $\bar{o}$ , which may be shortened to 'u'; in this case final 'u' has in Sindhī been lengthened to  $\bar{u}$  and nasalized at the same time, to distinguish the Plural of the feminine nouns from that of the masculine.

If final ī be preceded by any letter of the palatal class or by 'h', it is commonly dropped before the Plural affix ū, as: مَنجُون manjī, a stool, Plur. مَنجُون manjū, stools; مَنجُون manjhū, buffaloes.

Annotation. In Hindī and Hindūstānī fem. nouns follow the method of the Prākrit in forming their Plural, with the only difference, that the Prāk. Plural increment  $\bar{o}$  is changed to  $\bar{a}$ , and this again nasalized, as čhurī, knifē, Plur. čhurīā. Masc. nouns in  $\bar{\imath}$  do not differ from their Singular. The Panjābī quite accords with the Hindī, fem. nouns in  $\bar{\imath}$  adding the Plural termination  $\bar{a}$ , as dhī, daughter, Plur. dhīā, the masc. nouns in  $\bar{\imath}$  remaining unaltered in the Plural. The same may be remarked of the Marāṭhī. The Gujarātī stands nearest to the Prākrit in this respect, all nouns, be they masc. or feminine, adding simply the Plural affix  $\bar{o}$ .

7) Nonns ending in I (ĕ).

a) Fem. nouns ending in 'i' (e) form their Plural by adding the Plural affix û, as: راتِ rāte, night, Plur. راتِتُون rāteŭ, nights. — If 'i' be preceded by a palatal or h, it disappears before the Plural termination û, as: مينهِ mēhe, buffalo, Plur. مينهُ سِينهُ سُقُهُ مِينَهُ سُقُهُ مِينَهُ سُقُهُ مِينَهُ مِينَهُ سُقُهُ مِينَهُ مُنْ مِينَهُ مِينَا مِينَهُ مِينَا مِ جَوْءِ jōe, wife, forms its Plural either regularly, as: جَوْيُونِ jōyū, or irregularly, as: جَوْيُونِ jōiru, جَوْيُون or جَوْيُرُون jōirū, wives.

b) Masc. nouns ending in 'i' (e) remain unchanged in the Plural, as: سِيتَهِ sethe, a wholesale merchant, Plur. سِيتَهِ sēthe.

Annotation. In Hindī and Hindūstānī, as stated already, final 'i' has been dropped, and such nouns, as end in Sindhī in 'a' or 'i', use there one common Plural increment, viz.: ē. In Gujarātī and Panjābī final 'i' has likewise disappeared in most cases, and ō and ā are respectively added as Plural terminations. In Marāṭhī fem. bases ending in 'i' remain either unchanged in the Plural or have final 'i' lengthened to ī. The lengthening of final 'i' in the Plural is more in accordance with Pāli and Prākrit usage (e. g. Pāli: ratti, night, Plur. rattī or rattiyō; Prāk. rattī-ō or: rattī-u). Masc. bases ending in 'i' remain similarly either unaltered in the Plural, or (according to some Pandits) lengthen the same to ī (as in Pāli and Prākrit).

II. Formation of cases; case-affixes.

Properly speaking there is no longer a declension in Sindhī, nor in any of the modern languages of the Ārian stock; there are only a few remnants of the ancient Sanskrit, Pāli and Prākrit case-inflexions, all the other cases being made up by means of case-affixes or postpositions.<sup>1</sup>).

If we compare the modern Ārian dialects with the Pāli and Prākrit, we perceive at once the great deterioration, the modern idioms have undergone in this respect; for while the Pāli and Prākrit have as yet preserved all the cases of the Sanskrit, with the exception of the Dative, which has already become scarce in Pāli and has been discarded altogether in Prākrit, its functions being shifted to the Genitive, the modern idioms have lost nearly all power of inflexion and substituted in lieu of flexional increments regular adverbs, which we generally term postpositions. The same process we can notice in the modern Romanic tongues, where after the loss of the Latin declensional inflexions, prepositions have been substituted to make up for the lost cases.

<sup>1)</sup> In poëtry postpositions may also be placed before the noun, they govern, as the rhythm may require.

The great distinctive feature of the declensional process of the modern Ārian dialects, with the exception of the Bangālī, consists in the fact, that there are properly only two cases of a noun, the absolute or crude form, corresponding throughout to the Nom. Singular, and the Formative case, to which the various adverbs or postpositions are added, which serve to make up for the lost case-terminations. This latter case has been generally called the oblique case by European grammarians, but we prefer to call it the Formative (after the precedence of Dr. Caldwell).

The number of declensions, if they may be termed thus, depends therefore in Sindhī, as well as in the cognate idioms, on the various methods, in which the Formative is made up; for the case-signs remain the same, as well for the Singular as the Plural, since they are, as we shall presently see, originally either (Sanskrit) prepositions or adverbs.

We shall now first investigate the remnants of the ancient case-terminations in Sindhī and the adverbs or postpositions, which have been substituted for such cases, as have lost their original inflexions. In the arrangement of the cases we shall follow the common order, which has been instituted by the old Sanskrit grammarians, in order to facilitate the intercomparison.

- 1) The Nominative case of the Singular and plural we may pass over, since they have been noticed already.
- 2) The Accusative case of the Singular and Plural has been dropped in Sindhī, as well as in all the other kindred idioms. This has been already the case in the inferior Prākrit dialects, and is expressly mentioned of the Apabhranša, the mother of the modern Sindhī (see: Lassen p. 459).

We must keep this fact constantly before our eyes, that in Sindhī, as well as in its sister-tongues, there is no such thing (in a grammatical sense), as an Accusative case, the Accusative being now throughout identical with the Nominative. If we find therefore generally stated in European grammars, that the postposition khē, or kō in Hindūstānī serves to denote also the Accusative case, we have, in the strictly grammatical sense of the word, to repudiate such an idea. Whe shall see under the Dative case, what the origin of that postposition is, and that will satisfactorily explain the syntactical peculiarities of the modern Indian tongues, which use such and similar postpositions, where we use either the Dative or the Accusative.

3) The Instrumentalis is not distinguished by any case-affix or postposition in Sindhī, but differs from the Nominative Sing. only by the change of the final vowel (where such a change is admissible). The Instrumentalis is in the Singular and Plural identical with the Formative (which see further on). From thence it would follow, that the Instrumentalis is originally the Genitive, which may be rendered very probable by the Instrumentalis of the Plural.

Annotation. The Hindī and Hindūstānī use as Instrumental case-affix nē. In Hinduī (see Garcin de Tassy, Rudiments de la langue Hindouī, 26, 99) we meet further the affixes nē, nē, ni and na, and in the Plural (a)n or nē, nē, ni, as in the Singular. In Panjābī we find the instrumental affix nai, or na, or only ī, or the Formative is promiscuously used for the Instrumentalis, just as in Sindhī. In Gujarātī we meet with ē as Instrumental affix. The Marāthī uses for the Instrumentalis Sing. the affix ne, and for the Plural ni. As to the origin of these various instrumental affixes there can hardly be a doubt. The Sansk instrumental case-inflexion of the Singular nā, na (see Bopp, Comp. Gram. I, §. 158) has been used as a separate adverb in Hindustani and Panjabi (not in Marathi, where it coalesces with the noun as a regular inflexion), or even been abbreviated to ī or ē (n being originally only a euphonic addition to the instrumental affix a), as partly in Panjābī and in Gujarātī. In the Instrumentalis Plur, the Marāthī uses also (besides nī) the affix hī, corresponding to the Prāk. Plur. instrumental affix दि or दि; see Lassen, p. 310. In Ban $g\bar{a}l\bar{\imath}$  te is used as instrumental affix, which is originally identical with the Ablative affix  $\bar{n}$  =  $\bar{n}\bar{H}$ .

Annotation. The Bangālī uses as Dative affix kē, the Hindī and Hindūstānī kō (dialectically also pronounced 'kū' in the Dekhan), the Hinduī (according to Garcin de Tassy) also kō, kaū, kah, kāh, kahā and even hi.

Dr. Caldwell, in his Comparative Grammar of the Dravidian languages has attempted to vindicate the Hindūstānī kō for the Drāvidian languages of the South; he says (p. 225): "In the vernaculars of northern India, which are deeply tinged with Scythian characteristics, we find a suffix, which appears to be not only similar to the Dravidian, but the same. The Dative-Accusative in the Hindī and Hindūstānī is kō, or colloquially kū; in the language of Orissa ku, in Bangālī ki, in Sindhī khi, in Shingalese ghai; in the Uraon, a semi-Drāvidian Kole dialect, gai, in the language of the Bodos, a Bhūtan hill tribe, khō, in Tibetan gya. The evident existence of a connexion between these suffixes and the Dravidian Dative case-sign ku, is very remarkable. Of all the analogies between the North-Indian dialects and the southern, this is the clearest and most important, and it cannot but be regarded as betokening either an original connexion between the northern and the southern races, prior to the Brahmanic irruption, or the origination of both races from one and the same primitive Scythian stock." If this case-sign ko or ku then be the clearest and most important analogy between the North-Indian vernaculars and the Dravidian tongues, we shall see presently, that there will be no analogy whatever between them, though at the first sight the identity of both seems to be past any doubt. In the first instance the fact speaks already very strongly against such a supposition, that the Marāthī, which is the closest neighbour to the Drāvidian tongues, has repudiated the use of khē, kē or ko, and employed a Dative-affix, the origin of which we hope to fix past controversy. We shall further see, that the Gujarātī and Panjābī have also made up for the Dative case by postpositions, borrowed from the Sanskrit, without the slightest reference to the Dravidian languages, and we may therefore reasonably expect the same fact from the remaining Arian dia-It would certainly be wonderful, if those Arian dialects, which border immediately on the Dravidian idioms, should have warded off any Dravidian influence on their inflexional method, whereas those more to the north should have been "deeply tinged with Scythian characteristics." Fortunately we are able to show, that such an assumption is not only gratuitous, but irreconcilable with the origin of the above mentioned Dative-affixes.

We derive the Sindhī khē, the Bangālī kē, from the Sanskrit Locative कृत, 'for the sake of', 'on account of', 'as regards'. This will at once account for the aspiration of k in Sindhī; for this is not done by chance, but by a strict rule (see Introd. §. 1, e, note); in Bangālī r does not exercise such an influence on the aspiration of a preceding or following consonant, and therefore we have simply kē. The Sanskrit form कृते becomes in Prakrit first and, then (by the regular elision of t) are, and contracted ke, and in Sindhi, by reason of the elided r, khē. The Hindī and Hindūstānī form of this adverb kō we derive in the same way from the Sansk. and which is used adverbially with the same signification as the Locative कत. In Prākrit already, and still more so in the modern dialects, the neuter has been merged into the masculine; we have therefore first and, thence and, and contracted an, ko. We can thus satisfactorily account for the various forms: khē, kē or ko. That the proposed derivation of these adverbs does not rest on a mere fancy, is further proved by the Sindhī particle re, 'without', which is derived in the same way from the Sansk. Locative sin, Prakrit fin = fiv, and thence contracted rē (ria). It remains now for us to notice briefly the somewhat deviating forms of the Hindui, as exhibited by Garcin de Tassy. In an ko and an kau a euphonic Anusvara has been added, to which the modern tongues have taken a great fancy; kaū is only a different pronunciation for ko, o changing in Hindui very commonly to au. The forms कह kah, or with euphonic Anusvāra cink kāh or cik kahā, present again another proof for the correctness of the proposed derivation of these adverbs. For we have in कह, कंह, कहं (Hindī also: kan, kanē, with a full nasal, and in consequence thereof with ejection of h) the same basis as in and and, only the assimilating process has been different. The vowel Tr, when joined to a consonant, can, according to Prākrit usage, be resolved either into 'i' (as in fant) or into 'a' (as: and for and) (see Varar. I, 27; Lassen p. 116, 2, a; Introd. §. 1); in consequence of the inherent r the following consonant is aspirated (as in Sin $dh\bar{i}$ : kk = k), so that we get the form  $a\bar{i}$ ; this aspirated  $a\bar{i}$ th is again elided, so that h only remains (see Lassen p. 207; Introd. §. 8), and thus we have the forms कह, कहं. With the other alleged form to hi, the matter stands different; we compare this Hinduī Dative affix with the Apabhranša Genitive affix है, the Genitive, as noted already, supplying in Prakrit the place of the Dative (as to the analysis of this & see Lassen p. 462 and 466).

The Marāṭhī uses two affixes to make up for the Dative, which are joined to the crude form by the so-called union-vowel, viz:  $\mathbf{H}$ , s and  $\mathbf{\overline{OI}}$  lā. The first of these two, s, is identical with the Prāk. Genit.-Dative case termination  $\mathbf{H}$  ss = Sansk.  $\mathbf{\overline{EV}}$  sy, so that we have here the remnant of an ancient Sanskrit-Prākrit case-inflexion. The latter one, lā is more doubtful as to its origin. Lassen has already started a conjecture (see Instit. Ling. Prāk. p. 55, 99) as to the origin of this affix; he derives it from the Sansk.  $\mathbf{\overline{EV}}$  =  $\mathbf{\overline{EV}}$  'place habitation', signifying the place, where the action rests. We cannot endorse this derivation, as the Marāṭhī case-affix is not  $\mathbf{\overline{EV}}$  āla, but  $\mathbf{\overline{EV}}$  lā and we cannot see any reason, why initial long  $\mathbf{\overline{EV}}$  should have been transferred to the back of this particle. We would compare the Marāṭhī Dative affix lā with the Sindhī postposition

الَّذِي الْآق, both of which are derived from the Sansk. root الله المتعلقة المتعلق

In Gujarātī the Dative-affix is nē, which we identify with the Sansk. preposition  $\overline{\mathbf{A}}$ , Greek  $\mathring{\epsilon}\nu$ , Latin in. The Panjābī uses as Dative affix nū, in which we likewise recognise the Sansk. preposition  $\overline{\mathbf{M}}$ , 'toward', 'to'.

5) The Ablative case is formed in Sindhī by the affix of a, which is always connected with the base itself and never written separately. The Sindhī shows itself thus fully conscious of the origin of this case-termination, which corresponds exactly to the Pali-Prakrit Ablative case-termination ā, which originates from the Sanskrit ablative आत् by the elision of final t (see Lassen p. 352, 304); in Sindhī the final long vowel has again been nasalized, as in so many other instances. In the Singular final 'u', ō, 'a' are dropped before the affix ā, as: کهران gharā, from a house, nom. کهر gharu, a house; مَرَو darā, out of a defile, nom. مَرو darō; zabānā, from the tongue, nom. زَبَانَ zabāna, tongue. Those nouns, which end in the Singular in î (î) and u (ũ), shorten the same before the affix ã, as: نوڙڻان nōṛiã, from a rope, nom. نوْزِي nōṛī, a rope; مِرْوًان mirua, from a wild beast, nom. مرؤن mirū, a wild beast. Nouns in ʿiʾ (ĕ) generally retain their final vowel before the affix ā, but they may also drop it, as: پهرئان phureā, from (by) a robbery, nom. پهرئان phure, a robbery; nirtā, out of thought, with reflexion, nom. پژتان nirte, thought. Nouns in ā either nasalize the same in the Ablative, or, more commonly, use the postposition the Ablative affix ā is joined to the full Formative in -ne, as: گهرئان gharane-ā, from houses, مِرْبَنَان), from wild beasts etc.

Besides this common Ablative affix  $\tilde{a}$  we find in Sindhī also such forms, as:  $a\tilde{u}$  (), contracted:  $\tilde{o}$  (), and even  $\tilde{u}$  (). In the more ancient idiom, as used by the Sindhī poëts, the Ablative Singular generally ends in  $\bar{a}$ -u. All these various Ablative affixes are derived from the Prākrit Ablative आ() (see Lassen p. 302, 304, 599), which becomes (by the elision of d)  $\bar{a}\bar{o}$ , or shortened:  $\bar{a}u$ .

The Sindhī uses also the postposition کهؤی khaū, کهؤی khō, to express the idea of the Ablative; all these and other postpositions require the Formative of a noun. Other postpositions, which are used to make up for the Ablative, see under the list of postpositions.

Annotation. Nearest to the Sindhī comes the Marāṭhī in this respect, which uses as Ablative-case terminations the affixes <sup>1)</sup> The postposition کهان khā etc. is derived form the same source, as بنان, with the only difference, that the Ablative termination ā, aū etc. has been added. The same is to be said of the Ablative postposition کنا kanā, derived from بکن by the same process.

un and hun, occasionally also tun. In Bangālī and Panjābī we find the Ablative affix tē (though in Panjābī a regular Ablative termination o is also to be met with), which has sprung from the Prākrit Ablative termination of tō; similar to it is the Gujarātī Ablative affix thī, which has been aspirated. In Hindī we find also thī, but most in use is sē, apparently identical with the Prākrit Genitive termination to (see Lassen p. 462).

6) The Sanskrit Genitive-case termination R, in Pāli and Prākrit R ss, has been lost in all the modern tongues, with the exception of the Bangālī, where ss has been hardened to r. All the other dialects have taken to a new way of forming the Genitive, of which we find already some traces in the old Vedic language: the noun, which ought to be placed in the Genitive case, is changed into an adjective by an adjective affix, and thence follows, as a matter of course, that this so-called Genitive, which is really and truly an adjective, must agree in gender, number and case with its governing noun as all other adjectives.

The Sindhī employs for this purpose the affix غَرِقَ (fem. إِنَّ إِنَّ أَنَّ ), corresponding to the common adjective affix kō (= Sansk. क), with transition of the tenuis (č=k) in tothe media (j), very likely to establish thereby some distinction between these two originally identical affixes. In Sindhī this adjective affix jō is always written separately, whereas the common adjective affix kō is joined to the base, as in Sanskrit (see §. 10, 24); it follows always the Formative Sing. or Plur. of a noun, as: گَهُرُن جَوْدُونَ جَوْدُونَ عَنَى ghara jō dhaṇī, the master of the house; گَهُرُن جَوْدُونَ جَوْدُونَ عَنَى mursa jī jōe, the wife of the man; مُرْسَن جَوْنُ جَوْدُونَ جَوْدُونَ جَوْدُونَ بَوْدُونَ عَنَى sandō, 'belonging to', is used quite in the same way, as ; as:

پریان سَنْدِي پَارَ دُي priyā sandē pāra dē, towards the direction of the friends.

Annotation. The Marāthī uses as Genitive case-affix 3, with transition of the guttural a into the corresponding palatal, as in Sindhī, yet without changing the tenuis into the media. The Hindī and Hindūstānī have preserved the original Sanskrit adjective affix a, without changing it into the palatal kā; in Hinduī we meet also with the affix ko and The Panjābī and Gujarātī seem to make an exception from what we have just stated. In Panjābī the Genitive case-affix is da, in which we recognise the Prak. Ablative affix टो dō (= तस्), turned into a Genitive affix. This Panjābī Genitive case-affix will clear up the Pasto Genitive prefix o da, being identical with it in origin. The Gujarātī employs as Genitive case-affix no, which is another adjective affix, corresponding in signification with and used in Sindhī (see §. 10, 27), to form adjectives in the same way, as ko (on the origin of this affix no see Bopp's Comp. Gram. III, §. 839).

7) The original Sanskrit Locative termination 'i' has been preserved in Sindhī, though the Locative can now only be distinguished in masc. bases ending in 'u', as: مَنهُ handhe, in a place, nom. مَنهُ handhu; شهره handhu; منه handhu, on the top, nom. مَنهُ mathu, the top. In nouns, ending in any other vowel, but 'u' (masc.), the Locative must be expressed, for perspicuity's sake, by an adverb or postposition, requiring the Formative of a noun, as: کرتهی مید kōthia mē or: کرتهی مید در این م

Annotation. In Marāthī the Locative affix 'i' has been lengthened to  $\bar{\imath}$  and at the same time nasalized  $= \tilde{\imath}$ . Besides this we meet also with the Locative termination  $\bar{\imath}$ , which is originally the Sansk. Ablative, used as a Locative. In Bangālī the Locative ends in  $\bar{e}$  (i), as in Sindhī, or is expressed by the affix  $t\bar{e}$ . In Panjābī the Locative is generally ex-

8) The Vocative is expressed in Sindhi by prefixing one of the interjectional particles: ē, hē, hō or yā, and, when speaking to an inferior, rē (fem. rī) or are.1) The final vowel of a noun in the Vocative either undergoes a change or remains unaltered. In the Vocative Singular masc. nouns ending in 'u' change the same to 'a', as: إي ميهَارُ ē mēhāra, o buffalo-keeper! nom. إي ميهَارُ mēhāru; those ending in ō change the same to ā, as: ë sūmirā, o Sūmirō! those ending in ū, ī, 'i'. remain unaltered, as: اي پُنهُون ē Punhū, o Punhū! In the Vocative Plural nouns ending in 'u' (m.) have the termination ō or ā, as: إي يَارو ĕ yārō or: يَارَا yāra, o friends! (nom. sing. زَيَازُ); those ending in ō terminate in the Vocative Plur. in ā, ō and au, as: اِي مَنْكَتَا ē mangatā, o beggars! or: مَنْكَتُو mangatō, مَنْكَتُو mangatau mangatō; those ending مَنْكَتوْ. mangata-u), Nom. Sing مَنْكَتوْ in ū (ũ) terminate in ō or ā, before which affixes the preceding ū (ũ) most be shortened, as: إي وَاقَاهُنًا ē vātāhuā or اي رَاتَاهُتُو ē vāṭāhuō, o travellers! Nom. Sing. vāṭāhū; those ending in ī terminate in the Plural

in ā, ō and au (a-u), shortening at the same time the final ī of the base, as: إي كيجِنَّرُ ē kēčiā, من قَلَمُ لَهُ اللهُ لَهُ اللهُ الله

Feminine nouns ending in 'u', 'a', ā, ī, 'i' (e) in the Nom. Singular, remain unaltered in the Vocative Sing.; in the Plural the Vocative is likewise identical with the Nominative. The few fem. nouns, which end irregularly in the Nom. Plural in 'u', as: فينَزُر bhēṇaru, sisters etc., retain likewise their final 'u' in the Vocative Plural, as: إِي بهينَزُر قَ bhēṇaru, o sisters! when ending in ū, they drop in the Vocative final Anusvāra, as: وهِنَرُرُون قَ dhiarū, o daughters! Nom. Plur.

The Vocative may also be used without any interjectional prefix, as: مَارِّفُكًا māṛhuā, o men!

§. 17.

III. The Formative.

The Formative or oblique case, though in Sindhī throughout identical with the Instrumentalis, is by itself no case, but represents merely the euphonic change of the final vowel of a noun previous to the accession of any flexional particle or postposition, by means of which the various cases are made up. The changes, which the final vowel of a noun undergoes before the accession of any adverbial postposition, are on the whole the same as those before any other affix. In Sindhī the postpositions do not coalesce with the noun itself, the language still being conscious of the fact, that it has to deal with original adverbs. We have hinted already, that the Formative is originally the Genitive; it would be rather difficult, to prove this in reference to the Formative of the Singular, but that the Formative of the Plural originally represents the Genitive Plural, is borne out by the Prākrit and the kindred modern idioms. In Prākrit the Genitive Plural ends in Auto, and, in the Apabhranša dialect at, at, thence the Sindhī Formative Plural a, e, or -ne.

Though the Formative be, in all likelihood, the Genitive of the Prākrit, the adjectival affix has been added to it, to turn it into an adjective, the modern idioms once having taken this course to supply the Genitive. From thence it was only a consequent step, to use the ancient Genitive as the base, to which all the other declensional postpositions were added, i. e. the Genitive was turned into the Formative.

- 1) The Formative of nouns ending in 'u' (masc. and fem.)
- a) Masculine nouns ending in 'u' change final 'u' in the Formative Sing. to 'a', as: مَاسَ طَقِعي, a slave, Form. مَاسَ طَقِعي أَلَّهَ عَاسَ طَقِعي لَقَعَه لَا اَسَ عَلَى طَقَعَه لِلْهُ اللهِ لَهُ اللهِ اللهُ اللهُ

vowel, the insertion of euphonic v is optional, as: الله المقطى المقطى

The following nouns ending in 'u' retain their final 'u' unaltered in the Formative Singular:

piu, father; Format. يِغُ جو piu jō etc. بِغُ جو piu jō etc. بِغُ جو bhāu, brother, Format. بِهَاءُ كَهِي as: بِهَاءُ كَهِي bhāu, brother, Format. بِهَاءُ كَهِي bhāu, brother, Format. بِهَاءُ كَهِي bhāu, brother, Format.

bhāu, price, are regular. بهَاء bhāu, price, are regular.

The Formative Plural ends either in ã, ễ or -ne, as: Nom. Sing. پهرن phulu, a flower; Nom. Plur. phula; Format. Plur. پهرن phul-ã, پهرن phul-ã, وهرن phula; Format. Plur. پهرن phul-ã, or: پهرن phula-ne. The Formative in ã and ễ is generally used without a following postposition, and that in -ne more with a following postposition, as being more sonorus; but in poëtry the one or other form is used as required by the metre.

Those nouns, which form their Plural irregularly, بهَاتُرُ bhāu, brother, Nom. Plur. بهَاتُرُ bhāura or بهَاتُرُ piura, derive their formative Plural either from the Nominative Singular or the Nominative Plural, as: بهَاتُرُ bhāune or: بهَاتُرُ piurane; the contracted form of the Formative (i. e: ā, ē) is never used with them.

b) Feminine nouns ending in 'u' remain unaltered in the Formative Sing., as: الله māu, mother, Format. مَاءُ جَوْر مَاءُ māu jō; in the Formative Plural the long ū of the Nom. Plur. is shortened before the Format. termination -ne, as: بنآير vijū, lightening, Nom. Plur. بخون vijū, Format. Plur. viju-ne.

Those fem. nouns, which have, besides their regular Plural, also an irregular one, derive their Formative Plur. from either form, as: بهينز bhēnu, sister, Nom. Plur. بهينز bhēnarū (بهينز bhēnarū); Format. Plur. بهينز bhēnune or: بهينز bhēnarune.

2) The Formative of nouns ending in ō (ō).

Nouns ending in ō change the same in the Formative Sing. to ē, as: مَتهو mathō, head, Format. مَتهو mathē. If final ō be preceded by 'a' or ā, a euphonic v may be inserted, as: مَتُو daō, the glare of the sun, Format. مَاتُو daē or: مَاتُو nāō, felt, Format. مَاتُو nāo or: مَاتُو nāvē; if ō be preceded by any other vowel, no insertion of euphonic v takes place, as: قِرَتُو čūō, perfumed oil, format. چُوتُو أَنْقَى čuē. If a noun end in a nasalized ō (= ō), the Anusvāra is retained in the Formative, as; مَاتَثُون nãō, the ninth, Format. مَانتُون nãō, the ninth, Format. مَانتُون nãō, the ninth, Format. مَانتُون nãō.

If  $\bar{o}$  be preceded by y, it is commonly dropped in the Formative, as:

پۇرھِيۇ pōrhyō (or pōrhiō), labour, Form. پۇرھِيۇ pōrhē. تۇرھىيۇ rūpayō, rupee, Format. رُوپَئِي

3) The Formative of nouns ending in ū (t).

Nouns ending in ū change the same in the Formative Singular to ua, as: وَالْهُو vāghū, crocodile, Format. وَالْهُو vāghua. If final ū be nasalized (= ū), the Anusvāra is commonly retained in the Formative, as: وچهُون vičhū, scorpion, Format. وچهُون vičhūa.

The Formative Plural ends either in u-ã, u-ễ, or u-ne, ua-ne, long ū and ū being shortened before the terminations of the Formative, as: رَهُوُ اللهِ rahū, a resident, Nom. plur. رَهُوَ rahū, residents, Format. Plur. رَهُوَ اللهِ rahuā (or: رَهُوَ اللهِ rahuē, رَهُوَ اللهِ rahuē, رَهُوَ اللهِ rahuā (or: رَهُوَ اللهِ rahuē, رَهُوَ اللهِ rahuē, مِرُون rahune; مِرُون mirū, a wild beast, Nom. Plur. مِرُون miruē, مِرُون miruē, مِرُون miruane.

4) The Formative of nouns ending in ā (ā).

Nouns ending in ā remain unaltered in the Formative Sing., as, آكياً, f., āgyā, command, Format. آكياً rājā; in the rormative Plur. they end (according to the termination of the Nomin. Plural: ā-ū) in u-ne, as: تَكِيَاتُنِ agyā-une; also رَاجَاتُن rājāune, masc.

5) The Formative of nouns ending in 'a'.

Nouns ending in 'a' remain unchanged in the Formative Sing., as: كَامَ kāma, a beam, Format. كَامَ kāma; in the Formative Plur. they terminate (according to their Nom. Plural) either in ā (ē) or u-ne, as: كَامَن kāmā, كَامَن kāmune.

- 6) The Formative of nouns ending in I (1).
- a) Masc. nouns ending in ī change the same in the Formative Sing. to i-a, as: مَالِيَ mālī, a gardener, Formative مَالِيَ mālia. Those nouns, which have final ī nasalized (= ī), retain the Anusvāra in the Formative, as: پرين prī, friend, Format. پرين prīa. The Formative Plural ends either in i-ā (yā), i-ē (yē), or in i-ne, ia-ne (yane), iu-ne (yune), as: مَالِيَن mālia, مَالِيَن mālia, مَالِيَن mālia, مَالِيَن mālia, مَالِيَن mālia, مَالِيَن mālia,
- b) Feminine nouns ending in ī change the same likewise in the Formative Sing. to i-a, as: توپيق ṭōpī, a hat, Format. توپيئ ṭōpia; the Formative Plural also quite agrees with that of the masc. nouns, as: توپیئ ṭōpiā, توپیئی ṭōpiae, توپیئی ṭōpiane, توپیئی ṭōpiune. Such fem. nouns, as have dropped final ī in the Nom. Plural (cf. §. 15, 6), drop the same also in the contracted form of the Formative Plur., as: مَنجِي manjī, a stool, Nom. Plur.

مَنجِنُن manjā, مَنجِنُن manjē; but: مَنجِنُن manjiane, مَنجِنُن manjiune are also in use. Some other nouns also, in which final ī is not preceded by a palatal, drop 'i' in the contracted form of the Formative Plural, as: کوڙين kōṛē, in scores, from کوڙي kōṛī, a score.

7) The Formative of nouns ending in 'i' (e).

Nouns ending in 'i' (fem. and masc.) remain unaltered in the Format. Sing., as: بهب , f., bhite, a wall, Format. بهب bhite; کیه kēhare (m.), a lion, Format. کیه kēhare. In the Formative Plural of fem. nouns the same terminations are employed as with fem. nouns ending in ī, as: bhitiā, بهتی bhitiā, bhitiē, بهتی bhitine, بهتی bhitiane, بهتی bhitiune. In the Formative Plural final 'i' is frequently dropped altogether, especially in poëtry, but only in the contracted form of the Formative, as: بهتی bhatē, in (different) ways, from بهتی bhate, habit, manner.

The Formative Plural of masc. nouns ends in -nc, the contracted form a, e hardly ever being in use with them, as: کیهٔ د keharine.

جَوْ جَوْمِ jõe, wife, which forms its Plural either regularly جَوْمِوْرُ jõyu, or irregularly: جَوْمِوْرُ jõiru, خَوْمِوْرُ jõhiru, has in the Format. Plur. either جَوْمِونِ jõhirine.

§. 18.

We let now follow, for the sake of perspicuity, a survey of the Sindhī declensional process. As the Genitive affix, jo is originally an adjective affix, by means of which the noun is turned into an adjective, dependent on the governing noun in gender, number and case, we premise the inflexion of  $\hat{j}$ , which, according to its terminations  $j\bar{o}$  and  $j\bar{\imath}$ , is inflected after the manner of nouns ending in  $\bar{o}$  and  $\bar{\imath}$  (fem.). As stated already,  $\hat{j}$  always requires the Formative of a noun, as all postpositions.

Chapter IX.

Adjectives.

§. 19.

The Sindhī adjectives and participles have the same terminations as the substantives and may therefore be classed under the same heads as the substantives.

The general rule, that the adjective must agree with its substantive in gender, number and case, holds good in Sindhī likewise.

In reference to the gender no exception takes place; but if an adjective or participle be referred to two preceding substantives, the one of which is masculine, the other feminine, the adjective or participle follows in the Plural masculine, as:

He created them male and female. Gen. I, 27.

With regard to the number the following exception takes place. When an adjective precedes a noun in the inflected case of the Plural, it may remain in the inflected case of the Singular, as:

كُوزَّنِ نَبِيُنِ كَهِي :to false prophets, or كُوزِّي نَبِيُنِ كَهِي

The same is the case, when an adjective precedes a noun in the Vocative Plural, the adjective being then commonly put in the Vocative Singular, as:

الي سِنْدهِ عَالَيْهَا مَا وَعَلَيْهِ وَالْمُعَا مَا وَعَلَيْهِ وَالْمُعَا مَا وَعَلَيْهِ وَالْمُعَا وَالْمُعَا مَا وَعَلَيْهِ وَالْمُعَا وَالْمُعَا وَالْمُعَا وَالْمُعَا وَالْمُعَا وَالْمُعَالِيَةِ وَالْمُعَالِيَةِ وَالْمُعَالِيَةِ وَالْمُعَالِيِّ وَالْمُعَالِيِّ وَالْمُعَالِيِّ وَالْمُعَالِيِ وَالْمُعَالِيِّ وَالْمُعَالِي وَالْمُعِلِي وَالْمُعَالِي وَالْمُعَالِي وَالْمُعَالِي وَالْمُعَلِي وَالْمُعِلِي وَالْمُعَلِي وَالْمُعِلِي وَالْمُعَالِي وَالْمُعَالِي وَالْمُعَالِي وَالْمُعَالِي وَالْمُعَالِي وَالْمُعَلِي وَالْمُعِلِي وَلِي وَالْمُعِلِي وَلِمُعِلِي وَالْمُعِلِي وَالْمُعِلِي وَالْمُعِلِي وَالْمُعِلِي وَل

He saw those two brothers throwing their net into the sea. Matth. IV, 18.

As to the case it may be observed, that adjectives, which end in ī and ū may remain uninflected, when immediately followed by a substantive in the Formative, as:

Do not make a journey in the caravan of vindictive men!

To both the helpless there was in many ways pleasant conversation. Maj. 198.

An adjective, following a substantive, may be put in the Ablative case, whereas the preceding substantive is only put in the Formative, as:

He who has come from the grand-father's country, has given me a reproach. Sh. Um. Mār. II, 2.

When an adjective precedes or follows a noun in the contracted form of the Formative Plural, it assumes the same form, as:

I seek in many ways the mercy of others. Sh. Jam. Kal. V, Epil. I.

By the burning coals of the thorn and babul tree I am indeed roasted! Sh. Jam. Kal. III, 3.

Adjectives precede, as a rule, their substantives, as:

Good, fragrant, sweet-smelling food was contained therein.

An adjective may also follow its substantive, especially when the adjective contains more syllables than its substantive, as:

The stars from the day of beginning are, without having deviated from their fixed intervals, in full turning.

Two and more adjectives very frequently follow their substantive as:

O sweet and charming friend, make the whole earth blooming! Sh. Sār. IV, 12.

By the knowing and wise God such secrets have been explained in his word

To adjectives, as well as to substantives, very frequently an emphatic ī accedes in all cases, signifying 'very', 'quite', 'truly', without altering in any way the termination of the adjective (the feminine Singular of adjectives ending in ō alone being excepted; see §. 20, 2), as: عَرِيمِيْي ōčitōī, quite accidental; عَرِيمِيْي γαrībeī (Sing. fem.) very humble.

O companion, make preparation of the very instant journey! Golden Alph. I, 1.

§. 20.

Formation of gender.

With reference to the derivation of the feminine from masculine nouns the general rules, which have been laid down in Chapter VII,  $\S$ . 14, are equally applicable to adjectives. Some minor points, in which adjectives differ in this respect from substantives of the same termination, will be noticed under the following heads.

1) Adjectives ending in 'u'.

These change the masc. termination 'u' either to 'e' (i) or to 'a', as:

نِدَهَرِ nidharu, helpless, fem. نِدَهَرِ nidhare or: بَنْهَرِ nidhara.

Forlorn, helpless, wretched, unacquainted I am! Sh. Ābiri VIII, 1.

Some adjectives of Sindhī origin, but more so those borrowed from the Arabic or Persian, remain without any change of gender, number and case, as: ** sarsu, plentiful (s.); گُوْرَ gaḍu, mixed (s.); سَهِمْ sahiju, easy (s.); خُوبُ عَلَمْ sabaɔu, vain (a.); خُوبُ tamāmu, whole (a.); خُوبُ ئَلْسُنُ tamāmu, whole (a.); خُوبُ ئُلُونُ yūbu, good (p.); ئُرسْتُ mātu, done for (p.); مَاتُ mātu, done for (p.); مَاتُ hairānu, bewildered (a.); مَاتُ hairānu, killed (a.); مَاتُ sāfu, clean (a.); مَعْلُمُ maṣlimu, known (corrupted from مَعْلُمُ (a.)), etc. etc.

Those who have died before dying, they are not done for when dead. Sh. Masõuri IV, 7.

By the medicine, which is in the mouth of the physicians, they have been made whole. Sh. Jam. Kal. II, 17.

Those who have looked about with men, will there be put to shame. Maj. 266.

2) Adjectives ending in ō (ō).

These change the masc. termination to ī (ĩ); as: غُرَّرَى kūṛō, false, fem. نَنتُون nãō, new, fem. نَنتُون nãō.

When an adjective or participle ends in yō (or iō), being preceded by a consonant, the y (i) is dropped before the fem. termination ī, as: قُلُهِيْنُ dukhyō or: قُلُهِيْنُ dukhyō or: قُلُهِيْنُ لَاللهُ اللهُ لَاللهُ اللهُ لَاللهُ اللهُ لَاللهُ اللهُ لَاللهُ اللهُ اللهُ in yī, as: چَيوَ čayō, said (Part. perf. from چَيوَ), fem. چَيي čayī; کَيوْ kayō, made (another form of the part. perf. of کَيوْ), fem. کَييي āyō, come (part. perf. from آيوْ āyī; but the y may just as well be dropped in such like forms, as: čaī, kaī, āī etc.

When the emphatic ī accedes to the feminine Singular, then the masc termination ō is changed to yāī in the Nominative, as: مُنو munō, blunt, with the emphatic ī in the feminine: مُنيَائِي munyāī; but the other cases of the feminine are quite regular, and hardly ever found with an emphatic ī.

Look, says Latif, what credit (is given) to pieces of straw! Sh. Suh. VIII, 1.

If she sees the face of the buffalo-keeper, she becomes quickly well. Sh. Suh. Čhōṭ. 5.

3) Adjectives ending in ū (ũ).

These do not change their termination in the feminine, as: مَهُ sahū, masc. and fem., patient; وَيَرْعُو vēṛhū, masc. and fem., quarrelsome.

4) Adjectives ending in ā (ā).

These are comparatively few in number and admit of no change of gender, as: الْقَاقَةُ رَّالَانَ dِatā, masc. and fem., liberal; تَالَان tālā, masc. and fem., worried. The greater number of them is indeclinable, as: صَفَا safā, pure (a.); مَفَا fanā, extinct (a.); يَهَان phã, tired; يُهَان judā, separate (p.).

5) Adjectives ending in ă.

They admit of no change of gender and are all indeclinable ), as: رهيك vadhīka, excessive; سنخ suńa, empty, barren; دهار dhāra, separate, or compounded: جَامَ dhārōdhāra; جَامَ jāla or جَارَ عَارَ jāra, much;

جِيجُ سَبهَكَنْهِنِ جِيجَ سِين دَرْسَنُ دهَارودهَارَ

(His i. e. God's) life is with the life of every one; but the aspect is quite different. Sh. Kal. I, 24.

Whose heads (are) as under, the trunks separated, the limbs in the caldron. Sh. Kal.  $\Pi$ , 24.

6) Adjectives ending in ī (ī).

These remain unchanged in the feminine, as: بَارِي bārī, carrying a burden, masc. and fem.; sa-vādī, savoury, masc. and fem.; some are only used in the feminine.

7) Adjectives ending in e (i).

They do not differ in the feminine, like those ending in ī; as: چَوْرَسِ čaurase, masc. and fem., square. Most of them are indeclinable, chiefly those of foreign origin, e. g.: سُدهِ sudhe, pure; سُدهِ dadhe, wrong; سُدهِ supreme; خُوشِ xuše (p.), pleasant (generally pronounced short and partly also written شَادِ غَشُ šāde (p.), joyful; مَرَابَرِ barābare (p.), abreast, right; بَرَابَرِ bajāe (p.), performed.

<sup>1)</sup> Stack exhibits in his Sindhi Grammar the paradigma sakhara and inflects it in the Formative Plural; but in his Dictionary he gives sakharu, which is the proper termination. I have never met with an adjective ending in 'a', inflected in any way, for the cardinal numbers panja five etc. can hardly be classed under this head.

The feminine affixes nī, ne, ānī (yānī), āine (yāine) are occasionally used with adjectives ending in u, ō, ū, ī, if some inherent quality, habit or occupation of living beings is to be marked out (the details see Chapter VII, §. 14), as: غَرِيبِن چهوْكَر γαrībiņe čhōkare, a girl (habitually) humble; سَادَهُنِي رَنَ عِهوْكِيانِي دُاچِي hōḍiyānī ḍāčī, an obstinate (female) camel.

We subjoin here a survey of the inflexion of adjectives.

§. 21.

Comparison of adjectives.

The Sindhī, as well as the cognate idioms, has lost the power to form a Comparative and Superlative degree after the manner of the Sanskrit (and Persian) by means of adjective affixes, and it is very remarkable, that the Semitic way of making up for the degrees of comparison has been adopted. In order to express the idea of the Comparative, the object or objects, with which another is to be compared, is put in the Ablative, or, which is the same, the postpositions کھاں khã, manjhā and si-مَنجِهَان , شَان khū, مَنجِهَان manjhā and similar ones (see the Postpositions) are employed, the adjective itself remaining in the Positive. In order to express the idea of the Superlative, the pronominal adjective all is placed before the Ablative. Ablative the difference or distance, which exists between the objects compared, is pointed out.

Much sweeter than sweetness, (and) not bitter is the word. Sh. Kal. III, 10.

More valuable than a hundred heads is the breath of the friend (Plur.). Sh. Kal. II, 30.

Chapter X.

Numeral adjectives.

§. 22.

The Sindhī possesses a great variety of numeral adjectives.

I. The CARDINAL NUMBERS are:

- هِيكِڙو ; hiku هِكِڙو ku هِيكِڙو hiku; هِيكُ hiku هِيكُ hēkirō, one.
- بَ بَ ba, two. ۳ تري trē, three.
- خَار ۽ čāre, four.
- panja, five. پَخْمَ
- ه خَهَ čhaha, six.
- v سَتَ sata, seven.
- م atha, eight.
- nava, nine.

- أَنْهُم بَا daha, ten.
- ا كَارَهَنْ yārahā; اِكَارَهَنْ ikārahā; كَارَهَنْ kārahā, olevon.
- نَّ بَارَهَنَ آbārahā, twelve.
- نيرَهَنْ تا tērahā, thirteen.
- نَّهُنٌ خَرْثُمُنٌ وَرَقَمُهُمْ čōḍahã, fourteen.
- بَنْدَرَهَنْ هَا pandhrā, fifteen. پَنْدَرَهَنْ
- sōrahā, sixteen. سوْرَهَنْ
- ıv سَتَرَهَن satrahā, seventeen.
- ın اَزَّعَنْ arahã, eighteen.
- uṇivīha, nineteen. أُنِيهَ uṇīha, أُنِيهَ
- vīha, twenty.

Annotation. The Sindhi numerals are all derived from the Sanskrit by the medium of the Prākrit. — Sansk. Va, one, Prāk. Va: in Sindhī a cuphonic h has been preposed, as: hiku (= hikku). When commencing to count the Hindus use to say instead of hiku: بَرْكَهَتَ barkhu, and the Musalmans: بَرْكَهَ barkhata, invoking thereby a blessing. — Sansk. 18, two, Prāk. दो; in Sindhī the crude form dva has been assimilated to vva and thence to ba (= bba). Besides - ba we meet also occasionally the form  $\dot{\tilde{c}}$   $\dot{\tilde{q}}$   $\ddot{\tilde{u}}$ , which has sprung from the Prākrit रोणि. - Sansk. चि, three, Sindhī تري ṭrē, whereas the Prāk. form निरिष्ण has given rise to the Hindustanī بين Sansk. चत्र, four, Prāk. चतारि; in Sindhī the conjunct tt has again been elided = čāre. — Sansk. पञ्च, Prāk. पञ्च; in Sindhī (and Panjābī) the tenuis č has been changed into the media j (but in Hindūstānī and Marāthī again pānč). — Sansk. षष्, six; Prāk. छ, as in Sindhī. -- Sansk. सप्रन्, seven, Prāk. सत्तः; Sindhī: sata (= satta); Panjābī: satt; but in Hindūstānī and Marāthī: sāt, the conjunct tt being dissolved by lengthening the preceding vowel.— Sansk. স্থান, Prāk. স্থাই; Sindhī:

ațha (= ațțha); Panjābī: ațțh; but Hindūst. and Marāțhī: āțh. Sansk. नवन, nine, Prāk. णश्च; Sindhī: nava; Panjābī: nō; Hindūst.: nau; Marāṭhī: nava. — Sansk. दशन, ten, Prāk. दस; Sindhī: daha; Marāṭhī: dahā; Hindūstānī and Panjābī: das.

In Sanskrit the first nine numbers are prefixed to दूशन, ten, to form the following nine numerals; but in Prākrit and consequently in Sindhī (as well as in the cognate dialects) they undergo already so great changes, that the way, in which they have been compounded, is at the first sight scarcely recognisable. The Prākrit form दस is in these compounds first changed to दह and thence to रह, as: Prākrit एञ्चारह = Sansk. एका-दशन् eleven; Sindhī: yārahã, with elision of k, or without elision of k: ikārahā or kārahā (initial 'i' being dropped). - Prāk. वारह = Sansk. हादशन्, twelve; Sindhī: bārahā. - Prākrit तरह = Sansk. चयोदशन् thirteen; Sindhī: tērahā. - Prākrit चउद्दह = Sansk. चतुरेशन्, fourteen; Sindhī: codahā. An exception forms the Sindhī: pandrahā or pandhrā, fifteen, the Prākrit form of which is पराणाह = Sansk. पञ्चरशन, the conjunct nč, which in Prākrit has been assimilated to the cerebral nn, having been changed in Sindhī to nd before the liquida r. Prākrit मोलह(?) = Sansk. षोडशन् (Var. II, 23?), sixteen; Sindhī: sorahā; Hindustānī: solah. Prākrit सत्तरह(?) = Sansk. सप्तदशन, seventeen; Sindhī: satrahā; Hindūstānī: satrah. — Prākrit अट्टाह = Sansk. अष्टादशन्, eighteen; Sindhī: arahã, the Prākrit cerebral conjunct the being changed in Sindhī to r (see Introd. §. 7, 2) and assimilating the following dental r, by throwing out the long ā; Panjābī: aṭhārā; Hindūstānī: aṭhārah; Marāṭhī (with elision of medial ā): aṭharā. — Sansk. जनविंशति (Prākrit form unknown), one less than twenty (Latin: un-deviginti); Sindhī: uṇīha or uṇivīha; the Sanskrit विंशति twenty, becomes in Prākrit वीसई; thence Sindhī: vīha; in compound numerals the v is generally elided, when preceded by a consonant, as: unīha or univīha; Panjābī: unnī; Hindūstānī: unīs; Marāthī: ēkuņīs.

- بنيه بريه trīha, thirty.

Some of the units are lengthened in these compounds, as: إِنَّهُ satā, الله satā, but apparently not after a fixed rule. خار čāre, four, is, when compounded with another numeral, contracted to čō, after a different process of assimilation, being first dissolved into ča-ur, and thence into čō, by assimilating the semi-vowel r with the following v. The same is the case in Panjābī, Hindūstānī and Marāṭhī.

تربة بالمالية بالمال

satare, seventy, makes an exception, final t (Sansk. समिति) having been changed to r; the same is the case in Panjābī (sattar), Hindūstānī (sattar) and in Marāṭhī (sattar).— أسي asī, eighty, Sansk. عبالة navē, panjābī and Hindūstānī assī, but Marāṭhī aisī.— نري navē, ninety (in Lāṛ also نوء nōe), Sansk. नवितः; Panjābī likewise: navvē; Hindūstānī navē, but Marāṭhī navvad.

ایکتریه قالمبریه و ق

which must also be numbered uṇ, one less), it is changed to تَالِيهَ tālīha; but in this case the units require the conjunctive vowel ē, to facilitate the pronunciation. This change of č to t is not yet to be found in the older Prākrit, but seems to belong to a later period of the language. Lassen only mentions (§. 33, 4), that t is occasionally changed to t and č, thence we may conclude, that vice versa č also was liable to be changed to t. The same is the case in the Panjābī (iktālī) and Hindūstānī (iktālīs), but not in Marāṭhī (ēkēčālis).

*) We cannot offer a satisfactory explanation of these two curious forms. The corresponding Hindust. numeral is: ninānavē, the Panjābī narinavē. We can understand, how the Panjābī nar (nan = nan = nar) could be changed in Sindhī to nad or nadh; but we cannot well perceive, that d or dh should have been exchanged for a dental d or Annotation. sau is derived from the Sansk. মূন, Prāk. মুহা; Panjābī sau or sai; Hindūstānī likewise sau or sai; Marāthī (in compounds) šē; Gujarātī sō.

The numbers above one hundred are commonly formed as in English by placing the lesser number after hundred, as:

hiku sau hiku, one hundred (and) one.

But there are two other ways of making up these numbers; the one is to place before sau the lesser number in an adjective form, as إِيكُوْ سَرُّ وَkō sau, literally: one hundred having or possessing one; or to put after the numeral adjective the noun utar (originally an adjective) which is contracted with the termination of the preceding numeral into otar, as:

- اِیکوْتَرْسَوُّ ekō sau, or: إیکوْتَرْسَوُّ ekōtarsau, one hundred (and) one.
- أَبِرُوتَرْسَوُ birō sau, or: بِروَتَرْسَوُ birō tarsau, one hundred (and) two.
- بَرُوْتَرْسَوُ trirō sau, or: تَرِوْتَرْسَوُ trirō sau, or: تَرِوْتَرْسَوُ trirō sau, one hundred (and) three.
- دُوْرُوْتُرْسَوُ corō sau, or: چۇرۇتَرْسَوُ čōrōtarsau, one hundred (and) four.

dh, which would be a surprising phenomenon in a modern Prakrit idiom. In regard to vadhanave it would be necessary to assume a change of n to v, of which we could not adduce another instance.

- دُمُهُوْ سَوُّ دُhahō sau, or: چَهَهُوْ سَوُّ دُhahōtarsau, one hundred (and) six.

When the numeral adjectives of the first series precede the Plural of sau, they must agree with their substantive in number, as:

- two hundreds having or possessing one.
- ا بَرَّا بَهِ سَوَ biṛā ba sava, two hundred and two. etc. etc. etc.

These numerals are not used in the Formative, as they are only employed in counting. The numerals of the second series remain unaltered, according to their original signification.

The hundreds are regularly made up by the Plural of  $\frac{t}{2}$ , as:

r. (سَ or) بَ سَرَ ba sava (or sā) two hundred.
       بَوي سَوَ trē sava, three hundred.
       جەر سَو čāre sava, four hundred.

                 (one hundred arbs).
```

انین nīlu, ten billions (one hundred kharbs).

padamu, one thousand billions (one hundred nīls).

Annotation. سَهْسَ sahásu is derived from the Sansk. सहस्स, Prāk. सहस्स. It is a regular substantive and inflected accordingly. المُنْ hazāru (s. m.) is of Persian origin. — المُنْ المُلاه المُنْ ا

§. 23.

Inflexion of the cardinal numbers.

hiku or مِكْتُو hikirō are regular adjectives and inflected according to their respective terminations (هِكُ m.; fem. etc.); the other numerals have no change of gender, but are inflected in the Formative Plural, as:

ٻَہ	ьа, two;	Format.	Plural:	ٻن	$\bar{\mathrm{bine}}$ .
تّري	ṭrē, three;	"	"	ٿُرِنِ	trine.
چَارِ	čāre, four;	17	"	ڿؘؽؚڹ	čaine.
ڽٙڿٛ	panja, five;	"	"	_	panjane.
چھَ	čha, six;	27	"	جهَهَنِ	čhahane.
سَتَ	saha, seven;	27	"	سَتَن	satane.
أتنه	atha, eight;	"	"	ٱتْهَنِ	athane.
نَنْوَن	nāvā, nine;	"	"	نَنْوَنِ	nãvane.
ڎؙۘۿۘ	daha, ten;	"	"	ڎؘۿؘڹۣٙ	đahane.

The following numerals, from eleven-eighten, throw final Anusvāra off in the Formative Plural and drop the short a, preceding h, as;

يَارُهَنِ yārhane. يَارُهَنِ yārhane. يَارُهَنِ yārhane. يَارُهَنِ yārhane. بَارُهَنِ bārahā, twelve; " " پَارَهَنْ bārhane. نَيْرُهَنْ tērahā, thirteen; " " تَيْرُهَنْ tērhane. دُوْتُهَنْ دُوَرَّهُمْنْ دُوْرَهُمْنْ دُوْرَهُمْنْ pandraha, fifteen; " " يَنْدُرَهَنْ pandhrā, پُنْدُهُرُن pandhrā, پُنْدُهُرُان vīha, twenty; " " vīha, twenty; " " vīhane.

Those numerals, which end in ĕ (ĭ) and ē, are not capable of inflexion, as: سَتْهِ saṭhe, sixty; مَتْ saṭare, seventy; أَسِى navē or نَوْءِ nōe, ninety; but نَوْءِ asī, eighty, makes the Format. Sing. آسِيَ asia.

sa-u, hundred; is inflected, as follows:
SING. PLUR.

Nom. پَّسَ sau; پَسَ sava, or contracted لَسَ sā.
Format. پَسَ sava; سَوَنِ savane, سَانِ sāne, سَوَنِ savē, سَوْنِ savē.

The cardinal numbers, chiefly the decimal ones, are also used as collective numbers, and in this case they are inflected according to their respective terminations, e. g. تري ثَهُن ṭrē ḍahū, three tens, Formative جَارِ سَتَهِئُرن trine ḍahune; جَارِ سَتَهِئُرن navēū, four sixties; نَرِينُ navē forms the Plural نَرِينُن navēū, Format. نَرِينُن navēune. When used in a collective sense these numerals are mostly put in the Formative Plural ending in ē, as: ويهين vīhē, in scores; سَوِين savē, in hundreds, سَهَسين sahásē, in thousands.

When a noun in the Formative Plural takes the termination ne or ē, the preceding numeral, like all other adjectives, must take the same too, or: قُعَنِ وَيَرِن كَهِي and تَرَع do to ten enemies, or: تَرع أَهِين ويرثين كهي do not admit of a Formative in ē, but make it ī, as: bī, ين trī; of چَئين there is a Formative as well in ī as in ē; چَئين čaī or: چَئين čaē; but the Formatives bī, ṭrī, čaī are also used with Formatives of nouns ending in ne.

The emphatic ī (hī) may also be affixed to the cardinal numbers to express completeness or intensity, as: مِثْنِي baī or: بِنْهِنِ beī, all two = both, Formative Plural: بِنْهِنِ binhī or: بِنْهِنِ binhī, or: بِنْهِنِ binhine, بِنْهِنِي binhinē, بِنْهِنِي trīnhī or: تربُعِي trīnhī, all three, Formative Plural: تربُهِنِ trīnhī, or: تربُهِنِ trīnhī, all binhinē, تربُهِنِ trīnhīnī. چَارِيثِي trīnhīnī. چَارِيثِي čāraī or: چَارِيثِي trīnhinī. تربُهِنِي trīnhinī, all eight, Formative Plural: تَهْنِي aṭhaī, all eight, Formative Plural:

The cardinal numbers, from two upwards generally require their substantive in the Plural; but they may also be constructed with the Singular, after the manner of the Persian. Sau, hazāru, sahásu, lakhu etc., being properly substantives, are either constructed with the Genitive Plural of the following substantive, or they have the same coordinated in the Plural. The numerals preceding a substantive may either be inflected according to the termination of the substantive or they may remain uninflected; when two or more numerals precede a substantive, the last only is inflected.

Of compound numbers only the last takes the form of the ordinal and is inflected, as:

بَهُ سَوِيوْن ba saviyō, the two hundredth.

أَ يَهُ لَهُ اللهُ لَهُ أَلَّهُ أَلَّهُ أَلِهُ أَلِهُ اللهُ اللهُ أَلَّهُ أَلَّهُ اللهُ الله

Annotation. The ordinals are regularly derived from the Prākrit; پهِريوْن peheryō, the first, though, has not followed the traces of the Prākrit (= 434), but taken its own course of assimilation; Sansk. TUH, thence: pahama; the m of pahama has been changed in a rather unusual way to l (r), pahala, pahara, thence the Sindhī: paharyo or peheryo. Hindust. and Panjābī: pahilā, Marāṭhī likewise: pahilā. بِعُثو biō, the second, points back to the Prakrit वीञ्च (shortened from विदिञ्च), and the other form بِيجَوْ bījō, corresponds to the Prāk. दुइजा. تُرتُوْ trio, the third, coincides with the Prakrit and, with this dif-čotho, the fourth, Prakrit चड़, the original dental (th) has been preserved in Sindhī. The following ordinals are all regularly derived from the cardinals, by adding the affix ocorresponding to the Sansk. affix 77, which has in Sindhi been changed to  $\tilde{o}$  by the elison of t (compare: Introd. §. 9). Hindustani and Panjabi tama has been similarly changed to va, in Marathi to va; the Gujarati has preserved the affix mo, and the Bangālī even the whole affix tam.

On the eleventh day the kindness of the Bērāgīs returned. Sh. Rāmak, II, 11.

The date of the year is not expressed by the ordinals, but by the cardinals:

مَاهَ مُبَارَکَ رَمَضَانَ جِي سَتَاوِيهِنِيَّ سَارِي قَامَرِي قَامَرِي قَدَّرِ رَاتِ قِصَّوْ پُنوْ ثِينْهِ آنگَارِي آکَارَهَنْ سَا چَهَٿرِيهَ هِجْرَتَ هوْ سَنَّ آکَارَهَنْ سَا چَهَٿرِيهَ هِجْرَتَ هوْ سَنَّ عَارِفَنِ جِي عِشْقَ جوْ فَاضِلَ جوْزِيُوْ فَنُ

On the twenty seventh of the blessed month of Ramazān, according to calculation,

In the night of power the story was completed, on a Tuesday.

It was the year of the Hijrat eleven hundred thirty six (= A. D. 1724, 8th June).

By Fāzil was composed the science of the love of the wise ones (i. e. Sūfīs). Maj. 829.

III. ARITHMETICAL FIGURES.

The arithmetical figures or names of the numbers are expressed by adjectives, which are formed by adding the adjective affix  $\bar{o}$  to the cardinal numbers; some few have also, in order to distinguish the arithmetical figures from the ordinals, the affix  $k\bar{o}$ .

أيكو ekō, مِكوْ, hikō, containing the number 'one'; the number or figure 'one'.

They are regularly inflected as adjectives ending in ō; ترکی کهَان پوْء چَوْنکوْ تهوْ لَگِي after the number three comes the number four.

§. 27.

IV. COLLECTIVE NUMBERS.

We have noticed already (§. 22), that the cardinal numbers may also be employed as collective numbers; but the Sindhī possesses also a peculiar kind of numerals, which express an aggregate sum; these are:

رَّهَاكُوْ رَّهَارَةُ وَّهَارُو vihārō, vihārō, the sum of twenty; about twenty. vīhārō, trihārō, the sum of thirty; about thirty. ترِهَارُو تُهَارُو تُتَهَارُو دُهَالُهُ دُهَالُهُ دُهَالُهُ مُنْ اللهُ ا sāṭhīkō, the sum of sixty, about sixty.

They are properly adjectives, formed by the affixes kō (§. 10, 24) and ārō, as: قَهَاكوْ ِلَّهُ اَلَهُ لَهُ اَلَهُ لِمَارِةُ لِمَارِةً لِمِنْ لِمَارِةً لِمُعْرَالِةً لِمَارِةً لِمَارِةً لِمِمْرِكُمْ لِمِنْ لِمَارِةً لِمَارِةً لِمِنْ لِمَارِةً لِمَارِةً لِمَارِةً لِمِنْ لِمَارِةً لِمَارِةً لِمِنْ لِمَارِةً لِمَارِةً لِمَارِةً لِمِنْ لِمَارِةً لِمَالْمُ لِمَارِةً لِمَالْمُ لِمَارِةً لِمَالِعُلِمُ لِمَالِمُلِمَالِمُلْمَالِهُ لِمَالِمُلْمَالِهُ لِمَالِمُ لِمَالِعُلِمِلِمُ لِمَالِمُ لِمَالِمُلِمِلْمِلْمِلْمِلْمِلْمِلْمِلْمِلْمِلْمُلِمِلْمُلِمُ لِمَالِمُلِمُ لِمِلْمُلِمِلِمُلْمِلِمُ لِمِلْمُ لِمِلْمُلْمُ لِمَالِمُلْمُ لِمِل

To express more distinctly the indefiniteness of such a number, the adverb کهن khanu (literally: piece, portion, Sansk. جمان is added to them as well as to the cardinal numbers; e. g. وهارو کهن vihārō khanu, about twenty.

يَيْخَ هَزَارَ كَهَنُ مُرْسَ هُنًا

They were about five thousand men. Matth. 14, 21.

چُوْنْكِرِّي čaũku, چَوْنْكِرِّي čaũkirī, the sum of four, kōrī, a score, are only used substantively, the latter generally in the Formative Plural کوڙيں kōrē, in scores, as:

In thousands are the thanksgivings, in scores the favours of the kind one (i. e. God). Sh. Sur $\bar{a}\bar{g}$  I, Epil. 1.

saikirō, a hundred, is only used when speaking of interest, expressing our "per cent", as: آدهَارْيَمِ اللهُ الله one hundred having one above it, i. e. one per cent;

two per cent. بروتِرو سَوُّ three per cent. تَرِروتِروْ سَوُّ

etc. etc

Of the same kind are the compound adjectives, such as: ﴿ وَالْوَ (سَوُّ cauāno (sau), one hundred having four Annas, i.e. 4 Annas per cent; تربّانيو (سَوُّ tripāṇyō (sau), one hundred having three quarters of a rupee, i. e. at three quarters of a rupee per cent, etc. When مِتِى mitī (interest) is used, ثِينٌ هُوْتِرِي مِتِي مِتِي, interest of one and a half.

§. 28.

V. PROPORTIONAL NUMBERS.

The numerals denoting 'fold', are:

ایکیهُونْوْ ایکیهُونْوْ ایکیهُونْوْ trīhuṇō, fortyfold.

ئَجُالْیهُونُوْ خَقَاتَالْسَبَقَ, fortyfold.

ئِجُاهُونُوْ panjāhūṇō, fiftyfold.

ئِجُاهُونُوْ panjāhūṇō, fiftyfold.

غنْجُناهُونُوْ sathyūṇō, sixtyfold.

غنونُوْ asyūṇō, eightyfold.

ئونئُونُوْ navēūṇō, ninetyfold.

غنْجُنُونُوْ saūṇō, hundredfold.

In the same way the affix ūṇō (cf. §. 10, 28) is added to the fractional numbers, as:

adhūṇō, one half-fold.

savāūṇō, one (or a certain sum) and a quarter-fold.

تْدِيْكُهُولْوْ d̄ēḍhūṇō, one and a half-fold.

aḍ̄hāūṇō, two and a half-fold.

جَدُّهِين آندُوَ تَدُهِين پَانَ كهَان بِينْو دوزَخَ جو بَارُ تهَا كَريوس

When he has been brought over by you, then you make him twofold more a child of hell, than yourselves. Matth. 23, 15.

Other seeds fill upon good land; these brought forth fruit, some hundredfold, some sixtyfold, some thirtyfold. Matth. 13, 8.

§. 29.

VI. REDUPLICATIVE NUMBERS.

The numeral adverbs, denoting reduplication, are.

The further reduplicatives are commonly made up by the cardinals with the nouns زارو vārō, بهيرو or ينكو or ينكو (linō).

Annotation. The affix à, or shortened à, has taken its origin from the Sansk.  $\overline{\textbf{q11}}$ , Hindūstānī: bārah, Panjābī: vārī; in Sindhī v has been elided and euphonic h inserted.

VII. FRACTIONAL NUMBERS.

The fractional numbers are of two kinds; they are either substantives or adjectives;

a) substantives are:
چۇتچ čōthe,
خۇتچ čōthāī, a quarter.
دۆتھائىي čōthō,

پَاءِ pāu, a quarter; Plur. پَاءِ pāva or پَاءِ pā. trihāī, a third. ترهَائِي adhu, a half.

savāī, one and a quarter; a quarter more (than the whole).

عَادُّهُ sāḍhu, one half more (than the specified sum). ثيدٌهُ d̄ēḍhe, one and a half.

b) adjectives are:

paunō, كَوْنُوْ paunō, one quarter less (than the whole). مُنوْ adhu, half.

savā, one quarter more (than the whole). sāḍhā, one half more (than the whole).

دُيدُهُ أَوَلِهُم d̄ēḍhu, one and a half.

aḍhāĭ, two and a half.

is derived from the Sansk. चतुर्थाम, Hindūstānī cauth, cauthāi; in the same way نام is derived from the Sansk. चतुर्थाम, Hindūstānī cauth, cauthāi; in the same way نام is derived from the Sansk. चतुर्थाम, Hindūstānī tihāi. خانه corresponds to the Sansk. चतुर्थाम, Hindūstānī pāō; the adjective بانه has sprung from the Sansk. adj. चतुर्थाम, Hindūst. paunā, Marāṭhī pāūṇ; the origin of منه is doubtful. أمنه is substantive and adjective at the same time, Sansk. चिंक, Hindūst. ādhā. عنه and the adjective أساقها and the adjective اساقها and the adjective اساقها having a half, with a half, Hindūstānī (Instrum.)

sāṛhē. ثِينٌهُ and the adjective ثِينٌهُ are apparently derived from an unusual Sansk. compound  $ع + لام الله على are apparently derived from an unusual Sansk. compound <math>arr + rac{1}{2}$  having three halves, Hindūst. dēṛh, Panjābī deḍh, Marāṭhī dīḍ. النّهَائِي has drawn its origin from the Sansk. الله على المنافقة المنافقة

In reference to the use of these fractional numbers it is to be observed, that مُنوْ نَه generally used with units, and مُنوْ رُوپَيوْ with two, three etc., as: مُنوْ رُوپَيوْ, a rupee wanting a quarter = three quarters of a rupee; two rupees wanting a quarter = one rupee and three quarters; پُونُوْ سَوُ one hundred wanting a quarter = 75. پُونُوْ سَوُ one hundred wanting a quarter = 75. سَوَا سِيرُ one ser and a quarter; سَوَا سِيرُ تَرِي سِيرُ three sers and a quarter.

is not inflected in the Singular, nor in the Nominative Plural, but it has a Formative Plural masc., viz.: سَوَاحِين savāine, سَوَاحِين savāyane or: سَوَاحِين savāyane; but generally it is not inflected at all, e.g.: سَوَاحِين مَنْنِ سِين with four maunds and a quarter or: سَوَا جَعْين مَنْنِ سِين may also precede عَزَارُ , سَوُ etc., as: سَوَا عَزَارُ , مَعْ one thousand and a quarter = 1250.

عُلَى adhu, half, is a common adjective and used accordingly.

sāḍhā, adding one half, is only used with nouns of number subsequent to 'two', and therefore ever found in the Plural; its fem. is سَادَهِيُون sādhiyū.

تَثِهِن سَادَهَا نَنْرَن سِيرَ سِنْدُرَ تُرَارِّي تورِي

Then she weighs with a balance nine sers and a half of read lead. Maj. 320.

ثينٌ مُولِللهِ وَيَنْهُ وَلِيْنَهُ وَلِيْنَهُ وَلِيْنَهُ وَلِيْنَهُ وَلِيْنَهُ وَلِيْنَهُ وَاللهِ Singular and not compounded with other numbers, as: مُنِينُهُ وَنَا وَاللهُ وَاللّهُ وَاللّهُ

أَذْهَائِي عَلَيْنِ عَلَى adhāi, two and a half, is only used in the Plural, without distinction of gender in the Nominative; in the Formative Plural it makes for the Masc. اَذْهَائِي adhāine, اَدْهَائِي adhāine, اَدْهَائِي adhāine, اَدْهَائِي عَلَمْ adhāine, اَدْهَائِي عَلَمْ adhāine, اَدْهَائِي عَلَمْ adhāine, اَدْهَائِي كَمَ adhāine, اَدْهَائِي كَمَ adhāine, اَدْهَائِي كَمَ عَلَيْنِ عَلَيْنَ عَلَيْنِ عَلَيْنِ عَلَيْنَ عَلَيْنَ عَلَيْنِ عَلَيْنَ عَلَيْنِ عَلَيْنَ عَلَيْنِ

From these fractional numbers another kind of adjectives has been derived, implying "consisting of, computed at such a rate, standing in such a relation", as:

pāṇyā or پَانْيَکُ pāṇyaku, only used in the compound: تَرِپَانْیَکُ or: تَرِپَانْیَکُ, computed at at three quarters of a rupee.

pāō, compounded with cardinal numbers, as: تري پَائو, consisting of three quarters.

savāyō, computed at 1½.

ألاً savāyō, computed at 1½.

ألاً dēḍhō, consisting of 1½.

ألاً dēḍhuō, standing in the 1½ place.

اَدَّهَايوْ aḍhāyō, consisting of 2½. aḍhāō, standing in the ½½ place. These are used as common adjectives and inflected and constructed accordingly.

The other fractional numbers may be made up by compositions, as:

Fractions with special application are:

پَائِڙِي pāiṛī, the quarter of a پَائِڙِي (yard). لَّهُ lārī, one third of a rupee.

ادهیلی adhēlī, میلی half a rupee piece. آدهِثوَ

أدهِڙِي adhirī, half a gaj, or half a damirī (ذُمِرِي).

Chapter XI.

Pronouns.

§. 31.

The personal pronoun is in Sindhī of two kinds: it is either used as an absolute pronoun or as a suffix, acceding to nouns, adverbs or verbs.

I. PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

The Sindhī has a personal pronoun only for the first and second person Singular and Plural, the third person is made up by means of demonstrative pronouns. A remnant of the old (now lost) personal pronoun of the third person has been preserved in the pronominal suffix of the third person, as we shall see hereafter.

1) The personal pronoun of the first person.

There are two forms in common use for the first person Singular, آنٽُون ٿَٽُر and shortened آءَ ٿُنُون ٿُون mā or مُان mū are also dialectically used in Sirō.

The great deterioration of the language is strikingly illustrated by the present forms of the absolute pronouns. The Prākrit form is nt or nt (Sansk. nt); but in the corrupted Apabhranša dialect, the mother of the modern Sindhī, we meet already the form t, from which the Sindhī āū has drawn its origin (Lassen, §. 183); the other form ā has been simply contracted from nt. The two other forms mā and mū are originally the Accusative, Sanskrit nt (Prākrit shortened n), and are still used as the Formative Singular.

The Genitive مُنْهِن mũhũ or مُنْهِن mũhẽ, with the adjective affix جَوْ jō, is to be referred to the Prākrit Genitive मह (Sansk. मम), Apabhranša महु (Lassen §. 183), the vowels being nasalized in Sindhī.

The Nominative Plural is آسِين asī, Prākrit عَلَى asī, Prākrit عَلَى asī, Prākrit عَلَى اللهُ (Sansk. root عَلَى ; in Sindhī m has been elided and final ē changed to ī (= î); the Formative اَسَانِ asã corresponds to the Prākrit Genitive Plural ऋम्हांस् (Sansk. ऋसाकं).

Annotation. In the cognate dialects the Accusative has similarly been used for the Nominative; Marāṭhī mī (inferior Prākrit dialect Hā, Lassen §. 183, 2), Formative ma (Prākrit Genitive Hā); Hindūstānī maĩ, Formative mujhē or mujh (Prākrit Genitive Hā); Panjābī: maĩ, Formative maĩ; but Gujarātī: hū, Formative ma. In the Plural the Marāṭhī has in the Nominative āhmī, in the Formative āhmã; the Hindūstānī ham, Formative ham or hamō; the Panjābī asē, Formative asā; the Gujarātī hamē or hamō, Formative ham or hamō.

Inflexion of the first personal pronoun.

آن قَلْ or آ قَرْنون āt or آننون š, I. singular.

Nom. مُون mã, مَان ãũ, آن mã, آنئُون mã;

Format. أَن mu, مَان ma; مَان ma. آن ق.

رُون جو (mũhũ jō; مُنْهِن جو mũhẽ jō) مُون جو mũ jō; مُون جو آن جو jō

Dative. Accus. مرن كهي mu khē; مأن كهي mā khē.

مَان كَهَان اللهِ muhā; مُون كَهَان أَمُون اللهُ mā khā.

PLURAL.

Nom. آسِين asī, we.

Format. مَانْهُون asāhē; اَسَانُهُون asāhē; اَسَانُهُون asāhū.

Genit. اَسَانْهِن جو asā jō, أَسَان جو asāhē jō.

Dative. Accus. عَمَانُهِن كَهِي asā khē; مَنَانَ كَهِي asāhē khē.

Ablat. اَسَان كهَان asā khā etc.

If they have been seen by you, for God's sake tell (me). After them my eyes weep night and day. Sh. Hus. X, 22.

By no means I shall give up my friend till the day of resurrection. Sh. Kēḍ. IV, Epil.

She in bashful before God and faithful towards us. Maj. 671.

Our love flows excessively with our sweethearts. Maj. 675.

2) The personal pronoun of the second person.

The pronoun of the second person is تُون tu, which points rather to the Sansk. नं, than to the Prāk. नुम; the Formative and Instrumentalis تَوْ tō is derived from the Prāk. Instrum. नुए; the Genitive تُنْهُن tūhū or تُنْهُن etc.) corresponds to the Apabhranša Genitive جَوْ.

The Plural of this pronoun presents a great variety of forms, as: تَوْهِين tavhī, تَوْهِين tavī, تَوْهِين tahī, تَوْهِين tahī, تَوْهِين avhī (avhē), اَوْهِين avē, اَهِين ahī, آوِين āī, آوِين

The forms tavhi etc. have been derived from the Prākrit Nom. Plural grē, tū having been changed to tav, and m elided. The forms avhi, ahi etc. are very remarkable. As initial t is never elided, they cannot well be derived from tavhi etc. It is therefore very probable, that these forms are to be referred to the Sansk. Plural gri = Prāk. grē, and with elision of initial y, umhē; in Sindhī 'u' has been changed to 'av' and m elided, as in tavhi.

The Formative تَوْهَان tavhā, وَهَان avhā corresponds to the Prāk. Genitive Plural क्या Annotation. The cognate dialects agree in all essential points with the Sindhī. Marāṭhī: tū, Formative tū or tūja (Prākrit ne or ne property tuhmī and Formative tuhmā. Hindūstānī: tū or taī; Genitive tē-rā (mē-rā), rā being used in this instance to form a pronominal adjective; the Formative tujh is properly the Prākrit Genitive ne property the Prākrit Genitive ne property the Sindhī tō. The Nomin. Plural tum is shortened from the Prākrit ne, and the forms tumhā (tumhā-rā), tumhō, tumh point back to the Prākrit Genitive Plural ne property. Panjābī: tū, Genitive tē-rā, Instrument. taī (Prākrit ne property). Nom. Plural: tusī, Formative tusā. Gujarātī: tū, Genitive: tāhā-rō, Formative ta; Nom. Plural: tamē or tamō, Formative tam or tamō.

Inflexion of the second personal pronoun.

2) The emphatic proximate demonstrative is july ihō, 'this very'; 'this here'. It is properly a compound pronoun, consisting of the demonstrative base i', and 'hō' = Sansk. \( \) (3\( \) ), and therefore inflected according to both terminations.

3) The demonstrative pronoun jest ijhō, 'this one present' is only used in the Nom. Sing. and Plural. It is apparently compounded of the base 'i' and the Sansk. pronoun \(\mathbb{H}\):, s being now and then changed in Sindhī to j, and even to jh (see: Introduction §. 11, 2).

4) The remote demonstrative pronoun is hū or shō, in Lār pronounced iū or jō. The base of this pronoun, hū, is not in use in Sanskrit, but in Prākrit a remnant of it has been preserved in the Genitive . Its theme must have been (according to Bopp, Comp. Gramm. §. 341) sva, from which 'hu' has been regularly formed. Its inflection quite agrees with that of a hī, only hu (u) being substituted instead of 'hi' in the Formative.

Annotation. The Marāṭhī does not know this pronominal base; it only uses tō, corresponding to the Sindhī sō. In Panjābī we find uh, Instrum. un, and Formative us, Plur. uh, Formative unā. The Hindūstānī uses: woh, Formative us; Plural wē, Format. un (Hindūī: wah, Formative vā; Plur. wē, Formative: un). The Gujarātī, like the Marāthī, has only the theme tē.

III. THE RELATIVE PRONOUN.

The relative pronoun in Sindhī is بَ jō, 'who', 'what', Sansk. बो, Prāk. जो; the Formative Singular بَنْهِن jãhē corresponds to the Prākrit Genitive जस्स = जह, the vowels having been nasalized in Sindhī. The Nom. Plural is إَنْهِ jē, as in Prākrit जो, and the Formative بَنْهُ jine or جَنْهُ jane points to the Prākrit Genitive Plur. जाए, ā having been shortened in Sindhī.

Annotation. The cognate dialects do not differ essentially from the Sindhī; Marāṭhī: Sing. jō, Plur. jē; Gujarātī: Sing. jē, Plural jēō; Hindūst.: Sing. jō or jau; Formative jis; Plur. jō, Formative jin or jinh; Panjābī: jō, Instrum. jin, Formative jis; Plur. jō, Format. jinā, Bangālī: jē or jine, Formative jāhā (Prāk. जास); Plur. jāhā-rā.

IV. THE CORRELATIVE PRONOUN.

The pronoun عند sō is nearly always used as the correlative of جو ; it is seldom found isolated, in which case it retains its original signification 'that'. It corresponds to the Sansk. pronoun स:, Prāk. सो. The Formative Sing. تنهن tāhē is derived from the Prāk. Genitive तस (Sansk. तस) = तह; the Nom. Plur. بي sē differs so far from the Sanskrit and Prākrit (त), as having retained the base of the Singular; the Formative Plural تن tane is to be referred to the Prāk. Genitive तास, ā having been shortened, as in जास.

Annotation. All the kindred idioms know this pronoun; Marāthī: tō, Plur. tē; Gujarātī likewise: tē, Plur. tēō; Hindūst.: sō or taun, Formative tis; Nom. Plur. sō or taun, Formative tin, tinh or tinhō. Panjābī: sō, Instrument. tin, Formative tis; Plur. sō, Formative tinā. Bangālī: sē, Formative tāhā, Plur. tāhā-rā.

V. INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

1) The interrogative pronoun کیڑ kēru, who?

This pronoun is only used absolutely. The Nominative base کُنْدُ kēru is derived from the Sanskrit कीह्म, Prāk. किस्स (see Introduction §. 2, 6); but the Formative Singular کَنْدُ kāhē, and the Format. Plural kane point back to the Sansk. कः; Genitive Sing. कस्य, Prāk. कस्स = कह; Genitive Plural in Prākrit कार्य, the ā of which has been shortened in Sindhī.

Annotation. The cognate idioms fall back on the Sansk. base \( \); (i. e. on the Accus. Sing. \( \), as Marāṭhī and Gujarātī: kōṇ; Hindūst.: kaun, Format kis; Plural kaun, Format.

2) The interogative pronoun چَهَا čhā, what?

Annotation. The Hindūstānī uses kiā, the Panjābī kī- and kiā, Format. kās; the Marāṭhī kāy (Formative kasā); Bangālī: ki, Format. kāha. Hinduī: kahā, Format. kāhē.

If the savour of the salt goes, whit what shall it be salted? Matth. 5, 13.

3) The interrogative pronoun کوٹھ kōhu, what?

This pronoun is only used in a neuter sense, just as the preceding one, and is indeclinable. If signifies very frequently 'why', 'what for'. In poëtry it is occasionally shortened to 'kuhu.

As to its derivation it is identical with = (= kā, kahā), ā having been changed to ō in this instance. The same is also the case in Hinduī, where kaun, who? makes the Formative either in kā, kōhe or kāhe.

I have been made alive by remembering (him); what will he do to me having met (me)? Sh. Suh. IV, 7.

The compound indefinite pronoun jekō, whoever.

The original form of this pronoun is بَوْكُوْ jokō, fem. الْجَاكُة, yākā, which alone is in use in the Formative Sing. and Plural, in the Nominative Sing. and Plural however the form إِنَّ اللهُ إِنْ jēkō preponderates; it is composed of إِنْ jē, if, and كُوْ kō, literally: if any one. Instead of جَوْبُو or جَيْكُو the reduplicated relative جَوْبُو jojō (and as its correlative سُوْسُو sōsō) is likewise in use; it is inflected in the same way as the single غُوْلُو (or غُرُانَ.

§. 37.

VII. THE RECIPROCAL PRONOUN يَنِيَ pāṇa, 'self'.

The reciprocal pronoun in Sindhī is پَانَ pāṇa, 'self', in person, in contradistinction to پَانَ pāṇu, s. m., one's own person or personality. It is derived from the Sansk. आत्मा, soul, self, which becomes in Prākrit either अपा (Var. III, 48) or अपाण (Var. V, 45). From the latter Prākrit form appāṇa, the Sindhī پَانَ has sprung by dropping the first syllable 'ap'.

Annotation. The Marāṭhī reciprocal pronoun āpaṇ points likewise back to the Prākrit appāṇa, whereas the Hindūstānī āp (possessive: ap-nā) is to be traced back to the Prākrit form appā; similarly the Panjābī: āp, possessive āp-ṇā. In Gujarātī both Prākrit forms reappear: āp, and possessive: apaṇ-nō.

From the original signification of يَارَ: pāṇa, 'soul' (like the Hebrew נָפָשׁ), its application may be easely explained. It refers in a sentence always to the chiefsubject, be it distinctly expressed or only tacitly underpāhā jō etc.), which يَانْهَر، جوَ serves as a possessive pronoun, it may be translated by 'own'; but at the same time it points out with a peculiar nicety the subject, to which it must be referred, and may then be translated by the respective possessive pronoun, required by the subject.

By himself he sees himself; by himself he is beloved. Sh. Kal. I, 18.

Thou theyself art thy own (i. e. thy soul's friend);

Do not worship thyself; o Jōgī, keep (thy) devotion! Sh. Rāmakalī VII, 20.

How wilt thou say to thy brother: let me pull out the mote from thy eye? Matth. 7, 4.

In this last sentence the subject, to which the reciprocal pronoun is to be referred, must be found out from the context or the emphasis of the speaker.

dhure is not a reciprocal pronoun, as alleged by Capt. Geo. Stack; it is the Locative of فعن dhuru, 'extremity', 'exact spot' (Panjābī: dhur, adv.), used adverbially. The same is to be remarked of ينْدُ pinḍu, s. m. 'body', and signifies: 'in person'. For this reason its Genitive is ينْدُ جو pinḍa jō etc.

But ask thy own body (i. e. thyself), having turned thy face upon it. Golden Alphabet 43, 7.

'One another' is expressed in Sindhī in the following way:

Their hearts always remember each other. Maj. 200

§. 38.

VIII. PRONOMINAL ADJECTIVES.

Under this head we class only such adjectives, as participate more or less of the nature of pronouns and are somewhat irregular in their inflexion, and such, as are derived from pronominal themes. All other adjectives, which may, according to their position in a sentence, supply the place of the pronoun, we exclude from this list, such as: غلانوْ fulāṇō, a certain person, مَا فِينَ أَنْ biō, another, عَبُوْ sajō, whole, as they are treated and constructed as regular adjectives.

1) Indefinite pronominal adjectives.

We have to deal here with the pronominal adjectives سَبِهُ sabhu, whole, all, every one; the emphatic form of which is سَبِهُوثِي sabhōī; with the compound مِرْوثِي sabhukō, every one, and مِرْوثِي miṛōī, all, whole, every one.

a) The pronominal adjective شَبِهُ sabhu.

It is derived from the Sansk. Hā, Prāk. Hēā; Hindūstānī: sab (Marāṭhī: sarv); in Sindhī b has been aspirated (as in Panjābī: sabh) on account of the elided r (see: Introd. §. 15, B. c.)

O bard! upon thee (i. e. for thy sake) I sacrifice all (my) property. Sh. Sōr. IV, 10.

2) Correlative adjectives.

The Sindhī possesses a great facility to derive correlative adjectives from pronominal bases.

- a) The pronominal adjectives, denoting 'quantity' are formed by affixing to the original Sanskrit-Prākrit bases or other bases formed alike, the adjectival termination rō, as: كيتروُ kētirō, how much? Sansk. किया
  Prāk. किया
  Prāk. As similar phenomenon is to be noticed in the cognate idioms, as Hindūstānī: kittā and kitnā; Panjābī: kit-nā; Marāthī: kitī or with the affix k: kitīk; Gujarātī: kēt-lō; but Bangālī: kat.
- b) The pronominal adjectives denoting 'size', are formed by affixing to the respective pronominal base the termination: 30 dō, as: kēdō, how large? This termination is properly not an adjectival affix, but an adjective: 30 vadō, 'great', the first syllable of which is dropped in this composition. This is clearly proved by the Marāṭhī, as: kē-vadhā, how great, and the Gujarātī: kē-vatō (but Panjābī: kē-dā, as in Sindhī).

All these pronominal adjectives admit again of a diminutive form, by adding the affix rō (see §. 11), as: كَيْدُ رُوْنَةُ لَهُ لِلْهُ وَاللَّهُ لَا اللَّهُ ا

c) The pronominal adjectives denoting 'kind' are formed by adding to the pronominal bases kēha, jēha, tēha, ēha, hūa (ūha), the diminutive affix rō, in consequence of which the long vowel of the pronominal base is shortened to its corresponding short one, as: kěharō, of what kind or manner?

The pronominal bases, from which these three kinds of adjectives are derived, are: ē or hē, this; ō (ū) and hō (hū), that; the relative jō (jē), the correlative sō (tē), and the interrogative kē.

We exhibit them in the following survey:

• • •				•

All these correlative adjectives are inflected regularly, according to their respective termination (masc. and fem.).

IX. PRONOMINAL SUFFIXES, attached to nouns and postpositions.

Instead of the inflected cases of the absolute personal and possessive pronouns the Sindhī uses very extensively the so-called suffixes or pronouns, which are affixed to nouns, postpositions (adverbs) and verbs. The use of these suffixes constitutes quite a peculiar feature of the Sindhī language and distinguishes it very advantageously from all the kindred idioms of India, which are destitute of pronominal suffixes; but at the same time the construction of the sentences is very frequently thereby rendered so intricate, that it presents great embarrasments to a beginner. In this respect the Sindhī quite agrees with the Paṣtō and the Persian, being the connecting link between the Indian and Iranian languages.

Here we shall describe the manner, in which the suffixes are attached to nouns and postpositions; the verbal suffixes will be treated in their proper place.

The pronominal suffixes, which are added to nouns and adverbs, are:

Singular.	Plural.
I pers. me.	.hū هُون đ or أُون
II pers. 🚊 e.	$\mathfrak{z}$ va.
III pers. سِ se.	ne or ن na.

The suffix of the I pers. Sing. me corresponds to the Prākrit Genitive Sing.  $\overrightarrow{\mathbf{n}}$  my; the Persian suffix is am, Paṣtō me, as in Sindhī.

The suffix of the II pers. Sing. ĕ has sprung from the Sansk. Genitive Sing. ₹, thy, t being elided in Sindhī according to Prākrit rule (see Introd. §. 7). In Persian final e (tē) has been dropped and t preserved (= at), whereas the Paṣtō has retained the original form of this pronoun, only with transition of the tenuis into the media = s de.

The suffix of the III pers. Sing. se is to be referred to the Prākrit Genitive \(\frac{\frac{1}}{4}\) (shortened from \(\frac{1}{24}\)), literally: hujus. In Persian it has become ________, whereas in Paštō s has been changed to h (Zend hē) and then altogether elided = __________ ē.

The suffix of the I pers. Plur. ũ or hũ accedes to postpositions only, no suffix of the I pers. Plur. being in use with nouns. It is a contraction from the Prāk. Genitive Plur. the first syllable being dropped in Sindhī. The Persian form is to mā, Paṣtō or mū or i um.

The suffix of the II pers. Plur. 5 va is derived from the Sansk.-Prāk. Genitive Plur. 1; Persian on the other hand (pointing to the Sansk. Genit. Plur. 241141) but Paṣtō i mū (m = v).

The suffix of the III pers. Plur. ne or na has apparently sprung from an old pronominal base  $\overrightarrow{A}$  na, which is already in Pāli substituted for  $\overrightarrow{A}$ , that; the Prāk. Genit. Plur. would be  $\overrightarrow{uf}$  (cf. Lassen p. 325; Var. VI, 4), shortened ne, or na from  $\overrightarrow{u}$   $\overrightarrow{u}$ .

These suffixes, according to their etymology, supply, when attached to nouns, the place of possessive pronouns; but when joined with postpositions or adverbs, they may stand in lieu of any inflected personal pronoun. The suffix however, which properly belongs to the noun, may also be attached to the verb, as will be explained under the verbal suffixes.

§. 40.

I. Pronominal suffixes attached to nouns.

When a suffix accedes to a noun, its final vowel undergoes in some instances a change. But it is to be noticed, that the suffixes are not used promiscuously with nouns, but for the most part only with those referring to man, far less with those referring to animals or to inanimate objects.

In the Nominative Singular:

- 1) Nouns ending in 'u' undergo no change before the suffixes.
- 2) Nouns ending in ō generally shorten the same to 'u'; but ō may also keep its place before the suffixes.
- 3) Masc. nouns ending in ī change the same for euphony's sake either to yu or to ya.
- 4) Fem. nouns ending in ī change the same either to ya or shorten it to 'i'.
- 5) Nouns ending in 'e' (i) remain unaltered before the suffixes.

In the Formative Singular the suffixes accede to the final vowel without any further change, with the exception of nouns ending in ō, the Formative Singular of which terminates before suffixes in ă, and not in ē.

In the Nominative Plural a final long vowel is shortened respectively and final nasal n dropped before the suffixes; but final  $\bar{\imath}$  of masc. nouns is changed to ya, as in the Nom. Sing.

In the Formative Plural the suffixes accede to the termination ne without any further change.

Nouns ending in  $\bar{u}$  ( $\tilde{u}$ ) and  $\bar{a}$  are hardly ever found with suffixes; of nouns ending in 'a' there are some instances, but they are very rare, and only found in poëtry. On the whole the suffixes are for the most part attached to nouns ending in 'u' and ō, far less to those ending in ī (masc. and fem.) and 'e'.

The way, in which the suffixes are attached to nouns, may best be learnt from the following examples.

1) Nouns ending in u (masc.)

Nom. Sing. نِينَ nēṇu, eye; Format. نِينَ nēṇa. Nominative.

I pers. نينَن néṇa-e, thy eyes.

II pers. نينَني néṇase, his eyes.

II pers. نينَني néṇase, his eyes.

Nominative. Formative.

Plur. { II pers. نِينَٰنِ néṇava, your eyes. { الله néṇaniva. الله الله néṇane, their eyes. } الله الله الله néṇanine.

In the Formative Sing. there is instead of the suffix me, the form hime also in use, as: نينهم néṇahime; and instead of se we find likewise the form hise, as: نينَهس nénahise. In the Format. Plur. the suffix of the II pers. ĕ is generally contracted with the final e of the termination ne to ē (ē) or even ī, or he is affixed, to avoid a hiatus, as: نِينَنِي néṇanē, نِينَنِي néṇanī or: nénanehe.

In poëtry final 'u' is frequently lengthened again to ō before the suffixes; but final 'a' may also be likewise lengthened, if required by the metre, as: نينًان nēṇāna, instead of نِينَن néṇana.

Some nouns of this class, which do not change final 'u' in the Formative Singular, are somewhat irregular in attaching the suffixes. These are: بغ piu, father, bhāu, brother, مَاء māu, mother, بهَاء dhiu, daughter, nuhu, daughter-in-law.

2) Nouns ending in ō.

Nouns ending in  $\bar{o}$  do not differ essentially from those in 'u', as regards the annexion of the suffixes; they generally shorten final  $\bar{o}$  to 'u', but they may also retain the same in the Nom. Sing., which is frequently the case in poëtry. The Formative Sing. always terminates in 'a', not in  $\bar{e}$ , when followed by suffixes. In the Nomin. Plural final  $\bar{a}$  may be likewise preserved before suffixes, instead of being shortened to 'a'.

3) Nouns ending in I (masc.)

Nouns ending in  $\bar{\imath}$  (m.) generally change the same to ya, far less to yu, before the accession of the suffixes; in the Formative Sing.  $\bar{e}$  must always be changed to ya. The same is the case in the Nom. Plur., so that only the context can decide, whether a noun is put in the Nominative or Formative Sing. or in the Nominative Plural.

4) Nouns ending in ī (fem.)

Nouns ending in ī (fem.) either shorten final ī to 'i' before the suffixes or change it to ya; the latter is always the case with adjectives and participles ending in ī. The termination of the Nomin. Plur. ŭ is shortened to 'u' and the final nasal dropped before the suffixes.

In poëtry final ī is occasionally not changed to ya, but simply to 'a', as:

if there is any power of mine, it is that. Sh. Kēd. IV, 9.

پْيهِي puphī, a father's sister, has, besides the regular forms, also پُپهِنِّم puphiṇame or: پُپهِنِّم puphiṇime.

Like the moon on the fourteenth of the month was his turban in the plain. Sh. Kēd. V, 1.

Not by any messenger have they been asked; inside is their grief. Sh. Rāmak. VI, 4.

5) Nouns ending in e (fem.)

Nouns ending in ĕ remain either unaltered before suffixes or change final ĕ (i) to ya, as well in the Nominative as in the Formative Singular.

The other nouns, ending in ū, ā, 'a' are generally not used with suffixes, though occasionally one or another is found with a suffix; in this case final ū is changed to 'u' in the Nominative, and in the Formative to ua, whereas ā and 'a' keep their place before suffixes.

II. PRONOMINAL SUFFIXES attached to Postpositions and Adverbs.

The rules, according to which pronominal suffixes are attached to nouns, are also applicable in reference to postpositions and adverbs. Any pronominal suffix may be joined with a postposition, but with most of them only the suffix of the third person Singular and Plural is in use. It is however quite optional in Sindhī, either to subjoin a pronominal suffix to a postposition, or to put the absolute pronoun before it in the Formative, with or without the Genitive case-sign جَوْسٍ, as: وَتِّسٍ, as: وَتِّسٍ vatise, with him, or:

1) The postposition سَنْدو sandō.

sandō is originally not a postposition, but an adjective, and therefore declinable, as well as ,, the Genitive case-sign, for which it is very frequently substituted (see §. 18). It corresponds to the Panjābī sandā, being (Sansk. part. pres. Ha = Ha) and signifies therefore: 'belonging to'. It is now used as a regular postposition, chiefly in connexion with suffixes, before such nouns, to which suffixes are not attached, either for the sake of the final vowel, or for perspicuity's sake, or, as in poëtry, for the sake of the metre.

<sup>1)</sup> Short 'a' may be lengthened to a in poëtry for the sake of the rhyme,

4) Postpositions ending in ā, ā, āū, ō.

Those, which terminate in ā, remain unaltered before a suffix, as: كِنَاسِ to thee, كِنَاسِ kēṇāse, to him, لاكِينَاءِ kēṇāne, to them. Similarly كِينَانِ khāse, from him, كَهَانِ khāse, from him, كَهَانِ khāse, from him, كَهَانِ khāse, from them (the final nasal being dropped before a following dental n); متهوة mathā, from upon (properly the Ablative of مَتهانْسِ mathā, the head), مَتهَانْسِ mathāse, from upon thee, سُتهَانْسِ puthiāse, from behind him, after him (properly the Ablat. of يُتهِانُ puthe, the back).

Before the suffix of the third person Plural a euphonic 'i' is occasionally inserted, especially in poëtry, as: مَنْجَهَانِ manjhāine, instead of: مَنْجَهَانِ manjhāne, out of them.

Those ending in ãu, ãu, āu (termination of the Ablat. Sing.) remain likewise unchanged before suffixes, the final

SECTION III.

THE VERB.

The great deterioration, the modern Indian languages have undergone, is nowhere more apparent, than in their conjugational process. They have lost nearly all the Sanskrit tenses, especially those of the Past, which were too intricate for the conception of the vulgar, and have therefore been compelled to have recourse to compositions, in order to make up for the lost tenses. They differ very greatly as to the method, which they have followed in this respect, every one of them exhibiting some peculiar features, which are not to be met with in the other idioms.

Chapter XII.

Formation of the verbal themes, the Imperative and the Participles.

§. 42.

Formation of the verbal themes.

I. We have seen already (§. 7, 2) that the Infinitive of the Sindhi verbs, terminating in anu, corresponds to the verbal noun of the Sanskrit and Prākrit. The root of the Sindhi verb is therefore not to be sought in the Infinitive, but in the Imperative, which exhibits the crude form of the verb without an additional increment, except that of the final vowel, which is no part of the verbal root.

Properly speaking there is only one class of verbs in Sindhī, as all verbs, with a slight difference, are inflected alike. There are therefore no different conjugations, as in Sanskrit, but the same rules of inflection apply equally to all verbs.

In some tenses though there is a marked difference between neuter and active verbs, and we may therefore, for practical purposes, divide the Sindhī verbs into neuter and active ones.

1) The neuter or intransitive verb ends in the Infinitive in anu and in the Imperative in 'u', as:

hal-anu, to go, Imper. أهَلَنْ hal-u, go.

var-anu, to return, " زُرُ var-u, return.

But in derivative verbs, where the termination of the Infinitive is preceded by ā, the Infinitive ends, for euphony's sake, in inu, as:

كَرَاقِنَ kārā-inu, to be blackish, Imper. كَارَاقِنَ kārā-u.

When the verbal root ends in short 'a' or 'i', a euphonic v is inserted between it and the increment of the Infinitive, as:

pa-v-anu, to fall, Imper. پَوَنُ pa-u. نِوَنُ ni-v-anu, to bow, پَوَنُ ni-u.

2) The active or transitive verb ends in the Infinitive likewise in anu (in Sirō commonly in inu), and in the Imperative in 'e' (and partly in 'u'), as:

jhal-aṇu, to seize, Imper. بَهَلِ jhal-e. بَهُرَنُ phur-aṇu, to plunder, " phur-e.

But when the increment of the Infinitive is preceded by 'a', ā and ō, the Infinitive ends, for euphony's sake, in inu'), as:

ma-iṇu, to measure, Imper. مَّمْنُ ma-e. آسِهُ ma-e. وَهُمْ سَانِهُ الْهَادُنُ ḡālhā-iṇu, to speak, " عَالَهَادُنُ ḡālhā-e. تُعوْدُنُ dhō-iṇu, to carry, " هُوْدُنُ dhō-e.

If a verbal root (active or neuter) end in ī and ū, these vowels are respectively shortened before the increment of the Infinitive, as:

pi-aṇu, to drink, Imper. پِيَّنُ pī-u.

In some instances radical  $\bar{o}$  is likewise shortened to 'u' in the Infinitive, as:

دُهُوَّنُ dhu-aṇu, to wash, Imper. دهُوَّنُ dhō-u. رُوَّنُ ru-aṇu, to weep, " rō.

A number of Sindhī verbs have a different form when used in a neuter or active sense, but it would be wrong to say, that such neuter verbs are changed into an active form; they recur to a different Sanskrit form, from which they are derived and must therefore be considered as independent verbs.

The most common of these are:

Neuter. Active. dhopanu, to be washed . . . دهُوَّن dhuanu. أَنُعَنُ dubhaṇu, to be milked. . . . ثُعَنُ duhaṇu. َ مَعَنُ dajhaṇu, to be envious . . . تَعَنُ dَahaṇu. dhra-inu rajhanu, to be boiled . . . . رَجْهَنُ randhanu. rahanu, to remain مَعَنُ rahanu, to remain رَعَنُ suṇaṇu. سُنَّنُ sujaṇu, to be heard. . . . . . سُخَنِّنُ kuhaņu. كُسَنُ kusaņu, to be killed. . . . ، كُسَنُ khājaņu, to be eaten . . . كَهَاجَنْ khāiņu. khãinu. كهَانثِنُ khamanu, to burn . . . . . كهَامَنُ khajanu, to be raised . . . . كَهَنْنُ khajanu, to be raised . . . gasaņu, to be abraded. . . . . گَسَنُ gahaņu. luṇaṇu. لُنَنُ luṇaṇu. أَنْنُ labhaṇu, to be obtained . . . لَهَنُ lahaṇu. lūhaņu. أُوهَنُ lūsaņu, to be scorched . . . أُوهَنُ māpaṇu, to be contained. . مَائِنُ māiṇu. "mamaņu مَامَرُ muhaṇu. مُسَنُ musaṇu, to have ill luck . . . مُسَنُ visāiņu. وسَائِنُ visāmaņu, to be extinguished وسَامَنُ vikamaņu, خِكَانَىٰ vikamaņu, to be sold . . . . وَكِلْمَنْ vikiṇaṇu. vehāmaṇu, to be passed. . . وهَاتِنْ vehāmaṇu, to be passed. . . hapāiṇu. هَپَائِنُ hapāmaṇu, to be lessened هَپَامَنُ yahanu. نَهَنْ yabhanu, to be copulated . يَبَهَنْ

II. Almost from every neuter or active verb a Causal may be derived. Those causals, which have sprung from a neuter verb, are, as regards their signification, active, whereas those, which are derived from an active verb, are doubly active.

The Causal is derived by adding to the root of a verb the long vowel ā, to which the increment of the Infinitive accedes as usual; e. g.:

- رُچَنُ virčanu, v. n., to be tired; causal: وِرْچَائِنُ virčanu, to cause to be tired or to tire.
- تَسَنَّ dasaṇu, v. a., to show; causal: تَسَائِنُ dasa-iṇu, to cause to show.
- تَعْوَيُّانِ dhōiṇu, v. a., to carry, causal: قُعُونِّانِ dhō-ā-iṇu, to cause to carry.

But when the verb ends in radical 'a', euphonic v is inserted between the final root-vowel and the causal increment, as:

أَمِّرُنُ ma-inn, v. a., to measure; causal: مَوَائِنُ ma-v-ā-inu, to cause to measure.

Exceptions to this rule:

- a) When a verb ends in radical r, r, r, r, h, preceded by a short 'a', the causal increment may be inserted in the root itself, coalescing with the short radical 'a' to  $\bar{a}$ , as:
  - أَجُنُ bāraṇu, v. n., to burn; caus.: بَارَنُ bāraṇu, to kindle.
  - gaṛaṇu, v. n., to drop; caus. كَازِّنُ gāṛaṇu, to cause to drop.
  - يَّ parhanu, v. a., to read; caus.: پَاڙِهَنُ pārhanu, to cause to read, to teach.
  - َلَهُنُ gahaṇu, v. n., to work hard; caus.: كَاهَنُ ḡā-haṇu, to make work hard.

In a number of verbs, the final r (r) of which is preceded by the vowel 'i', ā is inserted before the final radical and 'i' dropped, as:

- سُدهِرَيُ sudhiraṇu, v. n., to be arranged; caus.: سُدهَارَنُ sudhāraṇu, to arrange.
- visiraņu, v. n., to be forgotten; caus.; وِسَارَنُ visāraņu, to forget.
- كَهِندُّارَنُ kindiraņu, v. n., to be spread; caus.: كَهِندُّارَنُ khindāraņu, to spread.
- ujiranu, v. n., to be waste; caus.: اُجَازَنُ ujā-ranu, to lay waste.

etc. etc.

But the regular mode of forming the causal is also in use, as:

- araṇu, v. n., to be caught; caus.: اَزَائِنُ arā-iṇu, to entangle.
- تَرَنُ taraṇu, v. a., to fry; caus.: تَرَائِنُ tarā-iṇu, to cause to fry.
- يَّرْهَانُ paṛhaṇu, v. a., to read; caus.: پَرْهَائِنُ parhā-iṇu, to cause to read.
- سَنبَهَا ثِنُ sambahaṇu, v. n., to be ready; caus.: سَنبَهَائِنُ sambahā-iṇu, to get ready.
- b) When final r or r of a verbal root be preceded by the short vowels 'i' or 'u', the causal increment ā coalesces with them to ē and ō respectively, as:
  - پهِرَنُ phiraṇu, v. n., to turn; caus.: پهِرَنُ phēraṇu, to cause to turn.
  - كَهِنَةِيرَنُ khindiranu, v. n., to be spread; caus.: كَهِنَةِيرَنُ khindēranu, to spread (besides كَهِنَةُ ارَنُ رِچهُوَّزَنُ vičhuranu, v. n., to be separated; caus.: وِچهُوَّزَنُ vičhōranu, to separate.

Those verbs, in which the root-vowel 'i' coalesces with the causal increment ā to ē, may add, besides the causal increment, ā to the end of the root, without altering the simple causal signification of the verb: as:

پهِرَنُ phiraṇu, v. n., to turn; caus.: پهيرَنُ phēraṇu or: پهيرَائِنُ phērā-iṇu.

Some verbs with radical 'u', form the causal in the common way, as:

كُوَّانُ kuṛaṇu, v. n., to be tired; caus.: كُوَّادِّنُ kuṛā-iṇu, to tire.

A few verbs change in the causal the final cerebral  $\dot{t}$  (tr) and  $\dot{\bar{d}}$  to  $\dot{r}$ , as:

- بَقُنْ buḍaṇu, v. n., to be drowned, caus.: بَوْزَنْ b̄ōṛaṇu, to drown.
- تْرَقَّنُ trutraṇu, v. n., to be broken, caus: تَرْقَرَنُ ṭrō-raṇu, to break.
- c) If a verb end in radical 'i' or 'u', r is inserted after the causal increment ā, as:
  - زْئَنُ d̄i-aṇu, v. a., tọ give; caus.: ژِئَارَنُ d̄i-ā-r-aṇu, to cause to give.
  - ču-aṇu, v. n., to leak; caus.: چُتَارَنْ ču-ā-r-aṇu, to cause to leak.

The same is the case, when final h is preceded by 'i', as:

veh-anu, v. n., to sit; caus.: وِهَارَنُ veh-anu, v. n., to sit; caus.: وِهَارَنُ but if final h be preceded by 'u', the common rule holds good, as:

كُهَنْ kuh-aṇu, v. a., to kill; caus.: كُهَادِّنْ kuhā-iṇu, to cause to kill.

On the reverse a euphonic r is inserted before the causal increment in such verbs, the final radical of which ends in ā, as:

يهَارِّنُ ghā-iṇu, v. a., to wound; caus. گهَارَائِنُ ghā-r-ā-iṇu, to cause to wound.

There is a number of causal verbs, which cannot be brought under any of the foregoing rules; these are:

- uthaṇu, v. n., to rise; caus.: اُتَهَارَنُ uthāraṇu, to cause to rise.
- تْرِجَنُ drijaņu, v. n., to be afraid; caus.: تْرِجَارَنُ drē-jāraņu, to frighten.
- sikhaṇu, v. a., to learn; caus.: سِكَهَارَنُ sēkhā-raṇu, to instruct.
- سُبهَارَنُ sumhaṇu, v. n., to fall asleep; caus.: سُبهَارَنُ sumhāraṇu, to put to sleep.
- vańaṇu, v. n., to be lost; caus.: وَنَجَائَنُ vińāiṇu, to loose.
- vēhejaņu, v. n., to bathe; caus.: وِنْهِ بَجَارَنُ vēhejaņu, to wash.
- III. From most of the causal verbs a second causal may be derived, according to the rules laid down already, the first or simple causal being treated again as a theme by itself.
  - رُچَارَائِنُ virča-iņu; double caus.: وِرْچَارَائِنُ virč-ā-r-ā-iņu, to cause (another) to weary.
  - Simple caus.: گَازَّاكِنُ gāṛaṇu; double causal: گَازَّاكِنُ gāṛ-ā-iṇu, to cause to shed (tears).

- وَچِهِوْزَائِنُ vičhōṛaṇu; double caus.: وِچِهِوْزَائِنُ vičhōr-ā-inu, to cause to separate.
- Simple caus.: پهيرَارَائِنُ phēr-ā-iṇu; double caus.: پهيرَارَائِنُ phēr-ā-iṇu, to cause (another) to cause to turn.
- Simple caus.: گهَارَارَائِنُ ghā-r-ā-iṇu; double caus.: گهَارَائِنُ ghā-r-ā-iṇu, to cause (another) to cause to wound.

Annotation. The Prākrit forms the causal either by adding the increment ē (Sansk. ay) or āvē (Sansk. āpay = ābē = āvē, cf. Varar. VII, 26, 27). In the modern Indian idioms only the latter increment is in use, which has been shortened to ā in Sindhī, Hindūstānī and Bangālī, the syllable vē having been dropped. In Gujarātī the causal is formed by adding the increment āv (and vād, when the verb ends in a vowel); in Panjābī by means of the increment āā. In Marāṭhī āv is generally shortened to av.

The insertion of euphonic r in Sindhī (in Hindūstānī and Panjābī l) has its precedent in the euphonic l, which is inserted in some Sanskrit causal themes.

The double causal is formed in Hindustānī by inserting v before the simple causal increment ā; the same is the case in Panjābī and Gujarātī.

IV. Almost from every neuter, active or causal verb a Passive may be derived by adding to the verbal root the increment جَنْ janu (j-anu). A few verbs, chiefly denominatives, are only found in the passive form, as: اَكُتُوجَنُ ukanḍhijanu, to long for, اَكُتُوجَنُ angurijānu, to be exchanged, تَصْرَجَنُ d̄amirjanu, to be angry etc. Any neuter verb may take the passive form, without changing its original signification.

The passive of neuter or intransitive verbs is mostly used impersonally (III pers. Sing.), whereas that of active and causal verbs is inflected through all persons.

The passive increment جَنُ janu is joined to the verbal root, if it end in a consonant, with or without the conjunctive vowel 'i', as euphony may require it; but if the verbal root end in a vowel, the conjunctive vowel 'i' must always be employed, as:

- پُورَنُ pūraṇu, v. a., to bury; pass.: پُورْجَنُ pūr-jaṇu, to be buried.
- ghaṭaṇu, v. n., to lessen; pass.: گهَتْجُنُ ghaṭi-jaṇu, to lessen.
- vińāinu, v. caus., to loose; pass.: وِنَجَائِينُ i-jaņu, to be lost.

Those verbs, which end in a radical 'a' and in the Imperative in 'u' (see §. 43), as: چَوْنُ ča-v-anu, Imper. خُوْنُ ča-u, to speak, drop before the increment of the passive the euphonic v of the Infinitive, as: چَجْجَنُ ča-i-janu, to be spoken; پَوْنُ pa-v-anu, to fall, Imper. پَوْنَ pa-ss. پَجْجَنُ pa-i-janu, to fall.

Those verbs, which shorten their final root-vowel (ī, ū, ō) before the increment of the Infinitive (§. 42, 2), retain their long vowel before the passive termination j-anu, as:

- بِنَّنُ pi-aṇu, v. a., to drink; Imper. پِینَنُ pī-jaṇu, to be drunk.
- پُونْ pu-aṇu, v. a.; to string beads; Imper. پُونْ pū-u; pass. يُرِجُونُ pū-ijaṇu, to be strung (as beads).
- دُهُوَّنُ dhu-aṇu, v. a., to wash; Imper. دهُوَّنُ dhō-u; pass. دهوُّجُنُ dhō-ijaṇu, to be washed.

Exceptions to these rules are:

تهِنَّىٰ thi-aṇu, v. n., to become; Imper. تهِيئُ thī-u; pass. تهِيَّىٰ thi-jaṇu, to become.

كَرَنُ karaṇu, v. a., to make; Imper. كَرَنُ kare (Prec. كِجَيْنُ kije); pass. كَجَنُ ki-jaṇu, to be done.

Annotation. In Sanskrit the Passive is formed by adding y to the root of the verb; in Prak. y is dissolved into a or ijja, and in the Apabhranša dialect ija or ijja is employed for the formation of the Passive (Lassen, p. 467). The increment of the Passive is therefore in Sindhī j, joined to the affix of the verbal noun or the Infinitive = j-anu. The Sindhī (and to some extent the Panjābī) is the only modern idiom of India, which has preserved a regular passive voice, all its sister languages being compelled to resort to compositions, in order to express a passive voice. The common way to form a passive voice in the kindred idioms is, to compound the past participle passive with the verb jana, to go, as in Hindūstānī: مَيْن مَارًا جَاتَا هُون mar mārā jātā hū, I go being beaten = I am beaten. But the use of the passive voice, if it may be called so, is very limited in the cognate languages, and it is avoided wherever possible, which is greatly facilitated by a great number of verbs having a neuter or passive signification.

The Imperative.

The Imperative represents the root of a Sindhī verb, as stated already, and as the whole conjugational process depends a great deal upon it, its formation must be explained in the first place.

1) The Imperative of neuter and passive verbs always ends in 'u''), as:

mar-anu, to die; Imper.: مَرُنُ mar-u. مَرَنُ ač-anu, to come; Imper.: اَچُنُ ač-u.

pābuhaṇu, v. n., to smile, which has in the Imperative, besides the regular پَابُوهُ pābuhu, also: پَابُوهِ pābuhe.

gaḍ-ij-aṇu, to meet; Imper.: كَثِيجَنُ gaḍ-ij-u.

Those verbs, which insert a euphonic v in the Infinitive, drop it again in the Imperative, as:

na-v-anu, v. n., to bow, Imper.: نَوْنُ na-u.

If a final vowel has been shortened in the Infinitive, it is restored again in the Imperative, as:

thi-anu, v. n., to become, Imper. تعِتَّنُ thī-u.

čū-u. چُونْ ču-anu, v. n., to leak, Imper. چُونْ čū-u.

رُونَ ru-aṇu, v. n., to weep, Imper. رُونَ (= يَعَنُ rō (= يَعَنُ ). Similarly: رِعَنُ veh-aṇu, v. n., to sit down; Imper. ريهُ vēh-u.

The following verbs form their Imperative both regularly and irregularly:

َاچَنُ ač-aṇu, v. n., to come; Imper. أَجُ ač-u and غَا اللهُ ā-u¹).

vań-anu, v. n., to go; Imper. زَجُنُ vań-u and رَجُنَ

2) The Imperative of active and causal verbs ends in 'e', as:

pal-anu, v. a., to foster; Imper. پَالُنْ pāle. پَالُنْ pāl-anu, v. a., to lessen: Imper كَهَتَّاتِنُ ghaṭā-iṇu, v. caus., to lessen; Imper. كَهَتَّاتِنُ ghaṭā-ē.

But there is a considerable number of active verbs, which end in the Imperative in 'u' and not in 'e'; some have both terminations. These are:

<sup>1)</sup> From an old root I a, which is no longer used in Sindhi, but in Hindustani (Li a-na).

The following active verbs form their Imperative in an irregular way:

ثِيُّ dianu, to give; Imper. ثِيُّ de (instead of: وُتَّنُ diu).

<sup>1)</sup> Capt. Stack in his Sindhi Grammar has adduced the following verbs also as active and ending in the Imperative in 'u':

bakanu, to chatter, بَكُنُ bhulanu, to forget,	ىنْهَنْ sũhaṇu, to suit, čamburaņu, to stick close to,	vačuraņu, to stick to,
jhakanu, to prate,	visahaņu, to trust,
ručaņu, to please,	vaṇaṇu, to please;
1 1 11 17	naiting works and therefore but all these are properly intransitive verbs and therefore quite regular in their Imperative.

nianu, to take away; Imper. نِكُنُ niu).

Verbs which end in the Imperative Sing. in 'u', form the Plural in ō (or yō, with euphonic y, if the verb end in any other vowel but 'a' and ū), and those, which end in the Imperative Sing. in ĕ, form their Plural in yō or iō, as:

أَچُوْ aču, come, Plur. اَچُوْ ač-ō. اَچُوْ ač-ō. اَچُوْ dhō-u, wash, " مُويُوْ dhō-yō. مُويُوْ pa-u, fall, " پَتُوْ pa-ō. بَتُوْ أَلَّهِ، give, " ثِتُوْ أَلَهُ، أَنْ ثَلُوْ يُلُوْ بُلُما-ĕ, seize, " إَيُمُالِيوْ يُلُمُا جَهَلِي إِلَمُ الْمُالِيوْ يُلُمُا جَهَلِيوْ يُلُمُا-ĕ, seize, " إِيُمُلِيوْ يُلُمُا-ĕ, seize, " إِيُمُلِيوْ يُلُمُا-iō.

An older form of the II. pers. Plur. is the termination hō, which is also in use, as; مَهْلِهُوْ jhal-ihō.

The other persons of the Imperative must be supplied from the Potential.

There is another from of the Imperative, ending in je<sup>1</sup>), which is added equally to the root of neuter and active verbs. This form of the Imperative is properly a Precative, implying exhortation, request or prayer, as:

مؤتِّجِ mōṭaṇu, to return; Imper. مؤتَّخ mōṭ-ije, please to return.

رِيتِي vīṭaṇu, to scatter; Imper. وِيتِي vīṭ-e; Prec. وِيتِينَ vīṭ-ije, please to scatter.

If a verb end in 'i' or ī, the initial 'i' of ije is dropped, as:

<sup>1)</sup> In poëtry ije is now and then lengthened to eje, as well in neuter as active verbs, ending in the Imperative in 'u' or 'e', as:

kar-ēje, from كَرَنُ karaņu, Imper. خَجَنُ kare. وَجَبَنُ vanaņu, to go, Imper. وَخَبَنُ vanaņu, to go, Imper.

khiaṇu, v. a., to eat, Imper. کهتَنْ khi-u; Prec. کهِجْ

تهِمَّنُ thiaṇu, v. n., to become; Imper. تهِمَّنُ thī-u; Prec. تهِمِ thī-je or: تهِمَ

Quite irregular is کَرَنُ karanu, to do, in the Precative, as:

كَجِ karaṇu, Imper. كَرِ kare, Prec. كَجِ ki-je or: كَرِيْ

Neuter or such active verbs, as end in the Imperative in 'u', take frequently, especially in poëtry, the termination iju instead of ije, as:

سُلَنُ suṇaṇu, to hear; Imper. سُلَنُ suṇu; Prec. سُلْنُ suṇaṇu.

This termination is also now and then found in active verbs, ending in the Imperative in 'e', as:

بهَانِيْنُ bhā-iṇu, to think; Imper. بهَانِيْنُ bhā-e; Prec. بهَانِيْنُ bhā-iju.

The Plural of the Precative ends in ijō (or ējō, as the case may be), as:

pūr-ēje), shut up; Plur. پُورِجوْ pūr-ēje), shut up; Plur. پُورِجوْ pūr-ijō پُورِجِوْ

Instead of ijō (ējō) the terminations ijā, ijāe (ijã-e), ijāhu (ijāu) ijāha are also in use, especially in a honorific sense, and are therefore also referred to a subject in the Nominative, as:

var-iju, return; Plur. وَرِجَا vań-ijā. وَرِجَا vań-ijā-e. وَخِجَاءً suṇ-ijāha. سُئِجَاهَ suṇ-ijāha. سُئِجَاهَ parh-ējā-u. Annotation. In Prākrit the different (10) conjugations of the Sanskrit have already been discarded and only the first of them is in common use. The II pers. Sing. of the Imperative ends in Prākrit in 'a', which in Sindhī has been changed to 'u' and 'e' respectively; the II pers. Plur. ends in ha (Sansk. Udha), and in Sindhī in ō, h being commonly dropped. — In the cognate idioms the final vowel of the II pers. Sing. of the Imperative has been dropped altogether; in the Plural the Imperative ends in ō, as in Sindhī, with the exception of the Marāṭhī, the Plural Imperative of which ends in ā, and the Bangālī, the Plural Imperative of which is identical with the Singular.

The Sindhī Precative is to be referred to the Prākrit increment ijā or ijjā, which is inserted between the root and the inflexional terminations in the Present, the definite Future and the Imperative (Varar. VII, 21). Lassen's conjecture (p. 357), that this increment has sprung from the Sanskrit Precative, is borne ont by the modern idioms. — The Gujarātī forms the Precative in the same way as the Sindhī by adding to the verbal root the increment ajē (Plur. ajō). — In Hindūstānī iyē is joined to the root of the verb for the III pers. Sing. (generally with āp etc.), it being considered more respectful to address a person in the III pers. Sing.; and iyō for the II or III pers. Plur.; jiē is only used, when the root ends in ī or ō. — In Panjābī the increment ī is added to the root for the II pers. Sing., and īō for the II pers. Plur. Similarly iō is joined to the root in Bangālī, as well for the II. pers. Sing. as Plur.

The participle present.

From the Imperative or the verbal root the Participle present is derived in the following way:

- 1) Neuter verbs ending in the Imperative in 'u', add to the root the affix andō (see §. 8, 11), as:
  - مَلُنْدُو halaṇu, to go; Imper. هُلُ hal-u; Part. pres. هَلُنْ hal-andō.

The same is the case with active verbs, the Imperative of which ends in 'u', as:

هَنْ haṇaṇu, to strike; Imper. هَنْ haṇu; Part. pres. هَنْ haṇ-andō.

Some of these however use also the other form in  $\bar{n}d\bar{o}$ , as:

سُنَىٰ suṇaṇu, to hear; Imper. سُنَىٰ suṇu; Part. pers. سُنَىٰ suṇandō or: سُنَىٰ suṇīndō.

Those verbs, which end in radical a, and in the Imper. in 'u', form, for euphony's sake, their Participle present in indo, and not in ando, as:

كهَائِنُ khā-iṇu, v. a., to eat; Imper. كهَائِنُ khā-u; Part. pres. كهَائِينْدو khā-īndō.

بُدُّهَاءِ buḍhā-iṇu, v. n., to become old; Imper. بُدُّهَاءِ buḍhā-u; Part. pres. بُدُّهَادِّينْدُو buḍhā-īndō.

Those verbs, which shorten their final vowel in the Infinitive or insert a euphonic v (§. 42, 1. 2), do the same before the affix of the Participle present, as:

پَوْنُ pa-v-anu, to fall; Imper. پَوْ pa-u; Part. pres. پَوْنُ pa-v-andō.

پِنَّنُ pi-aṇu, to drink; Imper. پِيئُ pī-u; Part. pres. پِيئُ pi-andō.

دهون dhū-aṇu, to wash; Imper. دهون dhō-u; Part. pres. دهون dhu-andō.

In some verbs, with euphonic v inserted, a contraction takes place, as:

خُونَ ča-v-anu, to say; Imper. چُون ča-u; Part. pres. چُون ča-v-andō or: چُونْدو čūndō.

مُونْدُ أَنْ hu-aṇu, to be; Imper. هُونْدُ أَنْ hō-u; Part. pres. هُونْدُ أَنْ hūndō (instead of هُمَّنْدُو hu-andō).

A similar contraction takes place in:

- كهِمَّنُ khi-aṇu, to eat; Imper. كهِمَّنُ khi-u; Part. pres. كهِمَّنُ khīndō.
- ۋِينْدۇ di-aṇu, to give; Imper. ۋِينْدۇ ḍē; Part. pres. ۋِينْدۇ ḍīndō.
- بَيِّنُ ni-aṇu, to take away; Imper. نِيِّنَ nē; Part. pres. مِنْدُو nīndō.

The following verbs form their Participle present in an irregular way:

- ač-aṇu, to come; Imper. أَجُ ač-u; Part. pres. أَجُونُ ač-u; Part. pres. إينْدو
- vańaṇu, to go; Imper. وَنَجُ vańu; Part. pres. وَنَجُنَ vēndō or وِينْدو vīndō.
- 2) Active and causal verbs form the Participle present by adding the affix indo to the root, as:
  - بهَرَىٰ bharaṇu, v. a., to fill; Imper. بهَرِ bhar-e; Part. pres. بهَرِينْدو bhar-īndō.
  - تَندُّهَاءِ ganḍhā-iṇu, to cause to connect; Imper. كَندُّهَائِنُ ganḍhā-e; Part. pres. كَندُّهَائِيندوْ ganḍhā-īndō.

The verb کَرنُ karaṇu, to do, forms its Part. pres. both regularly and irregularly, کَنْدُو kar-īndō or: کَنْدُو kandō, کِنْدُو

- 3) The participle present of the Passive voice is formed by adding the affix ibō to the root of the passive theme (cf. §. 8, 13), as:
  - پَسَخُنُ pasaṇu, v. a., to see; pass. پَسِجَنُ pas-ijaṇu; Part. pres. پَسِبَوْ pas-ibō.
  - خَوَنُ ča-v-anu, v. a., to say; pass. چُرَجُنُ ča-ijanu; Part. pres. چَرِبُو ča-ibō.

- دهُوَّنُ dhu-aṇu, v. a., to wash; pass. دهُوِّنَ dhō-ijaṇu; Part. pres. دهوُئِبو dhō-ibō.
- pī-aṇu, v. a., to drink; pass. پِئَنْ pī-jaṇu; Part. pres. پِئَنْ pī-bō.
- تهِنَّنُ thi-aṇu, v. n., to become; pass. تهِنَّنُ thi-jaṇu; Part. pres. تهبؤ thi-bō.
- كَرَنُ karaṇu, v. a., to do; pass. كَرَنُ ki-jaṇu; Part. pres. كَبؤ ki-bō (also: كَبؤ ka-bō).

The Participle present is also used in the sense of a Future, as will be seen under the future tense.

§. 45.

The Participle past.

From all Sindhī verbs, be they neuter, active (causal) or passive, a past participle may be derived by adding the affix iō or yō (the latter always, when the root ends in a vowel) to the root of the verb (see §. 8, 14). The past participle of neuter verbs implies simply a praeterite sense, whereas that of active (causal) verbs always denotes a praeterite passive signification.

- بَاكِنُوْ jāgaṇu, v. n., to be awake; p. p. هَاكِنُوْ jāg-iō, having been awake.
- khaṭaṇu, v. a., to gain; p. p. كَهَتَيْوْ khaṭ-yō, having been gained.
- پَرْبِهَايِثِ parbhāiṇù, v. caus., to quiet; p. p. پَرْبِهَايِنُ parbhāyō, having been quieted.
- پَرُكِهِمَّوْ parkhijaṇu, v. p., to be tested; p. p. پَرُكِهِمَّوْ parkh-iō, having been tested.

Those verbs, which insert euphonic v in the Infinitive, drop it again better the affix of the past participle, as:

َوْنُ ča-v-aṇu, to say; p. p. چَوَنُ ča-yō. مَوْنُ na-v-aṇu, to bow; p. p. نَوْنُ na-yō.

If a verb end in 'i' or ī, the initial 'i' of the affix iō is dropped in the past participle; the same is commonly the case, when the root ends in one of the Palatals č, čh, j, jh.

ni-aṇu, to take away; p. p. نِتَّنُ ni-ō.

thi-ō. تهِتُو thi-aṇu, to become; p. p. تهِمَّنُ ji-anu, to live; p. p. جِئَنُ jī-ō.

kučhaņu, to speak; p. p. چُهَنُ kučh-ō.

sōjhaṇu, to investigate; p. p. موجهَنْ sōjhō.

If final  $\bar{o}$  and  $\bar{i}$  has been shortened in the Infinitive, it is restored again (with a few exceptions) in the past participles, as:

دُهُوَّنُ dhu-aṇu, to wash (Imper. دهُوَّنُ dhō-u); p. p. هُوَّنُ dhō-yō.

ji-aṇu, to live (Imper. جِينُ ji-u); p. p. جِينُو jī-ō.

About the compound affixes ya-lu or ia-lu, ya-ṛō (ia-ṛō), which are attached to the past participle, in order to impart to it more the nature of an adjective, compare §. 9, 22.

A considerable number of verbs form their past participle in an irregular way, that is to say, they have retained the old Sanskrit-Prākrit form of the past participle, modified only according to the laws of transmutation of letters, as current in Prākrit and Sindhī. We subjoin here an alphabetical list of them.

أبهَامُنُ ubhāmaṇu, v. n., to boil up; p. p. أبهَامُنُ ubhāṇō. أبهَامُونُ ubahaṇu, v. n., to stand; p. p. أبهَنُ ubīṭhō. أبهَنُ utanu, v. a., to say; p. p. أتو utō.

The participle of the Future passive or the Gerundive 1).

The participle of the Future passive or the Gerundive is formed by adding to the verbal root the affix in $\bar{o}$  (or an $\bar{o}$ , if the verb end in 'i' ( $\bar{i}$ ) and optionally in $\bar{o}$  and an $\bar{o}$ , if the verb end in 'u' ( $\bar{o}$ )). The Gerundive can only be derived from active verbs; neuter verbs form also a similar participial noun by means of the affix in $\bar{o}$ , but it is not to be confounded with the Gerundive; see §. 9, 12.

The final vowel of a verbal root undergoes the same changes before the affix of the Gerundive, as before the affix of the Infinitive (§. 42), so that for practical purposes the rule may thus be given, that the termination of the Infinitive anu is simply changed to ano (ino), in order to form the participle of the Future passive. About the derivation of the affix ino see §. 8, 12.

vijhaņu, v. a., to throw; Gerund. وجهنو vijhiņō, what is to be thrown.

يْكَنْ diaṇu, v.a., to give; Gerund. دِّئَنْو diaṇō, what is to be given.

<sup>1)</sup> A kind of participle of the Future active is formed by attaching the affix haru to the Infinitive, as: about to go; see §. 9, 33.

- دُمُوَّنُو dhuaṇu, v.a., to wash; Gerund. دُمُوَّنُو dhuaṇō or دُمُوِّنُو dhuiṇō, what is to be washed.
- كهَائِنْ khāiṇu, v. a., to eat; Gerund. كهَائِنْوُ khāiṇō, what is to be eaten.

Indeclinable past participles.

The Sindhī uses different past conjunctive or indeclinable participles.

- 1) The form most in use is that ending in  $\bar{\imath}$  ( $\bar{o}$ ) or  $\bar{e}$ .
- a) Neuter or such active verbs, as terminate in the Imperative in 'u', form the past conjunctive participle by joining to the verbal root the affix  $\bar{\imath}$ , as:
  - رَيْ var-aṇu, v. n., to return; past part. conj. وَرِي var-ī, having returned.
  - suṇaṇu, v. a., to hear; p. part. conj. سُنْيَ suṇ-ī, having heard.

Those verbs, which end in a radical  $\bar{\imath}$ , coalesce with the affix of the past part. conj. to  $\bar{\imath}$ , as:

تهِمَّنُ thiaṇu, to become; Imper. تهِمَّنُ thīu; p. p. conj. thī, having become.

Those verbs, which end in  $\bar{u}$ , shorten  $\bar{u}$  before the affix  $\bar{i}$  (as before the affix of the Infinitive), as:

pū-u; p. p. پُوَّنُ pu-aṇu, to string (beads); Imper. پُوْنُ pū-u; p. p. conj. پُرِئي pu-ī.

But those verbs, which shorten radical final ō to 'u' in the Infinitive, restore the same again in the past participle conjunctive, as:

ru-anu, to weep; Imper. رُوَّتِي rō; p. p. conj. رُوِّتِي rō-ī.

If in the Infinitive euphonic v has been inserted between the verbal root and the affix of the Infinitive, it is dropped again in the past part. conj., as:

ča-v-aṇu, to speak; Imper. چُوِّ ča-u; p. p. conj. چُوِّ ča-ī, having spoken.

pa-v-anu, to fall, forms either regularly: پَئِي pa-ī, pro-ī, having fallen.

The verb اَچَنَ ačaņu, to come, makes in the p. p. conj. either regularly آچِي ač-ī, or irregularly فِحَنَ ač-ē. The verbs ثِنَّنَ d̄iaṇu, to give (Imper. ثِنَّنَ d̄ē) and نِنَّنَ niaṇu, to take away (Imper. نِي nē) make in the p. part. conj. ثِيْمِي nē-i or نِيثِي na-ī.

Passive verbs, be they derived from neuter or active themes, form the p. part. conj. quite in the same way, as verbs of the active voice, by adding the increment  $\bar{\imath}$  ( $\bar{o}$ ) to the passive base, as:

- الْوَتِجَنَىٰ lō-ij-aṇu, v. p. to be moistened; p. part. conj. الْوَتِجِي lō-ij-ī or لُوتِجِي lō-ij-ō, having been moistened.
- b) Active and causal verbs, ending in the Imperative in 'e', form the past part. conj. by adding the affix  $\bar{\mathbf{e}}$  to the root of the verb, as:
  - malaṇu, v. a., to polish; p. p. conj. مَلَنُ malaṇu, v. ahving polished.
  - َلَكُارُي laḡāiṇu, v. caus., to apply; p. p. conj. لَكُارُي laḡā-ē, having applied.
- 2) The second past participle conjunctive is formed by adding to the root of the verb, be it transitive or intransitive, the affix yō (or iō). This form is only used with a Present, Future or Imperative, and may therefore in most cases be translated by the present participle, as:

mōṭ-ṇō, v. n., to return; p. p. conj. موقيق mōṭ-yō (mōṭ-iō).

.sith-iō سِتهتْو sithaṇu, v.a., to compress; p. p. conj سِتهَنُ

If the verb end in 'i' (ī), it coalesces with the affix io, as:

قِدُو diaṇu, to give; p. p, conj. قِدَّنْ d̄iō.

pi-aṇu, to dink (Imper. پِيئ pi-aṇu, to conj. پِئَنْ pi-aṇu, to dink بِئَنْ

Those verbs, which shorten original ō to 'u' in the Infinitive, restore the same again in the p. p. conj., as:

دُمُوَّنُ dhu-aṇu, to wash (Imper. هُوَّنُ dhō-u); p. p. conj. دموّن dhō-yō.

رۇيۇ ru-aṇu, to weep (Imper. رۇ rō); p. p. conj. رۇيۇ rō-yō.

The verbs کَهَنَنُ khaṇaṇu, to lift up, هَنَنُ haṇaṇu, to strike, کَرَنُ karaṇu, to do, drop, as in the past participle, their final radical before the affix yō, as:

لَهُنَوْ khaṇaṇu, p. p. conj. كَهَنْيُو khā-yō or: كَهَنْنُ khaṇaṇu, p. p. conj. هَنْيُو hā-yō or: هَنْنُ haṇaṇu, p. p. conj. هَنْيُو ka-yō or: هَنْنُ karaṇu, p. p. conj. كَرَنُ

3) The third past participle conjunctive is formed by adding to the root of transitive verbs, irrespectively of their termination in the Imperative, the affix je (i-je), and jī (i-jī) to the root of neuter verbs.

This form is generally used with the Present and Past tenses.

- كَهَنُ khaṇaṇu, v. a., to lift up (Imper. كَهَنُ khaṇu); p. p. conj. كَهَنْجِي khaṇ-ijē.
- رْچَنِ virčaņu, v. n., to be tired; p. p. conj. وِرْجِحِي virč-ijī.
  - 4) The fourth past participle conjunctive is formed by putting كَرَىٰ karē, the p. p. conj. of كَرَىٰ karaṇu, after the past partic. conj. ending in ī or ē. This compound form is used with the Present, the Future, the Past tenses and the Imperative, as:

varī karē, having returned; Inf. وَرِي كَرِي كَرِي مَانُ varaṇu. وَرَنُ malē karē, having polished; Inf. مَلَنُ malaṇu. أَنَ الْمَانُ أَلَى اللهُ المُعْجَدِي كَرِي المانِهِ المانِهُ المانِي المانِهُ ا

Annotation. The indeclinable past participles are formed in Sanskrit either by the affix tvā or ya. In Prākrit tvā is changed to tūṇa and (bý elision of t) to ūṇa, and ya becomes ia. In Sindhī the first form of the past participle conjunctive ending in ī (or ē) corresponds to the Prākrit affix ia. The second form of the p. p. conj., ending in yō, is identical with the first, and the same must be said of the third form ending in jī (or jē), the Sanskrit affix ya (Prākrit ia) having been changed in Sindhī to ja (= jē), as in the case of the Passive.

This is fully borne out by the kindred idioms. In Hindūstānī we find the following forms of the past part. conjunctive (Inf. mār-nā): mār, mār-ē, mār-kē, mār-karkē. In the first form mār the affix ia has apparently been dropped altogether, whereas in the second mar-ē the affix ia has been contracted to ē. The affix kē in mār-kē, corresponds to the Sindhī affix jē, j having been changed to a guttural, with transition of the Media into a Tenuis. Mār-kar and mār-karkē are compound past participles conj. like the Sindhī form. Similarly we find in Panjābī (Inf. ghall-nā, to send): ghall and ghall-kē.

The Gujarāti uses two forms of the past part. conj., one ending in  $\bar{\imath}$  (used especially in compound verbs), as lakhī, having written, and the other in  $\bar{\imath}n\bar{\imath}$ , as lakhīnī. The first form is identical with the Sindhī affix  $\bar{\imath}$ , the latter,  $\bar{\imath}n\bar{\imath}$ , corresponds to the Prākrit affix uṇa,  $\bar{\imath}$  having been substituted for  $\bar{u}$ .

The Marāthī uses only one form of the past part conj., ending in ūn, as karūn, having done; this affix quite coincides with the Prākrit affix ūna. — The Bangālī uses either the affix yā (iyā), as dēkhiyā (dēk-ē or dēkh-ī also being employed), or the Locative of the past participle, dēkhitē, in the state of having seen.

Formation of the Tenses and Persons.

§. 48.

In treating of the Tenses in Sindhī we must distinguish simple and compound Tenses.

I. Simple tenses.

In the Active and Passive Voice there are only three simple tenses, viz.: the Potential, the Aorist and the Future.

1) The Potential, which implies possibility, uncertainty or a wish, is formed by adding to the root of the verb the inflexional terminations. The absolute personal pronouns may also be put before the verb, where any stress is to be laid on the person, but they may also be omitted, where such is not the case, the respective person being sufficiently pointed out by the inflexional termination itself.

Neuter and such intransitive verbs, as end in the Imperative in 'u', and all passive verbs, receive the same personal terminations, whereas those transitive verbs, which end in the Imperative in 'e', differ from them in the I and partly in the II pers. Sing. and in all the persons of the Plural, by retaining their characteristic 'i' (e) before the inflexional terminations.

Personal terminations of the Potential.

Verbs ending in the
in 'u'.	•	in	in 'e'.
Singular.	Plural.	Singular.	Plural.
I persã	-ũ	-yā, -iā	-yū̃, iū̃
II persī, ē	-õ	-iễ, yẽ; ĩ, ễ	-yõ, iõ
III pers. ē	-ane	-ē	-īne, ine

In reference to verbs, ending in the Imperative in 'u', it is to be observed:

- a) A final long vowel is shortened before all the personal terminations in the same way, as before the affix of the Infinitive; e. g. رُقُنُ ruanu, to weep, Imper. رُقُنُ rō, Potential I pers. رُقُنُ ru-ã, I may weep; پُتُنُ pi-a, I may drink, Imper. پُتُنُ pu-anu, to string (beads), Imper. پُتُنُ pu-u, Potential I pers. پُتُنُ pu-anu, to string (beads), Imper. پُتُنُ pū-u, Potential I pers. پُتُنُ pu-anu, to string (beads). In poëtry an original long vowel may be restored again in the III pers. Sing., the personal termination ē being at the same time shortened to 'e', as: مُرَّدُ rū-ē, he may weep, instead of رُقًى rū-ē.
- b) The euphonic v, which is inserted between the root of a verb ending in 'a', and the affix of the Infinitive, is commonly retained in the Singular and the III pers. of the Plural, but dropped commonly in the I and II pers. Plural, as: Inf. يَوْنِ pa-v-anu, to fall, Potential, Sing. I pers. يَوْنِ pa-v-anu, to fall, II pers. يَوْنِ pa-v-e, III pers. يَوْنِ pa-v-ane; Plur. يَوْنِ pa-v-ane; Plur. المَا يَعُوْنِ pa-v-ane; Plur. المَا يَعُوْنِ pa-v-ane; Plur. المَا يَعُوْنِ pa-v-ane; Plur.

Sing. however v may be also dropped, as چَئِين ča-ē, thou mayst say; چَئِي ča-ē¹), he may say.

c) In the III pers. Plur. verbs, which end in 'u' (ū) or original ō) and 'a' (with euphonic v inserted) frequently contract the inflexional termination u-ane, a-v-ane, to ūne, as: رُون rūne, they may weep, instead of پُون ru-ane; پُون pūne, they may fall, instead of پُون cavane.

A similar contraction takes place in the II pers. Sing. and in the III person Plur., if a verb end in 'i' (ī), as: ثِينِ d̄ī, thou mayst give, instead of ثِينِ d̄i-ē; ثِينِ d̄īne, they may give, instead of ثِينِ d̄iane; نِين n̄īne, they may take away; بِينِ p̄ne, they make drink; بِينِ p̄ne, they make drink; بِينِ p̄ne, they make drink; بِينِ p̄ne, they may eat; but the uncontracted form is equally in use.

d) Verbs, which end in a radical ā, and in the Imperative in 'u', insert in the I pers. Sing. and Plur. and in the II pers. Plur. a euphonic y before the flexional termination, as: لَهُ اَيْنَ لَهُ لَا لَهُ اللهُ لَا لَهُ اللهُ اللهُ لَهُ اللهُ اللهُ

In reference to verbs, ending in the Imperative in 'e', it is to be observed:

1) The characteristic 'i' (e) of the Imperative may be contracted with the inflexional termination of the <sup>1)</sup> چَئِي ča-ē is even contracted to چي čē, when used more in the sense of a particle, to quote the words of the speaker ('say's he').

I and II pers. Sing. and the II and I pers. of the Plur. to yā, yē (yī), yū, yō, or not, if the verb end in a consonant; but the contraction must take place, if the verb end in a vowel, as: چَهَثِرُانِي čhadyā, or چَهَثِرُانِي čhadyā, or چَهَثِرُانِي čhadyē or چَهَثِرُانِي čhadie etc.; but: چَهَثِرِين bhayā, بَهَائِنَ bhā-yē etc. from بَهَائِنَ bhāiṇu, to think. In poëtry however the looser form is also in use, as: بهَائِنًان bhā-iā or بهَائِنَان bhā-iyā. In the II pers. Sing. the inflexional termination yē or yī may also be contracted to ē or ī, as: سَانتَهِين sānḍhē or سَانتَهِين sānḍhē, thou mayst cherish.

In the III pers. Plural 'i' is generally lengthened to 'ī', and the initial 'a' of the inflexional termination āni dropped in order to distinguish the neuter and active verbs. But īne is again frequently pronounced and written ine, especially when the verb ends in a long ā, as:

2) The verb کَرَنُ karaṇu, to do, forms the III pers. Plural either regularly in کَرِينِ karīne, or irregularly in کَن kane or کِن kine.

Annotation. The Sanskrit Potential has already quite disappeared in Prākrit. But, abstracted from this significant circumstance, there can be no doubt, that the Sindhī Potential corresponds originally to the Prākrit Present tense. In Sindhī itself there are many reminiscences, that the Potential properly represents the old Present of the Prākrit; for it is very often, chiefly in poëtry, used without the characteristic $\frac{2}{3}\tilde{\chi}$, in the sense of the Present. After the custom had gained ground, to express the Present by joining the $\frac{2}{3}\tilde{\chi}$ tho to the old Present, the old Present was reserved to denote a Potential mood. The inflexional terminations of the Sindhī Potential correspond very closely to those of the Prākrit Present, as: Prāk. I pers. Sing. āmi (Sansk. āmi), Sindhī ā\tilde{\chi}$; II pers. Sing. asi (Sansk. asi), Sindhī ē\tilde{(or \tilde{\chi})}, 'a' being dropped (as a conjunctive vowel) and s being first changed to h and then dropped altogether; III pers. Sing. a-ti or a-di (Sansk. a-ti), and by elision of t or d: a-e, Sindhī ē. In the I pers. Plur. the Prākrit has different terminations, as ā-mō (Sansk. ā-mah), ā-mu, ā-ma, or a-mō, a-mū etc. These latter terminations have given rise to the Sindhī terminations u. m being elided and final 'u' lengthened to u and nasalized at the same time; II pers. Plur. a-ha (Sansk. a-tha), Sindhī ō, h having been dropped and 'a' lengthened to ō; III pers. Plur. a-nti (Sansk. a-nti), Sindhī ane, t having been elided in this conjunct letter. - The Hindustani, Panjabi and Gujarātī coincide in this respect with the Sindhī, forming the Potential in the same way, as the Sindhī, only with modified inflexional terminations. The proper Potential of the Marathi, which is now commonly called by the Grammarians the "Past Habitual"1), exhibits likewise the signs of the old Prākrit Present. — The Bangālī alone has preserved the old Present tense, formed by joining the inflexional terminations to the root of the verb; the Present is in Bangālī also used in the sense of a Potential.

- 2) The Sindhī has a regular Aorist or Praeterite tense denoting, that an action once took place in time past.
- a) The Aorist is formed from neuter verbs, by joining to the past participle the terminations of the (now in Sindhī) obsolete substantive verb as, to be. This tense is therefore originally a compound, and the participle must be put, according to the gender referred to, either in the masc. or the feminine. The inflexional terminations are only affixed to the I and II pers. of the Sing. masc. and fem., to the I pers. of the l'lur. masc. and fem. and to the II pers. of the Plur. masc., the III person of the Sing. and Plur. masc. and fem. being left without any inflexional terminations, as well as the II pers. of the Plur. fem.
- b) From transitive verbs, the participle past of which always has a passive signification, the Aorist is formed by joining to the past participle the same inflexional terminations, as to that of neuter verbs, the III pers. of the Sing. and Plur. masc. and fem. and the II person of the Plur. fem. being likewise left without inflexional terminations. If the Agent is to be expressed, this must be put in the Instrumental, the participle past agreeing throughout with its subject (expressed or only hinted at) in gender and number.

The inflexional terminations of the Aorist are:

Singul	ar.	Plu	ral.
Masc.	Fem.	Masc.	Fem.
I persse	-se	-sī, sū	-sĩ, sũ.
II persē	$-  ilde{a} \ ( ilde{ ilde{e}})$	-u
III pers. —		_	-

The past participle of neuter and active verbs commonly ends, as we have seen, in yō or iō, fem. ī. If therefore the past participle be of the masc. gender, its final ō is shortened before the inflexional termination of the I person to u = u-se, whereas the final ī of the fem. gender is changed, as before the other pronominal suffixes, to ya or ia = ya-se, ia-se; e. g. âtis haliō, m., gone, I pers. masc. سَالِهُ haliu-se, I went or have gone, fem. هَالِهُ halia-se; in the same way وَتَهُ اللهُ اللهُ وَتَهُ اللهُ الل

Before the inflexional termination of the II person masc., ě, tinal ō is dropped altogether, as: مَعْلِمُين hali-è, thou hast gone; وَتَهِين dith-ē, thou wast seen; before the inflexional termination of the  $\Pi$  person fem.  $\tilde{a}$ , final  $\tilde{i}$  is shortened to 'i' = i-ā (occasionally also as in the masc. to i-ē), as: عَلِيَّل hali-ā; thou hast gone, وَتَهِيَّل dithi-ā, thou wast seen.

In the first person Plural the inflexional termination sī (sē), sū is affixed to the masc. or fem. Plural of the past participle, as: هَلِتَّاسِين haliā-sī, we have gone, هَلِتَّاسِين haliū-sī (fem.); ثِتَهَاسِين diṭhā-sī, we were seen, ثِتَهَاسِين diṭhiū-sī (fem.).

In the II person masc. the final ā of the Plural (هَلِنًا) is shortened before the inflexional termination 'u' = a-u, as: غَنَهُ halya-u, you went; غُوتَهُ أَنْ أَبْلُهُ halya-u, you were seen; to the II person fem. no inflexional termination is added, the Plural fem. of the past participle alone being used, the subject of which must be indicated either by the absolute personal pronoun or gathered from the context.

It is to be noticed, that in poëtry the inflexional terminations are frequently left out, in which case the subject, if it be not indicated otherwise (by an absolute personal pronoun etc.), must be gleaned from the context.

Annotation. The three practerite tenses of the Sanskrit, with the exception of a few traces (Varar. VII, 23), have been already discarded in Prākrit, their formation being apparently too intricate for the conception of the vulgar. In their lieu the past participle has been substituted in the sense of an Aorist, either with or without inflexional terminations, the Perfect proper being denoted by a compound tense. The inflexional terminations, which are affixed in Sindhī to the past participle, are derived from the Sanskrit substantive verb 'as', to be, though they be now so much mutilated and differ so considerably from the forms used in Prākrit (Lassen, p. 345), that they are scarcely recognisable. The termination of the I person Sing. -s corresponds to the Sanskrit asmi (Prāk. amhi), 'm' having been thrown out in Sindhī.

In the II pers. (Sansk. and Prāk. asi) s=h, has been dropped and final i (e) lengthened in the masc. to  $\tilde{e}$ , whereas in the feminine the initial 'a' of asi has been retained, and the latter half of it dropped altogether. The masculine termination  $\tilde{e}$  is however also now and then applied to the feminine.

In the I person Plural the Sanskrit smāh (Prākrit amhō) has been changed to sī (sē) or sū; in the II person masc. the Sanskrit stha has been first changed to tha, thence to ha, and with the elision of 'h' to 'u'.

In Hindūstānī, Panjābī and Gujarātī the Aorist is made up by the past participle without the addition of inflexional terminations, but in Marāthī inflexional terminations are affixed to the past participle, as in Sindhī. The same is the case in Bangālī, but with this difference, that it can form an Aorist of the active voice not only from neuter verbs, but also from active verbs; in the Passive though it must have recourse to a composition.

3) The Future,

which implies in Sindhī not only the sense of futurity, but also of possibility, uncertainty, is formed

- a) In the Active Voice, by affixing to the present participle the same inflexional terminations as to the Aorist.
- b) In the Passive Voice, by affixing to the present participle passive the same inflexional terminations, as to the present participle of the Active.

Annotation. The Sindhī has quite left the traces of the Prākrit in forming the Future and fallen back to a composition, in order to make up for the lost future tense. It has approached in this respect again nearer to the Sanskrit, which likewise forms the I Future of the active voice by affixing the inflexional terminations of the substantive verb 'as', to be, to the participial noun ending in tā (tr). The modern Arian idioms differ very greatly from each other as to the method, in which they form the Future. The Hindūstānī and Panjābī express the Future by means of a compound verb; they add to the Potential of a verb the past participle gā (instead of the common giā), from the root gam, to go, the gender of which must agree with the subject in question. This is properly a Desiderative, and not a Future; but already in Sanskrit the Desiderative is now and then used in the sense of a Future. Thus we have in Hindūstānī كُرُونگا karūn-gā, masc., and كُرُونگا karūn-gī, fem. I shall do, literally: I am gone (لَ gā), that I do (يُرُونگا karū), i. e. I will do or shall do; similarly in Panjābī: karāngā, masc., kārāngī, fem.

The Gujarātī on the other hand accedes again more closely to the Prākrit; the conjunctive vowel of the Prākrit (i) has been lengthened in the I person Sing. and Plur., in order to make up for the double ss, which has been reduced to a single one (cf. Introd. §. 19), as: lakh-īs, I shall write, Plur. lakh-īsū, we shall write.

In the II and III person Sing. and Plur. the conjunctive vowel has been dropped altogether, as II pers. Sing. lakh-sē, thou wilt write etc.

The Future of the Marāthī is quite peculiar, and, as it seems, made up from the different terminations of the Future, used in Prākrit.

The termination of the I person Sing. in (en) seems to have arisen form the Prākrit termination himi (Varar. VII, 12), and that of the I person Plural  $\tilde{u}$ , from the Prākrit sisi (= hisi; Lassen, p. 352), the final 'i' of which has been dropped and in compensation thereof medial 'i' lengthened = sīs; final 's' has been hardened to 'r' and thence to 'l'. The II person Plur. ends in al, which I would refer to the Prakrit termination -ssaha, the latter half of which (aha) seems to have been dropped, and the conjunct ss reduced to 's' by lengthening the preceding (conjunctive) vowel = as; 's' again seems to be hardened to r = 1. A similar process appears in the III pers. Sing., ending in īl (ēl); the Prākrit termination is hidi (= sidi); the initial 'h' has been clided and id(i) lengthened to īd, final 'd' being changed at the same time (as it is usual in the past participle) to 'l'. The III person Plural, ending in til is quite perplexing. We would refer to the fact, that in Prakrit hittha is also used instead of hissa (tth = ss; Lassen, p. 353; Varar. VII, 15), though restricted to the I pers. Plural. In Marāthī it appears, that tth has also been used in the III pers. Plural, so that the III pers. Plural would properly terminate in hitthinti; of this initial hi has been elided and the aspirate conjunct tth reduced to tt = t; n is in Marāthī always dropped in the termination of the III pers. Plural and in consequence the preceding vowel (i) lengthened; thus we get  $t\bar{t}t$ , of which final 't' must have been changed to 1 =  $t\bar{t}l$ .

The Bangālī forms the Future by affixing to the root of the verb the inflexional termination iba; this is very remarkable and without any analogy in any of the Prākrit dialects. It reminds us very strongly of the Latin termination bo in the formation of the Active Future of the I and II conjugation, which Bopp (Comp. Gramm. II, §§. 526, 663) derives from the Sanskrit bhū. It would be near at hand, to compare this affix with the Sindhī affix bō, employed to form the present participle passive; but its origin will hardy allow of such a comparison.

II. Compound tenses.

1) The compound Potential.

The Potential may be compounded:

- a) with the present participle and the Potential of the auxiliary verb هُوَّنُ huanu, to be, in order to denote an enduring action or state, as: آنتُون پَڙِهَندو هُنَّان I may be reading.
- b) with the past participle and the Potential of the auxiliary verb فَوَّنُ huanu, to be, as: آنتُون رُلِتُو هُنَّان it may have wandered about; مُون قِتْهُوْ هُنِّي it may have been seen by me, i. e. I may have seen it.

2) The present tense.

The Sindhi has two forms for the Present tense:

a) The common or indefinite Present tense, which denotes, that an action is commenced or going on at the time being, is formed by putting after the Potential (and occasionally before it) the augment it though which must agree with the gender of the subject, as: آنتُون هَلَان تهوْ I go; fem. آنتُون هَلَان تهي I go.

b) The definite Present, which implies habit, usage or that an action is still going on at the time of speaking, is formed by compounding the present participle with the Present of the auxiliary verb مُونَّنُ huaṇu, as: آنتُون لِكَهَنْدُ آنهِيَال I am writing, or I am used to write; وُرِنْدُو آهِي he is in the habit of weeping.

In poëtry the auxiliary verb is often left out and the participle used by itself, determined by a noun or pronoun as subject.

Annotation. The Potential, which, as stated already, represents the old Present tense, is no longer considered sufficient, to express the Present by itself; the augment عَهْنَ thō is therefore added, to render more prominent the sense of the Present. This augment thō is derived from the Sanskrit adjective standing thō is derived from the Sanskrit adjective that (as used at the end of compounds) and signifies 'standing', as: آنتُون پَسَان تهو I see, litterally: standing I see, I am in the state of seeing.

In Hindūstānī thā is used as an augment for forming the Imperfect, whereas the common or indefinite Present is expressed by the present participle alone, and the definite Present by the addition of the auxiliary verb hōnā. The same is the case in Panjābī, with the only difference, that the Sanskrit stha has been assimilated in Panjābī to sā. In Gujarātī the indefinite Present is formed by adding the auxiliary (defective) verb čhaū etc., I am etc. (derived from the Sansk. substantive verb 'as', to be) to the Potential, as: hū lakhū čhaū, I write, and the definite Present by joining the Present of the auxiliary verb hōvū, to be, to the present participle, as: hū lakhō hōū čhaū, I am writing.

The Marāṭhī forms the common or indefinite Present by affixing the inflexional terminations of the Sansk. substantive verb 'as', to be, to the present participle, ending (originally) in tā, with which the terminations coalesce, as tō, tōs etc. Besides this the Marāṭhī uṣes three other compound forms for the definite Present, the first of which is compounded with the present participle ending in 'at' or 'it', and the irregular form of the auxiliary verb asaņē, viz: āhē, as: mī lihīt āhē, I am writing; the second adds the auxiliary verb ahe etc. to the indefinite Present ending in to etc., as: mī lihito āhē, I am writing. Both these forms of the definite Present, wich do not differ from each other as to their signification, denote an action going on or enduring at the time of speaking. The third form adds to the present participle ending in 'at' or 'it', the regular Present of the auxiliary verb asane to be, viz: asato etc., as: mī lihīt asato, I am in the habit of writing, and implies a habit, custom or natural disposition; it may therefore be termed the Present Habitual. - The Bangālī has, as noticed already, a simple Present, formed by affixing the inflexional terminations to the root of the verb, and a definite Present formed by uniting the auxiliary verb āčhi etc. with the present participle ending in ite, the initial a of which is dropped in this composition, as: āmi dēkhitēčhi, I am seeing.

3) The Habitual Aorist,

which implies, that an action was repeated in past time or went on at the time indicated, is formed by adding to the Aorist the indeclinable augment تهي thē, which may follow or precede it, as the augment of the Present; e. g.: هُو آيو تهي he came (repeatedly), or: was coming.

This tense is quite peculiar to the Sindhī, no analogy to it being met with in the kindred idioms. The indeclinable augment is the is apparently the Locative of tho, and signifies: 'in standing', which agrees well with the import of this tense.

4) The Imperfect,

which denotes, that an action was progressing or repeated at a particular time past, is formed by adding to the present participle the Aorist of the auxiliary verb huanu, as: رُنْدُو هُوْسِ I was wandering about; لوْدهِبُو هُوْسِ I was being driven out. The Imperfect may be rendered more emphatic by premising the past participle پِتُو piō (having fallen), as: هُو يِئًا ثِسَنْدَا هُنًا مِثني hiō (having fallen), as: هُو يِئًا ثِسَنْدَا هُنًا

Annotation. In Hindūstānī the Imperfect is formed, as already alluded to, by adding thā to the present participle; the same is the case in Panjabi, which adds sā; the Marāṭhī joins the Aorist of the auxiliary verb asanē, viz: hōtō etc. to the present participle ending in at or it. The same method is kept to in Gujarātī and Bangāli, in the latter language with the slight difference, that the Aorist of the auxiliary verb (viz: čhilām etc.) is coalescing with the participle present.

5) The Perfect,

which implies an action, that has been completed in time past, is formed by adding the auxiliary verb آنهِیَان هٔ اَنهِیَان , I am gone, وَدُوْ آنهِیَان I have been seized.

Annotation. All the kindred idioms form the Perfect in the same way as the Sindhī, by adding the Present of the auxiliary verb to the past participle.

6) The Pluperfect,

which implies an action, that has been completed in remote past time chiefly in relation to some other time, expressed or only understood, is formed by adding the Aorist of the auxiliary verb هُونُ huanu to the past participle, as: هُونُ I had gone; مُعْتِي هُيس I had been enticed (fem.).

Annotation. In Hindūstānī and Panjābī the Pluperfect is formed by adding thā and sā respectively to the past participle. In Marāṭhī the Aorist hōtō etc. is joined to the past participle and similarly in Gujarātī hatō etc. In Bangālī (which must not resort to a passive construction in the case of transitive verbs, as the other idioms) the Aorist of the auxiliary verb, viz: čhilām etc. is united with the past participle ending in yā.

- 7) The compound Future tenses. There are two compound Future tenses in Sindhī:
- a) The one is compounded with the participle present and the Future of the auxiliary verb huanu, which may be termed the Definite Future, as: ثِسَنْده هُوندُس I shall be seeing.
- b) The other is compounded with the past parhuaṇu, مُونَىٰ huaṇu, and may be termed the Past Future, as: هَلِتُو هُونَدُسِ I shall have gone; هُو بَدهو هُوندو he will have been bound.

Both these tenses do not only denote futurity in its strict sense, but imply also possibility, uncertainty or doubt.

A. The auxiliary verb مُؤْنُ huanu, to be.

Before we can fully develope the conjugational process of the Sindhī, we must first describe the inflexion of the auxiliary verb مُؤَنُ huaṇu, to be, by means of which the compound tenses of other verbs are being made up.

The compound future tenses are not in use.

As from all neuter verbs, so also from this auxiliary an impersonal or passive form may be derived, as: III pers. Sing. Present هوڤِجي تهو hō-ije thō, literally: it is been; III pers. Sing. Future: هوڤِبو hō-ibō, literally: it will be been.

Annotation. The root is hō (Inf. hu-anu) corresponds to the Sansk. root how, to become, which is assimilated in Prākrit to hō or huva; the past participle of it is in Prākrit huō or hūō, thence the Sindhī huō. In reference to the Potential hujā etc., it is to be kept in mind, that Prākrit uses already for the Present (and Future) such forms as hojja, hojjā etc., which Lassen derives from the Sansk. Precative Huīī (Lassen, p. 357).

The root ho is used in all the kindred idioms.

The old Present

ightipa, I am, is derived from the Present of the Sansk. substantive verb it approaches very closely to that of the Sindhī, as: āhē etc. In Hindūstānī (hā, haī, hai etc.) initial 'a', which has been lengthened in Sindhī and Marāṭhī, has been dropped; the same is the case in Panjābī, as hā, haī, hai etc. In Gujarātī, where initial 'a' has been likewise thrown off, we find the forms chaū, chē, chē etc., which correspond to the Prākrit form achi etc. (Lassen, p. 266, 346). In Bangālī we meet with the still more primitive form āchi etc.

Chapter XV.

Inflexion of the regular verb.

§. 51.

A. Inflexion of the neuter or intransitive verb.

All the neuter verbs end in the Imperative in 'u' (§. 43) and in the participle present in and ō (§. 44).

But there is also a considerable number of transitive verbs ending in the Imperative in 'u' and in the participle present in and $\bar{o}$ , which take in consequence thereof the same inflexional terminations as the neuter verbs, with the only difference, that in the Past Tenses they must invariably resort to the passive construction.

We exhibit now the inflexion of a regular neuter verb.

Neuter verbs very often take in the Potential and in the Present tense the passive form, without altering in any way their signification, and are then inflected like other passive verbs (see the inflexion of the passive verb), as: پَهَرَنُ pharaṇu, v. n., to be fruitful, or لَاهِنَ phar-j-aṇu; لُوهَنُ v. n., luṛhaṇu, to float, or لَاهِنَ luṛhe-j-aṇu, كَاوِزَنَ kāviṛaṇu, v. n., to be angry or لَوْجَنُ kāviṛ-j-aṇu, لَوْجَنُ v. n. ačaṇu, to come, اَچَخَنُ pa-ij-anu etc.

The III pers. Sing. of neuter verbs in the passive form is frequently employed impersonally throughout all the tenses with the exception of the Aorist and Perfect, as: مال المنابق ا

Many neuter verbs are in Sindhī considered both active and neuter, and therefore in the Past tenses constructed either as neuter (i. e. personally) or as transitive verbs (i. e. passively, the agent being put in the Instrumental), as: بِرَقِينُ viṛhiuse, I quarrelled or: مُنون وَرَقِعَنُ mū viṛhiō, by me it was quarrelled, from مُون وَرَقِعَنُ khiliuse, I laughed, or: مُون كَهِلَتُوْ khilin, v. n., to quarrel; مُون كَهِلَتُوْ khilanu, v. n., to laugh; but مُون كَهِلَتُوْ ruanu, v. n., to weep, is always constructed passively in the past tenses, as: رُنَانِيْسِ، runã-ĩ, he wept (it was wept by him).

On the other hand there are also some active verbs Trumpp, Sindhī-Grammar.

(but ending in the Imperative in 'u'), which are constructed in the Past tenses like neuter verbs, and not passively, as: سِكْهُنُ sikhiuse, I learnt (not مُون سِكَهِنُو sikhaṇu, v. a., to learn; سِكَهَنُ sikiuse, I longed for, from سِكُنُس sikaṇu, v. a., to long for.

B) Inflexion of the transitive verb.

The inflexion of the transitive and causal verb agrees on the whole with that of the neuter verb in the Potential, the Present, the Imperfect and the Future; but it differs from the inflexion of the neuter verb by being destitute of the Past Tenses of the Active Voice, which must be circumscribed by the past tenses of the Passive Voice, the past participle of transitive verbs having always a passive signification. The agent must therefore in the past tenses be put in the Instrumental, or it may, if that be a pronoun, be affixed to the past participle in the shape of a Suffix. It is understood, that the past participle passive must agree with its substantive in gender and number, as well as the adjective.

From every transitive and causal verb (and partly also, as noted already, from the neuter verb) a passive theme may be derived, which is regularly inflected through all tenses.

We exhibit now the inflexion of a transitive verb, ending in the Imperative in 'e'.

Chapter XVI. Compound verbs.

§. 53.

The Sindhi possesses a great facility in giving different shadows of meaning to a verb by compounding it with another verb

1) The most common way of compounding a verb will eigher is to put the past conjunctive participle of the active or passive mood, ending in  $\bar{\imath}$  or  $\bar{e}^{\,\imath}$ ), before it.<sup>2</sup>) The construction of a verb thus compounded depends entirely on the definite verb, not in any way on the past conjunctive participle. In this way are formed

a) So-called Intensitives, which impart to the definite verb a peculiar signification, arising out of the sense of the preceding past conjunctive participle, as: vaṭhī vańaṇu, to take off, literally: to go وَتَهِي وَخَجَنُ having taken; مَري وَنَجَن marī vanaņu, to be dead, lit.: to go having died; چَڙهِي وَڄَيٰ čarhī vańanu, to ascend, lit.: to go having ascended; كَهْلِي يَوَنُ khulī pavaņu, to be opened, lit.: to fall having been opened; جي پَوَنُ jī pavaņu, to become alive, literally: to fall having lived; vahī pavaņu, to pour down (as rain), literally: to fall having flown. — وَجَهَنُ vaḍhē vijhaṇu, to cut down, lit.: to throw having cut; سوري كَدَّهَنُ sōrē kadhanu, to pull out, lit.: to pull having moved; َوَّامِي آلَنُ čāṛhē āṇaṇu, to hang up, lit.: to bring having caused to ascend; لَوْرَهِي چَهَدَّنُ lōṛhē čhaḍaṇu, to float off (act.), lit.: to give up having floated away; tāṇiō čhinaṇu, to pluck out, lit.: to pluck تَانِتُوْ جِهِنَنْ out having pulled; مؤتَّاتي نِئِّنُ mōtā-ē nianu, to bring back, lit.: to take away having caused to return, etc. etc. It is to be noted, that کَهَنِي khaṇī, the past conjunctive participle of کهنکن khaṇaṇu, to lift up, is used with all sorts of verbs, to intensify their signification, implying, that the action is done forthwith, as: كَهَنِي لِكَهَنُ khaṇī likhaṇu, to set to writing; كَهَنِي أُجَارَنُ khaṇī ujāraṇu, to set to polish, كَهَنِي وُجَائِنُ khaṇī vajāṇu, to set to play (an instrument); كَهَنِي وَجَائِنُ khaṇī vańaṇu, to be off.

<sup>1)</sup> The past conjunctive participle ending in  $i\overline{\sigma}$  is also occasionally used to make up a compound verb.

In the same way the past conjunctive participle of پَونَ pavaṇu, to fall, viz.: پَئِي paī or پِيئِي pēī, is put before a verb, to intensify its signification, as پَئِي كَهِنَّنُ paī khiaṇu, to eat on or up, literally: to eat having fallen upon it. The augment تهو thö of the Present tense is dropped, when the verb is thus compounded with پِیئِي paī or پیئِي pēī.

Then having taken out earth from this tank they built cells and a mosque. Abd-ul-Latīf's life, p. 22.

He who will eat (it) with pleasure, that is my friend. Maj. 319.

b) Compound verbs, implying possibility, and power are formed by putting a past conjunctive participle before the verbs مَكَهَنَ saghaṇu¹), to be able, and بَانَنَ jaṇaṇu, to know, as: كَرِي سَكَهَنَ karē, karyō saghaṇu, to be able to do; كَرِي سَكَهَنَ dēī jāṇaṇu, to know to give.

In what manner shall I weep for my friend? I do not know how to weep. Sh. Kōh. VI, 1.

Thou didst not understand to give sleeplessness to (thy) eyes. Sh. Kōh. I, 12.

c) The idea of completion is expressed by putting a past conjunctive participle before the verbs: رَهَنُ rahanu, to remain, وَتَهَنُ vathanu, to take, نَحَنُ čukanu, to be at an end; نبهَنُ nibhanu or نبهَنُ nibanu, to be ended; similarly before بَسِ كَرَنُ base karanu, to leave off, to have done, as: بَسِ كَرَنُ vathī rahanu, to have taken; رَمِي رَهَنُ ramī rahanu, to be off; كَهَا ثُمَي وَتَهَنُ ramī rahanu, to be off; كَمِي چُكَنُ karē čukanu, to have done eating; كَرِي چُكَنُ karē čukanu, to have done speaking.

The Čāran, having slung the harp upon his shoulder, went in the night. Sh. Sōr. III, 5.

Who so ever looks upon a woman with a heart of fornication, that one has even therein committed already fornication with her in his mind. Matth. 5, 4.

With him friendship has been already made. Maj. 196.

When Jesus had ended these sayings, then the people, having heard his doctrine, became astonished. Matth. 7, 28.

d) Duration or repetition is expressed by putting before the definite verb the past conjunctive participle ending in iō, to which also the emphatic ī may be affixed, als: پَرْهِمُون پَرْهِمَان paṛhiō paṛhaṇu, to read over again, to keep on reading.

Read over again the lesson of this very pain. Sh. Jam. Kal. V, 31.

Even that, that letter I read over and over again Sh. Jam. Kal. V, 33.

2) Another kind of Intensitives is formed by putting the past participle of پَوْنُ pavaṇu, to fall, viz.: piō, before the Imperative, Present¹) or Imperfect of a definite verb, as: پِتَا دُسَنْدُا هُنَّا وَمَالِجَانْسِ piō māṇijāse, enjoy her; پِنَّا دُسَنْدُا هُنَّا piā thiane, they become پِنَّا دُسَنْدُا هُنَّا وَسُنْدُا هُنَّا فَعَا لَا عَلَى اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ اللهُ عَلَى اللهُ عَلَ

When she comes to the couch, then pull out her feathers; afterwards enjoy her. Amulu Mān. p. 147.

In that (palace) sparks are made like lightenings. Ibid. p. 140.

Many of his miracles the other boys used to see. Abd-ul-Latīt's life, p. 3.

3) The idea of continuation is expressed by putting a present participle before the verbs رَعَنُ rahaṇu, to remain and رَعْنُ vataṇu, to go about, as: وِينْدُوْ رَهِي vēndō rahī, he continues going; چَارِينْدُوْ وَتِي čārīndō vatē, he keeps on grazing.

He kept on travelling in fatigue from Egypt (and) Syria. Maj. 357.

His father Shāh Habib continued searching (and) seeking him. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 9.

Bījalu goes on grazing the horses. Story of Rāe Diāču, p. 2.

4) Two verbs may also be joined by putting the Infinitive of a verb in the Formative case before the verbs: اَكَنُ laganu, v. n. to apply, اَجَنُ مَدْمَا ačanu, to come, vańanu, to go. In this way so-called Inceptives are formed, as: رُبَّنَ لَكُنُ ruana laganu, to begin to cry; سَتُنَ وَنَجَنُ vasana ačanu, to come to rain; سَتُنَ وَنَجَنُ vasana ačanu, to come to rain;

The lightenings have come to flash (to rain); the monsoon has ascended (his) couch. Sh. Sōr. IV, 13.

Then whilst they went to buy, the bridegroom arrived. Matth. 25, 10.

Chapter XVII.

The Verb with the Pronominal Suffixes.

§. 54.

The Sindhī uses the pronominal suffixes far more extensively with the verbs, than with the nouns (cf. §. 30). The suffixes attached to the verbs express, strictly speaking, only the Dative and Accusative (the object), and, with the past participle passive, also the Instrumental, though we may translate them by any case, save the Nominative.

The pronominal suffixes attached to verbs are identical with those attached to nouns, with this difference, that the suffix of the I person Plural,  $\tilde{u}$ , which is not in use with nouns (but with adverbs and postpositions), is used throughout the verb. There is further a peculiar Instrumental affix, attached to the past participle passive, which is never used with nouns or adverbs, viz.:  $\tilde{i}$  for the Singular, and  $\tilde{u}$  for the Plural.

It appears, that the suffix i is originally the Instrumental Sing. إِنَ ina, by him (from هِي hī, this), and u the Instrumental Plural أن une, by them (from هُو hū or أَن u, that).

To the first person Sing. and Plur. the suffix of the same person is never attached, as in this case the reflexive pronoun يَانَ pāṇa, self, must be employed.

In the compound tenses and in compound verbs the suffix always accedes to the latter part of the compound, though it properly belongs to the first member of the compound. Similarly the suffix is never attached to the augment tho or the compound the compound the compound that the compound the suffix is never attached to the augment the compound the compound that the compound the compound the compound the compound tenses and in compound tenses are compound.

To the past participle passive even two suffixes may accede, the first expressing the Instrumental and the second the Dative or Accusative, as will be shown afterwards.

The way, in which the several suffixes are attached to the inflexional terminations of the verb, will be best seen from the following survey.

§. 55.

I. The pronominal suffixes attached to the auxiliary تهنَّن and هُوَّنُ verbs

1) The Imperative.

The same as the  $\Pi$  pers. Sing. and Plur. of the Potential.

The Precative.

In the same way the suffixes are attached to thiju, as: تهِجَانْسِ thij-ã-me, become to me, تهِجَانْمِ thijā-se, become to him.

Then if those are in front, be thou in their back. Amulu Mān. p. 144.

<sup>3)</sup> When a nasalized vowel (ē) is followed by a dental nasal, the sign of nasalisation (ن in Arabic characters) is generally dropped as superfluous; thus غُرُنْ huē-ne, instead of هُونِي huē-ne, instead of هُونِي huē-ne, instead of هُونِي أَسَاءَهِ أَسَاءُ أَسَاءً أَسْءَاءً أَسْءً أَسْ

In the same way the suffixes are attached to the Potential تَهِنَّان thiā, I may become, and to the Indefinite Present هُنَّان تَهُوْ huā thō and تَهِنَّان تَهُوْ thiā, as: مُثَيِّنُم تَهُوْ huē-me thō, thou art to me etc.

PLURAL.

Instead of آنهن āhē and آنهن āhine the form atha is also in use, but only when joined by suffixes. It corresponds to the old Prākrit form عام athi (the III pers. Sing. of the substantive verb asmi, I am, see Lassen, p. 345), which in Sindhī has also been transferred to the Plural.

The suffixes are attached to it in the following manner:

In the Present Definite: هُونْدُو آنهِيَان the suffixes accede, as noted already, to the latter part of the compound.

With girls of my age I have an appointment, after rain has fallen. Sh. Um. Mār. V, 21.

I have a secret matter, come near, then I will tell (it). Sh. Sōr. II, 22.

Then having heard the lesson he became glad; he has no other want. Maj. 189.

That to مُثِي hō, مُثِي huī etc., when forming with the past participle passive the Pluperfect, also a suffix, denoting the Instrumental, may be attached, will be shown in §. 56, 5.

It is to be observed, that the inflexional termination of the I pers. Sing. masc. and fem., se, becomes sã before the accession of the suffixes; the fem. termination سَيْف huyase is at the same time reduced to its original form مُنِيسَانيُّ huī-sã-e. The suffix of the I pers. Plur. is in the Aorist su or sī, and not u, as in the Imperative, Potential and Present. In the II pers. fem. Sing. the form مُنِيسَ huyẽ or مُنِيسَ huyẽ semployed, when followed by the heavy suffix su or sī, the accent being then thrown on the last syllable of the verb, as: huyē-su or huyī-sū.

In the same way as to هُيَسِ hōse and هُيَسِ huyase the suffixes accede to تَهِنُسِ thiuse and تَهِنُسِ thiase, and to every other neuter verb in the Aorist, for which سُنُعِ thiuse may serve as paradigm.

In the same way the suffixes accede to the Potential of the passive voice. The Potential and Present of the regular passive is however very rarely found with a suffix, more frequently that of intransitive verbs in the passive form, as: گَذْجَاني تهوُ gaḍijā-e thō, I meet with thee.

In the Imperfect the suffixes accede, as stated already, to the auxiliary verb هؤس hōse.

Lord, give leave of absence to the prince, that I may come having laid him at the feet of the Faqīr. Amulu Māṇ., p. 1.

Having gone speak, o guest, that I may give thee there this head. Sh. Sōr. I, 13.

Though their wounds flow, yet do they not their sigh divulge to the people. Sh. Kal. II, 23.

3) The past participle. (The III pers. of the Aorist.)

The way, in which the pronominal suffixes accede to the Aorist of neuter verbs, may be seen from the paradigm of thiuse. In the Aorist of the passive voice the suffixes are only attached to the III pers. Sing. and Plur. or to the past participle passive. The suffixes thus attached imply either a Dative-Accusative (the object in general) or an Instrumental. The suffixes of the I and II pers. of the Sing. and Plur. may at the same time denote the object or the agent, but in the III pers. Sing. and Plur. different suffixes are employed to express the object or the agent, se and ne denoting the object, and  $\tilde{1}$  and  $\tilde{u}$  the agent (see §. 54). Both  $\tilde{1}$  and  $\tilde{u}$  are considered as heavy suffixes, which draw the accent from the first to the last syllable of the verb; final  $\tilde{0}$  of the past participle must therefore be changed to  $\tilde{a}$  before them (and for euphony's sake with an additional nasal to  $\tilde{a}$ ), to give a support to the following heavy suffix. In the fem. Sing. an  $\tilde{a}$  must likewise be inserted between the final  $\tilde{1}$  and the suffixes  $\tilde{1}$  and  $\tilde{u}$ , to which even the feminine Plural termination  $\tilde{u}$  must give way, so that the Singular and Plural of both genders become alike, if joined by the instrumental suffixes  $\tilde{1}$  and  $\tilde{u}$ .

b) The past participle with two suffixes.

To the past participle passive two suffixes may be attached, the first denoting the agent and the latter the object (Dative-Accusative), as:

مُون تو كهي چهَ ثِرُتُو = čhađiō-mã-e چهَ ثِرْمَانِي

thou wast given up by me, literally: by me it was given up in reference to thee.

To suffixes of the II pers. Sing. and Plur. no further suffix is added, joint suffixes of this kind being mostly found in the III pers. Sing and Plur., very seldom in the I pers. Sing. and Plur.

The suffix used for the I person Singular is in this case not me, but mã (the Instrumental of آنُون ãū), as 'me' would not be strong enough to support the following suffix. The Instrumental suffix of the III pers. Singular ĩ is either contracted with the preceding ā to ã, or is retained before a following suffix; the suffix of the III. person Plural keeps its place before another acceding suffix, but is frequently shortened to ũ (u).

No change of gender and number can take place in the participle, when joined by the suffix of the III person Singular or Plural; but when the participle is provided with a suffix of the I person Singular or Plural, it must agree with its subject in gender and number.

4) The past participle with the auxiliary āhē etc.

(The Perfect.)

The single suffixes, be they referring to the agent or the object, are joined to مآنهن āhē and آنهن, but chiefly to the form اَنهُ atha (§. 55), and not to the participle itself.

But to the form آنهَ atha a double suffix may be joined, the first implying the agent and the latter the object, as: ڤنْوْ ٱتَهِينَانِيّ, I have given to thee, literally: it has been given by me in reference to thee. The suffix of the III. person Singular and of the II. person Plural does not admit of a second suffix.

The original i of wire atthi reappears again and is lengthened at the same time, when followed by a double suffix in the II. and III. person Singular, to give a support to the heavy joint-suffix.

The lions awakened him (saying): the fairies have come to thee. Ibid. p. 150.

5) The past participle with the auxiliary etc.
(The Pluperfect.)

The single suffixes are joined to هُوْ hō etc., which see. Thus in the III person Singular and Plural the instrumental suffix i and u is also attached to etc., as: چَهَذِيْتُوْ هُمَّانِتُين čhaḍiō huā-ī¹), by hìm it had been given up, چَهَذِيْتُوْ هُمَّانِتُون chaḍiō huā-ū, by them it had been given up.

But to ho etc. a double suffix may also be attached, the first denoting the agent and the latter the object, as: جَهَنْدُوْ هُوْمَانِي čhaḍiō hō-mã-e, thou hadst been given up by me, literally: it had been given up by me in reference to thee. These double suffixes however are of rare occurence; in the II person Singular and Plural they are not in use.

<sup>1)</sup> Instead of مُثَانِّرِين huā̃-ĩ and هُثَانِّرِين huã̃-ũ the contracted forms هو hã-ĩ and هو hã-ũ (from هو are also in use.

SECTION IV.

ADVERBS, POSTPOSITIONS, CONJUNCTIONS AND INTERJECTIONS.

Chapter XVIII.

Adverbs.

§. 57.

The Sindhī has only a limited number of original adverbs. 1) Adverbs are not derived from adjectives by any change of the adjectival termination, but the adjective as such (in the masc. Sing.) is either used in an adverbial sense, or the adjective, agreeing in gender and number with the subject referred to, is employed, where we would use an adverb as a complement to the verb, as:

هُو رُكِي مَانِي كَهَابِّي تهو ؛ he weeps much كَهَنُو رُبِّي تهوْ he eats only bread.

A number of substantives are at the same time also used adverbially, either in the Nominative, the Instrumental, the Locative or the Ablative case, similarly some adjectives in the Locative and Ablative have received an adverbial signification.

<sup>1)</sup> Adverbs borrowed from the Arabic or Persian are here only so far taken into consideration, as they are commonly used in Sindhi.

I. Original adverbs. 1)

The most common of them are:

apāka, accidentally. apare, excessively. ate, very. أَ aju, to-day. ačanaka, suddenly; ačāčēte, (unawares. on the fourth day (from the present). asahu, wholly; completely. albattah, certainly اَلْنَتْه (arab.). umālaka, in a moment. | سيد šāyad, perhaps. perhaps. perhaps. Thou art welcome, thou art welcome! Amulu Mān. p. 141.

II. Peculiar use of Adjectives.

The following adjectives may be either used as (indecl.) adverbs or they may agree with their subject in gender and number even in such constructions, where in English an adverb would be used.

vējhō, وجهو vējhirō, dim, rear; close to.

In the same way the Adjectives, implying time or place, derived from adverbs by the affixes āhō or ārō are either used adverbially or they may agree with their subject in gender and number, as:

م may be constructed with ویجهو، سَامُهون، اوْدُو، آدُو (1) or کهی

<sup>2)</sup> سُونھو is probably derived from the Sansk. साईम्, with; from मंहित, joined by.

أوراهون ōrāhō, somewhat on this side; from اوراهون ōre, on this side.

پوئِتَاهوں poëtāhỗ, a little behind; from پوئِتَاهوں poëtē, in the rear.

مَتهَاهوْن mathāhō, somewhat higher up; from مَتهَاهوْن mathē, on; upon.

manjhārō, somewhat inside; from مَنجهَارؤ manjhāhō, jhe, in.

When used adverbially (which is commonly the case), they take also the fem. termination, as:

عين agāhī, in front; in advance.

The Adjectives, ending in āitō (§. 10, 20) may at the same time be used adverbially, as:

مُنْهَاكِتوْ sũhāitō, suitable and suitably.

vasāitō, optional and optionally.

etc. etc. etc.

The Adjectives of one ending, which are not inflected, may all be used as adverbs; as:

barābare, right and rightly.

jara, } much; very. حَالَ jala, }

jaldu, quick and quickly.

يوثيث sōḍītu, true and truly.

abasu, vain and vainly. etc. etc. etc.

Do not turn me back; I am ahead. Sh.  $S\bar{o}r$  IV, 12.

III. Substantives used adverbially in the uninflected state.

A number of substantives are at the same time also used as adverbs, as:

avēra, out of time, late; subst. f. اَوِيرَ avēra, avēla, delay.

bučhā, unpleasingly; subst. f. نُجِهَان bučhā, disgust. غُجِهَان tārīxa, daily; subst. f. تَارِيحَ tārīxa, a date.

V. Adverbs derived from the Pronominal bases.

From the pronominal bases a number of adverbs is derived by means of certain affixes, which coalesce with the pronominal base. We exhibit them in the following survey.

Pron. base.	Manner,	Place.	Direction.	Time.
i, ī, ē hē.	(Îa¹ اِينتَ	(ite² اِتِ	(ēđē³ ايدي	(-81 <sup>4</sup> إيسِين
	hĩa هِينيَّ	hete هِتِ	hēdē ھيدي	hē-sī هيسيس
	iē اِبْين	here.	in this	up to this time in	this wise.		direction.	(or place).

<sup>1)</sup> Or short: إِنِيَّ jĩa, هِنِيَّ hĩa; أُنِيَّ ũa, جِنْيَ <sup>2)</sup> Or عَبِي itē, هِتِي hetē; also إِنْهِي ithē; أَتِي utē etc.

<sup>4)</sup> Or قَالِيسِنَا وَهَآه, قَالِيسِنَا وَ-sĩa etc. This set of adverbs is generally compounded with the postpositions تَوْئِين tā-ĩ, تَوْئِين tō-ĩ or توْئِين tōnī, as: ايسْتَائِين esĩtāĩ etc., or shortened: ايسْتَائِين es-tār etc.

Pron. ba	أونتي .hō	ũa hũa uễ huễ	Pla ا أُتِ أُهُتِ the	u-te nu-te	اژڌي هوڌي in	etion. ō-ḍē hō-ḍē that etion.	بين	Time. ō-sī اوْسِ hō-sī هوْسِ to that time.
in.	جِينگ jĩa جِئيں ji-ð. which wise.	-	te -te	jē in v	جيڭ -Āē vhich ction.	سِين²) je-f سِين ja- as long	عَّا جَا عَّا	جَدِّهِين jaḍe-hī جَان ja when.
sõ	تِينئ tī-a تِئيں ti-ē n that wise.		-te	in	تيث -َطَّe that ection.	سِين tē-بَ سِين tā-ب so lo	عَلَّ تَا عَلَّ	تَدِّهِين taḍe-hĩ تَان tầ then.

<sup>1)</sup> Or جِتْمِي ji-te; جَتْمِي ji-the, جِتْمِي ji-the. There is also a lengthened form جَاتِي jā-thē. All these forms may equally be used with the Correlative ti (as ti te etc.) and ki.

<sup>2)</sup> Instead of the postfix سِين sī, the postfixes تَوْئِين tāī, تَوْئِين tōṇi, may also be joined to جِيتَائِين tē, as: جِيتَائِين tē-tāī etc.

kō	كِينتَ	كِتِ	کیڎي	کیسِین	كَثِيهِين
	kĩ-a	ki-te	kēḍē	kē-sī	kađe-hĩ
	کِئیں	كَبتِ		كَاسِين
	ki-ē	ka-te	ı	kā-sī
	in what wise?	where?	in what direction?	how long.	when?

Some of these adverbs are again compounded with adverbial postfixes (and partly prefixes): as: جَانِكِيةَ إِهَّ الْمَاكُرَ إِهَّ الْمَاكُرَ إِهَ إِهْ الْكِيتَالِ وَالْمَاكُونَ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ إِهْ الْكُوبُ اللّهُ الللّهُ اللّهُ اللّهُ ال

The adverbs implying 'place' and 'direction' may also be put in the Ablative, as: اِتَالُون it-ā, اِتَالُون it-ān, اِتَالُون it-ān, اِتَالُون it-ān, اِتَالُون it-ahū, from this place, hence; ut-a, اُتَوُن ut-ahū, from that place, <sup>1)</sup> The forms: إَكْرُهُ jadeh-ā-kō etc. are properly double compounds viz.: كُونَ jadeh-ā, the Ablative and كُونَ kū, a postposition (identical with كَهُون khū) 'from'. In the same way jadeh-ā-kara is compounded from جَنْهَاكُرَ jadeh-ā (Abl.) and كُهُون kara (or kura) postposition, up to, literally: from which time up.

The emphatic ī (ī) or hī (hē) very frequently accedes to these adverbs, as: إِنْمِنْيِ iē-ī, in this very wise; اِنْمِي ita-ī or اِنَانِمِي ita-hī¹), even here; اِنَانِمِي itā-ī, itā-ī, even hence; اِنَانُهِي ēḍa-hī, in this very direction; اِنْدُونِي ēḍ-ā-ī, from this very direction etc.

The eyes of my body are there, where the side (country) of my companions is. Sh. Um. Mār. I, 12.

Where is gone to the Jōḡīs' emotion of yesterday? Sh. Ramak. I, 30.

Thence a camelman has come; this information is correct. Sh. Um. Mār. II, 6.

As thou wilt, even so it shall be unto thee. Matth. 15, 28.

<sup>1)</sup> The final ĕ o these adverbs is changed to 'a' before the emphatic I, for the sake of euphony; but ē keeps its place also, as: رُبَيْتِي utē-ī, in that very place.

آنتُون تهو پُچهَان كهوتهِيَا كِيسِتَنْ قَصْلُ كِتُود

Since I entered into connexion with the Jats, o companions!

The mountaineer is gone off, having torn (my) body;

I am also from that time (only) half (and) afflicted. Sh. Dēsī, Čhāṭ. 6.

VI. Compound adverbs.

The Sindhī uses a considerable number of compound adverbs 1), which are formed either by reduplicating the adverb (or noun), or adding a similar adverb (or noun), or by adding an adverbial affix or postposition.

<sup>1)</sup> Such compound adverbs may be written in one word or separately. When joined by a conjunctive vowel it is usual to join them also in writing.

1) Reduplicated adverbs,

(with or without a conjunctive vowel; cf. §. 12, II, 2).

بهيري بهيري bhērē bhērē, constantly.

پلِ پَلِ pale pale, every moment.

َوْيِنْهُ وْيِنْهُ وْيِنْهُ وْيِنْهُ وَيِنْهُ وَيِنْهُ وَيِنْهُ وَيِنْهُ وَيِنْهُ وَيِنْهُ وَيِنْهُ و rateorāte, night by night.

sarāsare, entirely.

يَّهُرِّي گَهُرِّي ghaṛī ghaṛī, constantly (hour by hour).

نيتهانيته nēṭhānēṭhe, at last.

varehōvarihe, year by year.

ja ja hara hara, constantly.

handhōhandhe, place upon place.

etc. etc. etc.

2) Adverbs compounded with a similar adverb or noun.

aju subahā, in a day or two.

ين تَثِهِين تَثِهِين عَثِهِين تَثِهِين تَثِهِين تَثِهِين تَثِهِين

بِئِين تِئِين jiể tiễ, in any way.

ratōḍtha, night and day.

كَثِي هِين كَدَانِي kaḍehē kadānē, now and then.

هيٿهِ مَتهي hēthe mathē, down and up (up and down).

etc. etc. etc.

3) Adverbs compounded with an adverbial postfix or postposition.

aga-bharō, a little in front; a little ago. اَكَبهَروْ age-tē, in front; in future.

پوئِتَاهوْن poë-tahô, a little in the rear. پوئِتَاهوْن poë-tē, behind.

رَاتَاكَرَ rāt-ā-kara, since night (lit. from night up). كَالْهَاكُونِ kālhā-kū, since yesterday.

Compare also the compound adverbs of §. 58.

ثُكهَ نَه سَارِينِ ثِيلَ مِين ويرَاوِيرَ وِهَسَنِ

They remember no pains in the body, constantly they are happy. Maj. 801.

چهَٿو هَلِيثو

One, having joined all bones, place upon place, having read an incantation, besprinkled them. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 53.

Chapter XIX. POSTPOSITIONS.

§. 58.

The Sindhī has no prepositions, but only post-positions, as all adverbs or particles, which influence in any way the noun, are placed after the noun and not before it. Only (2) rē, (2) ria may be optionally used as preposition or postposition.1)

There is only a small number of original post-positions in Sindhī, which require the noun in the Formative; far the greatest part of the postpositions now in use are originally adverbs (i. e. substantives and adjectives used adverbially; cf. §. 57, II. III. IV.), which either retain their original adverbial signification and are consequently constructed with  $\bar{\xi}$   $\bar{j}$ , or which are already treated as postpositions and require the Formative of the noun governed by them; the greater part of them may therefore be constructed with or without  $\bar{j}$   $\bar{j}$ , and be put before or after the noun, they govern.

I. Postpositions proper, requiring the Formative of the noun governed by them.

<sup>1)</sup> shar has already in Hindustani a signification bordering on that of a postposition. In Sindhi the substantive bharu, prop, support, is also in use, of which specific bhare is the Locative.

<sup>2)</sup> Apparently derived from تَوْزِي toṛu, the end; تَوْزِي toṛe-I, emphatic Locative.

CONJUNCTIONS.

§. 59.

The conjunctions serve to express the relation, in which either the single words of a sentence or two or more sentences stand to one another. According to their signification the conjunctions may be divided into:

1) Copulative.

تنجّ – تنجّ tĩa-tĩa, as well-as.

He also, after he was grown up, died. Abd-ul-Latīf's life, p. 2.

<sup>1)</sup> Generally written, for the sake of abbreviation &.

Therefore they are often also beaten. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 50.

I am very longing as well for the spinning place as for the country. Sh. Um. Mār. II, 1.

2) Concessive.

نة ta, ta, then (as apodosis in a conditional sentence generally not translated).

تَ بِهِ ta bi, nevertheless; then also; even then. تَدْهِين بِهِ taḍehĩ bi, تۇزي tōṇē, دōṇē, تōṇe, although; notwithstanding. yētōṇē¹), عيتوني yētōṇē,

3) Adversative.

tōṛē — na ta, either — or. تَوْرِّي - نَه تَه

غان jã, either; or.

نَّةِ — jã — jã, either — or.

سگر magare, except; but.

na ta, otherwise; else.

but rather; on the contrary (Panjābī).

but rather; on the contrary (Panjābī).

Either they go to the bank or (they go) with them in the stream. Sh. Suh. VIII, 1.

Do men pluck grapes from thorns or figs from a thistle? Matth. 7, 16.

No man can do the service of two masters; for either he will keep enmity with the one and make friendship with the other; or he will seize the skirt of the one and not at all mind the other. Matth. 6, 24.

Art thou he, wo was coming, or shall we look out for another? Matth. 11, 3.

<sup>1)</sup> كُنِ kane is postposition and not the III pers. Plur. of the Present (كَرِينِ = كَنِ) as Stack supposed; see Stack's Gramm. p. 101, Note. The verse quoted there does not quite agree with the Risālō.

We have no concern with those stones, but our concern is with their master. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf. p. 20.

4) Causal and Final.1)

ita, that; in order that; also an expletive, in quoting the words of a person.

jō, that, in order that; because.

بيلان jēlā, نجيلهَن jēlhā, because; wherefore. نجيلاهِين jēlahē,

<sup>1)</sup> We have classed the causal and final conjunctions under one head, because many of them are used in the one or the other sense.

<sup>2)</sup> These compound conjunctions are commonly written separately, but by some they are also joined in one word.

expressions as: هِنَ لَاهِ تَد for this sake, that = because.

6) Interrogative.

ke, interrogative expletive, generally not kī, translated.

پَاتِشَاهْزَادِي آسِين كِي تو كهي مَنَعَ تهِيُون كَرْيُون O princess, do we dissuade you? Amul. Mān. p. 145.

Chapter XXI. INTERJECTIONS.

8. 60.

In treating of the Interjections we abstract form such nouns or phrases, as are or may be used in the sense of Interjections, e. g. مَاته māṭhe, silence! (s. f.), arāhu aslamu, أَللُّهُ اَعْلَمُ saču, true! اَللُّهُ اَعْلَمُ arāhu aslamu, God knows! (lit. God is wiser, scil. than I), and only adduce such particles, as have now become strictly interjectional.

Besides the Vocative signs, mentioned already in §. 16, 8, the following are the most common; they imply:

1) Assent.

آنْهِ قُلُورَ قُلُورَ قُلُورَ قُلُورَ قُلُورَ قُلُورَ قُلُورِ قُلُورَ مُقَالَ أَنْثِينِ أَمْثَرَ أَنْثِينِ أَمْثَرَ أَنْثِينِ hã, wes. أَمْدُورُ أَمْدُو haō, هُلَث

THE SYNTAX.

We divide the Syntax into two parts, the analytical and synthetical. In the analytical part the chief constituent parts of speech, which have been described in the elementary grammar, are to be considered according to their exact signification, their intrinsic value and their special application. In the synthetical part it will be shown, how the different parts of speech are linked together in order to form a sentence and how two or more sentences are joined together.

I. THE ANALYTICAL PART.

SECTION I.

THE NOUN.

Chapter I.

On the absence of the article in Sindhī.

§. 61.

The Sindhī possesses no article definite, as little as the Sanskrit and the modern Ārian tongues of India. The noun may therefore be definite or indefinite, as:

Ji the woman or: a woman.

There are no fixed rules, by which a noun may be known as definite or indefinite, the only safe guide is attention to the context. On the whole it may be remarked:

- 1) A certain number of nouns have by themselves a definite meaning, as: هِنتُون hīổ, the mind, مِنتُون siju, the sun, سُرِّک ubhirando, the east, سُرِّک surgu, the heaven, اُبهِرَنْدو ubhu, the sky etc. Similarly all proper nouns.
- 2) If a noun stands in apposition to a proper name, it is thereby rendered definite, as: چِينَ وِلَايَت the country of China, حَسِن پَرِي the fairy Husine.

If for any reason a noun is to be pointed out as indefinite, the numeral adjective one, or the indefinite pronoun رخب one, is used. There is some slight difference in the use of معرف and رخب the first particularizing the noun by implying that only one person or thing is unterstood, the latter generalizing the same, by implying, that some one out of many, or something, which is not further described, is intended. معرف may also be used in the Plural, especially before another numeral, to render the number somewhat doubtful, as: معرف معرف some two men, or about two men, the number not being fixed as certain. — If some portion or quantity of a thing is to be indicated حرب (or حمین ) کیدی (or کمید) is put before the noun, irrespectively of the gender of the noun (as in Hindūstānī

The donkey, having become jolly, began to say to the stag. (Both the donkey and the stag having been mentioned before.) Sindhī Read. Book, p. 68.

He asked from them a vessel of (magic) power; at length they gave him the vessel and its (magic) power. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 67.

Some boys read (their) lesson, applying the (their) mind. Ibid. p. 50.

High art thou upon the sky; I am a wanderer upon earth. Sh. Sōr. I, 3.

In the city of Bhambhōru evil chats are constantly made about me. Sh. Ma38. IV, Epil.

Whatever milk and scum of butter there will be, that I will give to foreigners. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 60.

Some villager had put some quantity of grain in (his) garner. Ibid. p. 54.

Chapter II.

On the gender of nouns.

§. 62.

The Sindhī possesses only two genders, the masculine and feminine, the neuter having been lost in the course of time. As to the special use of the genders it is to be remarked:

- 1) The masculine gender is the next and refers either to male beings, or to things and abstract ideas.
- a) The masculine gender denotes living beings in general (the females being included therein) as: مَازِهُونِ بِهُ أَوْرُنَ jānvaru, an animal; بَانُورُ ḡhōrō, a horse (generally). But in some nouns, implying inferior animals, the feminine includes both genders, as: بَلُ balā, a snake (generally); مَا يُعِنُ بِهُ إِنْ يُقْتُ مُعْلِقًا بُلُا يَعْلَى اللهُ ال

The people of the city of Mekka assembling form crowds. Maj. 38.

God said: the earth bring forth living beings after their own kind, cattle and creeping animals. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 14.

They do not allow a male bird to sit down. Amulu Mān. p. 141.

It is an anomaly, that the nouns بَازُ bāzu, بَاشُو bāšō, كَاهُ فَالَاتُ نَاشُورُ bāzu, بَانُ bāšō, غَرَكُ šikirō, چَرَكُ čaragu, يَانُو sīčāṇō, يَينُسِروُ baīsirō, أَلَّاتُ lagaru, denoting different kinds of female hawks, are masculine, whereas the nouns بَشِينَ bašīna and خَبَكُ cipaka, denoting male hawks, are feminine.

b) If a neuter idea is to be expressed, the masculine must be employed, the masculine generally supplying the place of the neuter, as: خَنگُوْ آهِي it is good; مُون چَيوُ it was said by one. But this is only the case in the Singular, the masc. Plural of an adjective (or participle) never being used in a neuter sense. It must not be lost sight of, that the masc. form of an adjective cannot be employed in Sindhī in the sense of an abstract substantive ') (as in Latin, Greek or German), but that the corresponding substantive must be used (cf. §. 9, I. 1, 2) or the adjective must be accompanied by a substantive denoting 'thing' or 'matter' 2); only the masc. Singular <sup>1)</sup> In sentences like the following: چَنْگُوْ كَرَنْ رِهَنْك وَ to do good is allowed, چَنْگُوْ آهِي is an attribute, belonging to كَرَنُ , literally: well doing is allowed.

of the past participle passive may be used in the sense of a neuter substantive.

Ye will become like God, knowing good and evil. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 19.

Will he not give to them good things? Matth. 7, 12.

Surely, what is written (in fate), will be fulfilled; from that, which is written, no one will escape. Maj. 258.

She does not, what I said, go thou and subdue her. Maj. 285.

- c) In such nouns, in which a distinction between a larger or smaller size is admissible, the masc termination is used to express the idea of relative largeness, as: مَاكُوْرُو mākōrō, a large ant, مَاكُوْرُو mākōrō, a large ant, كُوْتُهُوْ bhungō, a house (large hut); كُوْتُهُوْ kō-thō, a large room; مُوْتُهُوْ kāṭhu, a beam (a big stick) etc.
- 2) The feminine gender refers either to female beings, or to things and abstract ideas.
- a) The feminine being considered the weaker sex, the idea of relative smallness, littleness or weakness is expressed by the fem. termination in all such nouns, which admit of such a variation of meaning, as: مَاكْوَرِي makhe, a small fly; بهنگي bhungī, a small hut etc.

stantive, as: بَاسُو right (and) left, scil. پَاسُو, which is to be supplied.

- b) A number of adjectives are only found in the fem. form عَنْهُ sandhe, barren (said of women); يَجِهَرَ garbhiṇī or كَرْبِهِنِي garbhiṇe, pregnant (said of women); عَرْبِهِنِي suā, milch (said of animals); عَبهورَاتِي garbhōrāṇī, having a child (said of a mother); عَبهورَاتِي varētī, having a husband (said of a married woman), وَثَوْرَرَ vadavara, fit to be married etc. etc.
- c) Adjectives or pronouns in the feminine are frequently used eliptically, the noun قَارِيحَ gālhe, word, matter, being unterstood. The noun تَارِيحَ tārīχa, date, day, is also occasionally omitted.

Then the mother asks Majno: what has happened to thee? Maj. 44.

O fair husband of Sōraṭhe! do some (word) of mine! Sh. Sōr. I, 11.

On the fourteenth (day) the moon rose; on the twenty-ninth the vulgar sees it. Sh. Kambh. II, 10.

Chapter III.

Number.

§. 63.

The Sindhī has only two numbers the Singular and the Plural, the Dual having been dropped already in Prākrit (cf. §. 15). As to their special use it may be remarked:

1) Arabic nouns in the so-called broken Plural are (according to their original signification) treated as collective nouns, and consequently constructed with the Singular of a verb (or adjective). The Arabic fem. Plural in is likewise treated as a Singular. But now and then the Arabic Plur. is constructed with the Plural of a verb etc., or it is put in the Sindhī Plural form and treated accordingly.

Ask, if some children are destined for me from the threshold of God. Amulu Mān., p. 139.

Blessed are those, who are peace-makers; for they shall be called children of God. Matth. 5, 9.

Then the Lord gives thee a meadow. where the gardens of Eden are. Sh. Sor. I, 9.

Do ye not see, that the Lord of the world with all companions, and all prophets are come. Life of Abdul-Latīf, p. 37.

- 2) With numerals the Singular form of a noun may be used, though the Plural is more common (cf. §. 23).
- 3) The Plural is frequently used in a honorific sense, when speaking with respect of any person. A noun in the Singular may therefore be constructed with the Plural of a verb (adjective etc.), or the noun itself may be put in the Plural, though implying only a Singular. This is frequently the case with the nouns موث , دوش etc.

For the same reason the  $\Pi$  pers. Plural of a verb is used, when addressing politely a person, but not so frequently as in Hindūstānī, the common people being as yet in the habit of addressing each other by the  $\Pi$  pers. Singular.

Abd-ul-Latīf used to play in his youth with boys of his age the play lika likōṭī (hide and seek). Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 9.

Woe, o sisters, I shall then not live without the Jat (i. e. Punhū). Sh. Dēsī VI, Epil. 2.

By the discourse of (= about) my beloved, by the recollection of my friend my crippled life has been revived. Sh. Jam. Kal. III, Epil.

Having come to the Shāh he said: Sir, give me also to drink. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 32.

4) The following nouns modify their signification in the Plural:

SINGULAR.

Chapter IV.

The cases of the noun.

§. 64.

I. The Nominative.

As to the special use of the Nominative it may be noted:

1) Nouns or proper names standing in apposition to another noun are generally coordinated to the same, as: كَرَاحِي بَنْكُرُ the harbour Karāčī; لِكَ لِكُوتِي رَائِدِ the play lika likōṭī; سُنْسُ پَاتِشَاهُ the king Shamsu etc.; but the noun in apposition may also be subordinated by means of the Genitive; cf. §. 67, 4.

Well! smiles the queen-mother of the king D̄iāču; i. e. saying: well! she smiles etc. Sh. Sōr. III, 6.

Lailā is the name of a woman, who (is) the daughter of the Qāzī Qamar. Maj. 33.

The month (= moon) (of) Muharram was seen; anxiety befell the princes. Sh. Kēd. I, 1.

2) Substantives implying a number or quantity may be likewise coordinated to another noun, instead of governing it in the Genitive (cf. §. 23), as: قَاتَرُ دَلَ أَنَا وَاللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ عَلَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّهُ عَلَى اللَّه

There are throughout lakhs (of) tale-bearers and scouts upon lovers. Maj. 254.

Having cut with (their) swords they made heaps (of) carcasses. Sh. Kēḍ. III, 4.

Having taken buckets (of) heart-pleasing gifts be content! Sh. Sōr. III, 4.

3) The duration of time is expressed by the Nominative (or by the uninflected case generally).

The (whole) eight watches (i. e. day and night) the hook of the Great (= God) is in my skull. Sh. Sōr. I, 20.

Those, who watch during the nights, I shall make (my) friends. Sh. Jam. Kal. V, Epil. 2.

Stay for my sake this night, o darling! Sh. Sam. I, 20.

4) The Nominative is frequently used absolutely to avoid two or more nouns following each other in the inflected case, which is contrary to the Sindhī idiom; the case, in which the nouns should properly stand, must then be taken up by a pronoun or pronominal adjective. If the stress be laid upon some part of a sentence, it may be put quite absolutely, its relation or subordination being taken up by a pronoun. This is especially the case, when a noun is nearer defined by a relative pronoun in the Nominative, the noun being then attracted by the following relative.

Fruits, clusters of flowers, (kinds of) honey, they try the taste of all. Sh. Um. Mār. VI, 9.

(As to) the entering of a rich one into the kingdom of God, the passing of a camel through the ear of a needle is easier. Matth. 19, 14.

سَا سَائِنتَ کهي سَارِينْدِي ثَكَنْدِي پهَرَنْدِي ڌَرِجَنْدِي گَاٿرُ مَتهي كَرِيَ مَاء كِئَانئِين

She remembering the Lord, trembling, shaking, fearing, lifted up (her) neck and made: Māu. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 64.

تَ اَهِين پَنْهَن جوَ پِئَ جوَ آسْمَانَ مِين آهِي تَنْهِن جَا پُڌرَ تهِيندَوْ

Then ye will become children of your father, who is in heaven. Matth. 5, 45.

§. 65.

II. The Vocative.

By the Vocative a person or thing taken personally is addressed; the Vocative stands therefore in no connexion with other nouns or with a verb, and is generally put at the beginning of a sentence.

1) The Vocative is used without any interjectional particle, if no particular stress is laid upon the address; but if the attention of the person spoken to is to be roused, the interjectional particles يَ yā, يَا ē, يُو ai, أَو أَنِي are used promiscuously with masc. and fem. nouns, وَا يَ and يَتِي are nouns, ايَ and يَتِي are used promiscuously with fem. nouns.

In addressing an inferior person, or when speaking very affectionately to a person, the interjectional particles رَيّ بَوّ (رِي rē) and رَيّ arē (رِي arē) are used with masc. nouns, and رَيّ بِتَ (رِي rī) and الرّي arī, (رَدَ الرّي) arī, (cf. §. 16, 8, Note) with fem. nouns, be they in the Singular or Plural. رُيُون barī, رَيْ rī and يُون rī arē also used independently of a noun, in addressing an inferior female (or intimate friend).

I have been quickened, companions, come in my Punhũ! Sh. Dēsī Π, Epil.

For God's sake, camelmen, do not drive on the camels!

Friend! thou art the protector of my crippled life! Do not extinguish (my) affection, o sweetheart! Sh. Dēsī III, 1.

O 3Alī, 3Alī, misfortune is on the orphans! The order of God has come, o Imāms. Sh. Kēḍ. V, Epil.

Hallo! son of man, doest thou go having beaten our mother? Amulu Māṇ. p. 148.

Hallo! cook, bring bread! Ibid. p. 144.

2) Adjectives preceding or following a noun in the Vocative are likewise put in the Vocative. But if an adjective defines another adjective in the sense of an adverb, it remains uninflected.

Sweet, charming friend! mayst thou fertilize the whole world! Sh. Sār. IV, 12.

O very kind friend! they (= she, Sing.) have given me up with difficulty (i. e. unwillingly). Maj. 664.

3) The Nominative Plural is occasionally used instead of the Vocative, especially with nouns terminating in 'u' (masc.).

Who are ye? whence do ye come from? ye men of foreign appearance? Nānga jō Qiṣṣō, v. 23.

Ye, that labour and are heavy laden, come unto me. Matth. 11, 28.

4) A number of nouns are commonly found in the Vocative only, as: إَيَل amare (اَمَن amane), اَيَل amane), اَيَل amane, اَيَل amane, اَمَن amī, o mother! an affectionate term for a female; مَا عَلَى dādī, o sister! جِيجًا dādī, o sister! مَا عَلَى dādā (Nom. عَلَى adā or اَنَ dādā (Nom. عَلَى bābā (from اَبَا abā and اَبَا bābā (from اَبَا and مَيَال ), o father! a term, which may be applied even to a child (male or female); مِيَال piyā (Sing. and Plur.) o friend! a respectful address.

O mother! hope is fulfilled, Punhū has arrived at Kēč. Sh. Dēsī, Chōṭ. 4.

O child (o father!) I make thy espousals with the son of the king Lālu. Amulu Mān. p. 142.

Fathers! what reason have you to ask after this very (thing?) Ibid. p. 140.

Having come, o darling, o friend! cover with dust the tomb of the deceased one in the mountain-passes. Sh. Ma; 8. VI, Epil.

§. 66.

III. The Instrumental.

1) The Instrumental either denotes the agent, by whom an action is performed, or the instrument, by means of which any thing is done. The Instrumental in Sindhi is not only used with the past tenses of transitive or causal verbs (which always have a passive meaning), but also with any tense of neuter verbs implying a passive signification.

By the people of the caravan the loads have been bound up; in thy eyes there is sloth. Sh. Surag. III, Epil.

<sup>1)</sup> The sense is different, if the postposition be used with a noun denoting an instrument. In this case it is implied, that some one was accompanied or armed with any thing, but not, that he has performed any thing by a certain instrument.

<sup>2)</sup> Independently of a verb the Instrumental of نَالُوْ nalō, name, is used quite in an adverbial sense, as: هِكِرْوْ فَتِيرُ مُحَمَّدِ عَالِمُ فَالِيمُ فَالِيمُ وَالْمِيمُ مُعَمَّدِهُ عَالِمُ فَالْمِي وَالْمُعَالِمُ مُعَمَّدِهُ عَالِمُ عَلَيْهُ عَالِمُ عَالِمُ عَلَيْهُ عَالِمُ عَالِمُ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهُ عَالِمُ عَالِمُ عَالِمُ عَلَيْهُ عَلِيهُ عَلَيْهُ عَلِيهُ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهُ عَلَيْهُ

Sũhiṇī was killed, says the Sayyid, by (her) relationship. Sh. Suh. V, 17.

By the lovers (God) is never forgotten. Sh. Jam. Kal. VII, 1.

By means of (my) feet I cannot arrive (there); the country of (my) friend (Pl.) is far off. Sh. Khambh. I, Epil.

By drops they are not reconciled; they have espied the jars of the heroes. Sh. Jam. Kal. IV, 9.

2) The Instrumental expresses causality<sup>1</sup>) (by reason of, by dint of):

On the seventh in the month the blood went out of the veins by reason of dryness;

On the eight in the month the eyes of the lover die of thirst. Maj. 478, 477.

3) The Instrumental expresses the way and manner, in which any thing is done.

He kept the custom (good breeding) in a good manner before the Qāzī. Maj. 173.

'There is no purpose in both mansions', in this wise they spoke. Sh. Jam. Kal. V, 23.

To both helpless ones (there is) pleasant talk in many ways. Maj. 198.

4) The Instrumental expresses the price, for which any thing is bought or sold. 1)

Are not two sparrow sold for a piece? Matth. 10, 29.

Fine black woollen blankets come there to hand for a paltry (sum). Sh. Um. Mār. VI, 8.

§. 67.

IV. The Genitive.

1) It must be remembered, that the Genitive in Sindhī is originally an adjective, formed by the affix , which always requires the Formative of the noun, to which it accedes; the Genitive admits therefore of gender, inflection and number, like other adjectives. Instead of its diminutive form is jarō is also found in poëtry, and especially with sandō (cf. §. 16, 6) and its dim. form with sandirō. The Genitive case-sign etc. may also accede to a noun with suffixes; in poëtry it is frequently dropped altogether, to be supplied from the context. with may also be separated from the noun, to which it belongs.

<sup>1)</sup> But the postposition with may also be used in this sense.

The understanding of the duties of a faqīr is not easy. Mēngho 37.

O friend, into my soul falls the desire after thee! Sh. Barvō Sindhī  $\Pi$ , 2.

By means of the magic power of the bucket he became wealthy. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 67.

The masters of the house having got up what do they see? that a thief, having collected all things of the house, having bound a bundle, having drunk wine (and) having become intoxicated, dances. Ibid. p. 69.

Having stolen daily from the houses of men all sorts of food they were bringing it to him. Ibid. p. 62.

To the forest with that thy son, who will cut off the head of my brother! Story of Rāe Diāču, p. 1.

The grass of (my) fatherland I consider as musk. Sh. Um. Mār. II, 1.

2) As regards the position of the Genitive, it generally precedes the noun, by which it is governed, like other adjectives; but if the stress be laid on the governing noun, or if the euphony of the sentence should require it, the Genitive follows the same. In poëtry the Genitive precedes or follows the noun, on which it is dependent, either immediately or separated by one or more intervening nouns, as it may be required by the metre or the rhyme.

جَان تهِيندو

Whoever flees from the trouble of labour, his state will become like that of the dogs. Sindhī Read. B., p. 61.

Escort, for God's sake, the boat of the helpless one! Sh. Barvō Sindhī II, Epil.

3) The Genitive has a double signification in Sindhī; it refers either to the subject or to the object of the sentence. The Genitive is called subjective, if the attribute expressed by the Genitive refers to the governing noun (or subject) as to its owner or author, and it is called objective, if it refers to the object, to which the action of the subject is directed.

I have borne the taunts of (my) companions for thy sake. Sh. Mūm. Rāṇō I, Epil.

Those, whose I am, will not abandon me. Sh. Köh. II, Epil.

Beneath the feet of (my) friend I spread (my) hair. Maj. 231.

In my heart there is a thirst after the Jam Ārī. Sh. Hus. VIII, Epil.

Complaints about the separation I shall utter to dear Punhū, o friend! Sh. Hus. VIII, Epil.

4) One noun is often made dependant on the other by means of the Genitive, where we should properly expect an apposition.¹) In this way it nalō, name and similar nouns subordinate the appellation in the Genitive. The same subordination in the Genitive takes place, when the genus is nearer defined by the species, as: a fig-tree, or when a geographical appellation, as: town, mountain, river etc. is followed by a proper name, as: the river Indus. In some instances the English idiom resorts to the same construction, as the Sindhī, e. g. the city of London.

From whom hast thou learnt the word (of) 'separation', dear friend! Sh. Barvō Sindhī II, 8.

The woman uttered the word (of) 'money' slowly. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 68.

That very dry post stood as a green tamarisk tree, having become big and thick. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 23.

There was a very respectable inhabitant of the town of Thațā. Ibid. p. 45.

5) The Genitive describes the material, of which something is made or composed; in this case the Genitive quite supplies the place of an adjective.

The garment of John was of camel's hair and round his waist a girdle of leather. Matth. 3, 4.

She, having put on bracelets and buttons, will cause to bring (call for) a garment of pearls and rubies. Amulu Mān. p. 144.

6) The Genitive describes the nature or quality of the noun, on which it is dependent (Genitivus qualitatis). But in this case the Genitive must always be accompanied by an attribute, be that an adjective, pronoun or another noun in the Genitive; the repetition of a noun may also serve as an attribute. In poëtry, and even in prose, the Genitive case-sign is frequently dropped, so that constructions of this kind can hardly be distinguished from those with the Locative, see §. 70, 4.

One of them was nine years old, the other eight years. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 50.

Without understanding science is of no use. Ib. p. 54.

From Kēč came a caravan, camels of a fine kind. Sh. Dēsī III., 8.

Having given clothes of different kinds he ted them off. Amulu Man. p. 140.

7) When the Genitive is dependent on nouns, implying a part, quantity or measure, it expresses the whole of that, of which the governing noun forms a part. But if no such noun precede and a part is to be singled out, a postposition must be used (as: مَنْجَهَان مَان.).

Which a woman took (and) hid in three measures of flour. Matth. 13, 33.

A jar of wine fell into his hands. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 62.

In one of those (houses) my beadstead shall be, in the other that of the king. Amulu  $M\bar{a}n$ . p. 142.

If two persons of you become one-hearted respecting a petition. Matth. 18, 19.

8) A certain number of adjectives and appellatives, which have partly taken the signification of substantives, may subordinate another noun in the Genitive. Of this kind are the nouns formed by the affix āku, āū (see §. 8, 9) and others.

Lovers, drinkers of poison, are verry happy when seeing poison;

They are always used to the chain and the execucutioner. Sh. Kal. II, 33.

Thou art a resident of the waste and desert. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 69.

A vagabond, accustomed to bits, no breeding and good behaviour. Maj. 304.

Which lustre is upon thee, for that head I am longing. Sh. Sör. II, 7.

The Sayyid, by name Shāh Habīb, was originally an inhabitant of the village Vangō Vilāsō. Life of Abdul-Latīf, p. 1.

9) The Genitive is used, without being dependent on a governing noun, to express a space of time, as: فينْهَ جو by day etc., the noun, by which the Genitive is governed and which is idiomatically left out, being بيلؤ, vēlō, time.

This construction is therefore identical with that mentioned in §. 64, 3. In Hindūstānī is used in the same sense.

Sitting at (the time of) evening prayer I spread out my skirt on the water. Sh. Sor. V, 14.

The bard sang the first night at the side of the castle. Sh. Sōr. II, 1.

ثِينْهَ جو تَنْهِن جِي چهَانْوَ مِين رِهَنْدَا هُنَّا

By day they used to sit in its shade. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 23.

10) A number of adjectives require idiomatically the inflected case of the Genitive (i. e. جهر), when a noun is made dependent on them. The most common of them are: عَمَانَ مَلَا مَا أَوْثَوْرُ وَالْمَا أَوْثُورُ وَالْمَا أَلَا أَلَا اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ اللَّهُ الللَّهُ الللَّهُ اللّ

When they came near to Jerusalem. Matth. 21, 1. أَبِهَرُ چَنْدَرَ پَسُ پِرِين تَوْ اوْثَا مُون ثُورِ

Look at the rising of the moon; the friend is near to thee, far from me. Sh. Kambh. II, 7.

The eyes are opposite the eyes the whole day and night. Maj. 219.

11) The relative adjectives جِهَّرَ jehō, غِهُرِّ jehaṛō, such as, like as, fit to, سَنْدُو sandō, like as, jē-tirō, as much as, and جِيتُرُو jēdō, as large as, are always constructed with the simple Formative of the noun, that depends upon them.

Majno, the son of Mahmud, is then not such as to come, i. e. is not likely to come. Maj. 719.

Teeths like Jasinum flowers the Bountiful has given her. Maj. 54.

Which is blessed in all ways, like thou, o wise one. Maj. 825.

In that (there is) even thou, thou; (there is) no other sound (as much as the twinkling of an eye =) for a moment. Sh. Jam. Kal. V, 19.

Then no mote, as large as a sesamum seed, came into thy body, o friend? Ajāib v. 21.

12) When a noun is subordinated by means of the Genitive to the Infinitive of a neuter or active verb, the case-sign of the Genitive may be optionally dropped.

The villager occupied himself in (the) removing of that little grain. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 56.

The Mughals, having taken (their) swords came for the killing of the Shāh, i. e. 'in order to kill him'. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 15.

After the seeing of this affluence she offered up dutiful thanks. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 55.

آسْمَانَ ۽ دهَرْتِيَ وَنَجَنَ تؤنِي شَرَعَ جو هِكِڙو تِرُ كَنْهِن طَرَحَ نَه وِينْدو

Till the passing away of heaven and earth not one jot of the law shall in any way pass off. Matth. 5, 18.

§. 68.

V. The Dative.

1) The Dative denotes the more distant object, in reference to which the subject is acting. This is already indicated by the postposition khē (§. 16, 4), by means of which the Dative case is made up 1), and which originally signifies: 'on account of, for the sake of, in reference to'. In prose the postposition is always put after the Formative of a noun, but in poëtry it may precede the noun, or it may be dropped altogether.

When a Genitive, depending on a noun in the Dative, follows the same immediately, the postposition is put after the Genitive case-sign.

Come near, dear friend, do not give pain to the distressed. Sh. Ābirī X, 4.

Then Maste Nāze came and said thus to the elegant. Ajāib, v. 90.

<sup>1)</sup> In poëtry the postpositions كَنِ kane, كَنِ kane and كَنِ gare are used in the same sense as كَيْنِ.

May no sunshine apply to the camelmen, may no hot wind apply to the camels!

O God, may no hot wind blow to the sons of Ārī! Sh. Dēsī I, 25.

Having bound (him) they delivered him to the police-officer of the town. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 69.

2) The Dative with the auxiliary verbs مُونَىٰ to be, and تَهِنَّن to become, to be, expresses the idea of possession.

I have hope in God. Sh. Sor. I, Epil.

I have no lack whatever of wealth, but children are not at all born to me. Amulu Mān. p. 139.

3) The Dative denotes the remote object, in reference to which the action takes place. In this case the postposition was must be translated by: for, for the sake of.

(My) heart (and) mind burns for my sweetheart in intoxication. Maj. 728.

In Kēč there is a call for those, under whose armpit there is nothing (i. e. who have nothing). Sh. Mass. II, 11.

They sent men for food, water (and) grass. Sh. Kēd. I, 5.

- O hero! thou diest for the sake of victory, forget then the apprehensions of the heart! Sh. Kēā. VI, 9.
- 4) The Dative expresses the idea of motion to a place.

Having driven on I came to Kēč, where Punhū himself (is). Sh. Ābirī V, 1.

O fair Lady, after death thou wilt come to Punhu. Sh. Mass. IV, 5.

The work of a messenger (i. e. travelling) does not at all bring to Kēč. Sh. Ābirī IV, 10.

5) The Dative is used to express time, when only an indefinite space of time is spoken of, whereas the postpositon منجه or منجه, in, is employed, if the time, during which any thing is done, is to be noted.

Qaisare says: arrive that very night in Kelāt. Sh. Sār. IV, 3.

Go to (thy) friend at day-break, in clear day. Sh. Suh. Chōt. 11.

Immediately at that time an order was given to the chamberlains. Ajāib, v. 15.

§. 69.

VI. The Accusative.

The Accusative has two forms in Sindhī, it is either identical with the Nominative or with the Dative, i. e. the idea of the Accusative may be expressed also by means of the postposition

1) The Accusative is commonly expressed by the form of the Nominative, whenever the verb governs only an Accusative, and not at the same time a Dative.

When he shall keep his own horses, boats, soldiers and make his own judgements and thoughts. Amul. Man. p. 139.

If I shall marry, I shall marry this very fairy Husine. Ibid. p. 141.

2) But when the subject of the sentence is an animate noun (in the Nominative) the object (Accusative) must be marked out by means of the postposition to avoid a possible mistake. If the subject be animate, and the object inanimate, the object (Accusative) generally remains in the uninflected form (i. e. without the Postposition), if there be no danger of misapprehension. If both, subject and object, imply inanimate things, the object may likewise remain uninflected.

Shāh Sāhib, having taken that very faqīr with him, came. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 40.

The father of the Shāh continued seeking the Shāh Sāhib. Ibid. p. 44.

When Maxdum Hāshim heard, that the Shāh Sāhib causes to make music in the mosque. Ibid. p. 35.

If ever this word the king of the mice will hear. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 62.

If that (treasure) some man finds, he keeps it concealed. Matth, 13, 14.

The (black) marks (from blows) cause pains; the bones also are aching on account of the (= my) sweetheart. Sh. Ābirī, Čhōṭ. 2.

3) When the object (Accus.) of an active verb is for any reason to be rendered more prominent, the post-position is used for this purpose. This is especially the case, when the object implies living beings, whose mention has been made already, or when two or more prisons or things are in any way compared or set against each other. But much scope is left in this respect to individual judgement. In poëtry is occasionally dropped, but then the contracted form of the Formative must be used in the Plural.

That disciple, having called (that) girl, said. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 48.

The devs said: wilt thou recognise that very one? Amulu Mān. p. 151.

In that way money will be got; having brought (something) from that let us feed (our) guests. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 41.

Sisters, says Abd-ul-Latīf, praise ye the (well-known) friend. Sh. Ābirī Čhōt., Epil. 3.

Having gathered first the tares, having bound bundles to burn (them), gather (and) put afterwards the wheat in the garner. Matth. 13, 30.

Whatever longing there is, learn (it); otherwise look at the longing ones. Sh. Jam. Kal. VII, 7.

4) Whenever an active verb is constructed impersonally in the past tenses (§. 94, 5) the object must be pointed out by the postposition , signifying: as regards.

Then it was abandoned by the caravan as regards her, while being asleep, i. e. she was abandoned by the caravan while being asleep. Sh. Köh. I, 8.

Having taken his bundle he started him off. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 53.

5) When a verb governs a double Accusative, both objects remain in the uninflected state, if they imply things; but if the first object be a person or a living being in general, it is rendered more definite<sup>1</sup>) by the accession of the postposition whereas the second object, be it a person or thing, remains in the uninflected state of the Singular, though it refer to a Plural. If the stress is on the second object (compare §. 94, 3), it may be placed first.

I shall give (my) flesh to the wild beasts, having made atoms (my) life. Sh. Ābirī IX, Epil,

That one was in the habit of causing the guests to eat bread, i. e. he was in the habit of entertaining the guests. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 40.

Make the weak one pass the Hārhō, says Latīf. Sh. Dēsī IV, 4.

<sup>1)</sup> But both objects may also remain in the uninflected state, though implying persons; see §. 94, 3.

	6) When an active verb subordinates at the same time a near and a more distant object (i. e. an Accusative and a Dative), the Accusative (in the uninflected by an adjective ending in 'u', the adjective must be likewise put in the Locative; but adjectives of other terminations, pronouns or numerals are only put in the Formative.

1) The Locative expresses in Sindhī not only the place, in which an action is going on, but also direction and motion to a place. The Locative is therefore used after verbs of motion, such as: رَجَن vananu, to go, رَجَن ačanu, to come etc.

No crows were sitting on a tree; evening tide has set in; she seizes the opportunity.

She stepped in, having taken the jar into the hand, having heard the call (to prayer) of the evening. Sh. Suh. I, 14.

In the caldrons the limbs boil, where not a grain does descend in the eddies. Sh. Kal. II, 27.

In deep, very great love are hares and jackals. Maj. 548.

May not any one, o friend! trust in a Baluchī promise! Sh. Dēsī, Čhōt. 7.

I go to the forest; I have seen the footstep of Punhū. Sh. Hus. V, 4.

Having given (left) the other doors to others, I came to thy door. Sh. Sor. I, 11.

2) The Locative is used with nouns implying time, to express the point of time, at which an action takes place.

One day, making a journey, they arrived at (lit.: came out of) Jesalmer. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 40.

At some time in a village one mouse, having reflected in its mind, said. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 61.

(My) beautiful friend came at day-break to (my) house. Sh. Khambh. I, 9.

(My) body weeps in the nights (and) in the days, in the chains (i. e. in prison). Sh. Um. Mār. V, 7.

3) The Locative is used also in the sense of the Latin Ablative absolute, to express a state or circumstance. In this way either an adjective may be used absolutely (i. e. substantively, so that an attribute may be joined to it) or a substantive with an adjective; in either case the participle present in being, being, should be supplied, but is idiomatically left out. 1)

Grant me that favour, that I may meet, whilst living (lit. in the state of being alive) my sweetheart. Sh. Ābirī I, 1.

Whilst we live no one shall take even the name of thy hair. Amulu Mān. p. 151.

Do not take down the load; depart, that thou mayst meet with (thy) object, whilst the sun is (yet) red. Sh. Hus. I, 2.

4) The Locative describes the attributes or qualities, in which the subject is, to say so, immersed. In the English idiom such a Locative must be translated by the postposition 'of' or 'with'.

Of slender waist, of straight nose, with lamp-black their eyes (are) filled. Sh. Sām. I, 35.

In the adornment of the head (and) body he is a hero of great boldness. Ajāib, v. 156.

With great udder they came, having behind their young ones. Sh. Sār. IV, 14.

Hast thou seen any where one by name Shāh Abdul-Latīf, of such marks and signs, my son? Life of Abdul-Latīf, p. 9.

An orphan, of torn clothes, to look upon like a basil leaf. Maj. 303.

Of deer-eyes, of ears of a wild goose, of a Kōvil's speech. Ibid. 52.

Of a neck (and) breast like a pigeon, amiable. Ibid. 60.

5) The Locative is used also in computations, the sum or price, at which something is computed, being put in the Locative (cf. also §. 66, 4).

Thy step I do not balance with ten billions, if thou become comforted. Sh. Sör. II, 4.

That heart, which is not at all obtained for a price, thou hast asked. Sh. Sōr. II, 15.

§. 71.

VIII. The Ablative.

The idea of the Ablative is expressed either by the Ablative case (cf. §. 16, 5) or by postpositions, as: کَهَاں, کَهَاں, مَان, رَمَاں, from-in, کَنَا ,کهوْں from-upon etc.

1) The Ablative denotes in the first instance separation, removal, distance from a place or thing; it is therefore commonly used with such verbs, postpositions and adverbs, as imply a distance or separation from any thing (place, time etc.).

This one came, having made a journey from a foreign country. S. Sōr. I, 5.

When I fled from Bhambhōru, then all pains became delights;

Having descended from the mountain-pass I became in my own person Punhū. Sh. Ābirī V, 2.

I will scoop out of (my) shoulders something, o bard, and give it thee with the body. Sh. Sōr.  $\Pi$ , 22.

Before death, o Sasuī, o fair Lady! die whilst living! Turn not aside from that company, by which the soul has been lost on the road. Sh. Ma; 8. IV, 6.

2) The Ablative is therefore used in comparisons, the object, with which a noun is compared, being put in the Ablative, to state the distance or difference of one noun from another (cf. §. 21).

If thou desirest to meet thy friend, then esteem virtue more than vices; (literally: esteem virtue before vices.) Sh. Jam. Kal. VIII, 22.

Having built a dwelling better than all other faqīrs (lit. good from), he lived at Bhiṭa (i. e. on the sandhill). Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 21.

3) The Ablative expresses the ground, reason or feeling, out of which or with which an action is done.

Respect Muhammad, the intercessor, out of understanding (and) love. Sh. Kal. I, 2.

Go, ye scholars, that she may eat with pleasure. Maj. 117.

4) The Ablative denotes also instrumentality and accompaniment; but this use is restricted to inanimate nouns and to poëtry; in prose either the Instrumental or the postposition مَانُ would be employed for this purpose.

Those say to thee: do thou not return a word with (thy) mouth. Sh. Jam. Kal. VIII, 17.

Give thou praise to the wise one publicly with (thy) tongue. Sh. Surāg. I, Epil. 1.

The mouthfuls, which thou, o camel! hast obtained (and) plucked with the mouth. Sh. Kambh.  $\Pi$ , 29.

Go with the gold to the banker, (but) do not at all take down the load! Sh. Surāg. IV, 9.

5) With neuter verbs the Ablative (especially with the postposition كهَان) denotes the agent. The same is the case with passive verbs, if the agent be an inanimate noun.

Master, I have done wrong, forgive me that! Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 20.

I shall become a candle in the night, being burnt by that delight. Sh. Khambh. I, Epil. 3.

By the beauty of (his) face I was made mad in (my) mind. Sh. Suh. IX, 8.

Chapter V.

Pronouns.

I. Personal pronouns.

§. 72.

1) The personal pronouns are generally not expressed, being implied in the inflexional terminations of the verb. They are therefore only used either for the sake of perspicuity or for the sake of emphasis or contrast. In poëtry a personal pronoun is often omitted, where we should expect one, and must then be supplied from the context.

On the whole the personal pronouns precede the verb, to which they belong, but they may also follow it, especially in poëtry.

I am alone on the Hab, I have no friend nor brother. Sh. Suh. II, Epil. 2.

Ye married women also return! I shall not return without (my) husband. Sh. Ābirī IV, 9.

Go again ye all, who have husbands! Ibid. IV, 9.

Even me kill my own pains.

2) The Genitives مُنْهُن جَوْ and تَنْهُن جَوْ my, thy, are possessive adjectives in the Nominative and inflected accordingly. In poëtry the case-sign عَوْ is frequently dropped, but then the forms عَوْ and تَعْ must be employed. Instead of the possessive adjectives the pronominal suffixes attached to nouns (verbs and postpositions) or to سَنْدُوْ (cf. §. 40, 2) may also be used, and in certain cases يَنْهُن جَوْ see §. 77.

The Genitive of the personal pronoun of the I and II pers. Sing. and Plur. (Lat. mei, tui etc.) is expressed by the Formative تُنهُن جي مُنهُن ود., which is also used before such postpositions, as require جي, cf. §. 58, II.

My heart is fixed there, here is (only) earth and flesh. Sh. Um. Mār. VI, 16.

It is my friend's turn to come to my house. Sh. Kambh. I, 9.

Thy companions, thy friends have been carried down the river by the waves. Sh. Surāg. VI, 6.

Whoever loves son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me. Matth. 10, 37.

Come, walk after me, i. e. follow me. Ibid. 19, 21.

3) ثنهٰن جو and ثنهٰن جو are also used substantively, especially in the Plural, in the sense of: my, thy people or friends.

I have a very great longing; would that my (friends) had returned! Sh. Sām. II, 17.

4) The Accusative of the personal pronouns must always be marked by the postposition which in poëtry however is frequently dropped. But if in a sentence a Dative and Accusative of a personal pronoun (or pronoun of the III pers.) should occur, the Dative takes the postposition as well as the Accusative; constructions of this kind are however avoided, whenever possible. 1)

(To =) Upon me (is) thy reproach, o my friend! Sh. Mūm. Rāṇō II, 14.

Go not away from Kāk anywhere, o Rāṇō, it is not right for thee. Sh. Mūm. Raṇō I, Epil.

Bhita does not give you up, and thou do not run away! Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 21.

3) When the personal pronouns are accompanied by an attribute in the inflected case, they must precede it in the Formative.

Make some turn, o husband, to the hut of me, the lowly one! Sh. Daharu III, 1.

Woe, by me the humble one nothing was then said! Sh. Dēsī IV, Epil.

They will give to me the afflicted a sign, for God's sake. Sh. Kōh. III, Epil.

I have presented you into his hands, i. e. made a present of you to him. Amulu Man. p. 148.

§. 73.

II. Demonstrative pronouns.

1) There is no personal pronoun of the III pers. (Singular and Plural) in Sindhī, its place being generally supplied by the demonstrative in that, he, she; but if a distinction between a nearer and a more distant object is to be made, the demonstrative pronoun in this i), is referred to the object near at hand, and in to the more distant one. When the subject (or object) of the sentence immediately preceding is to be taken up again by a pronoun, the demonstrative pronoun is used.

When the groan of her dying came upon her ear. Sindhī Read. B. p. 64.

Thou art a man, she a woman. Amulu Mān., p. 147.

That one has in his mind (the word) 'night', these ones think this. Maj. 34.

1) is also used idiomatically in the following way:

Otherwise this is the kingdom, this thou, i. e. I will have nothing to do with the kingdom nor with thee. Amulu Mān. p. 141.

2) The demonstrative pronoun , when joined to a personal pronoun, signifies 'therefore'; as:

O Umar of the Sumiro clan, therefore how shall I put on silk? Sh. Um. Marui VII, 6.

The Dev has given thee a necklace of nine lakhs; that also I snatched away and took to hands. Amulu Man. p. 147.

All these buffaloes have come out of it (= were born); take them as thy own. Sindhī Read. B. p. 61.

2) The demonstrative pronoun , this very, refers emphatically either to an object near at hand, or just mentioned or immediately following, and that very to a more remote or afore mentioned one. this here, and it that there, are only used in a local sense.

If ever this very (just mentioned) word the king of the mice shall hear. Sindhī Read. B. p. 63.

That very one then is my sister. Amulu Māṇ. p. 149.

3) In the Accusative the demonstrative pronouns commonly take the postposition (if they refer to persons (or animate beings generally) which are to be rendered more prominent; but if there be no stress laid on the demonstrative, the uninflected form of it is used. If the demonstratives refer to things or if they precede adjectively another noun in the uninflected form, they remain uninflected in the Accusative, if the postposition where the postposition is not required for reasons stated at §. 69, 3.

She, having seen these, locked the door. Amulu Mān. p. 149.

When you find it, come and give me intelligence. Matth. 2, 8.

Then I shall see that, (and) then send to you a slave-girl. Amulu Māṇ. p. 150.

These trees you will not obtain; those trees there (are) many.

§. 74.

III. The relative and correlative pronoun.

1) The relative pronoun¹) in Sindhī is جؤ, who, which, and the correlative سؤ that, which usually takes up the relative. Besides the relative جيكي, the indefinite pronouns whosoever, جيكؤ whosoever may also correspond to the following correlative .... The place of the relative pronoun may also be taken up by a relative adverb. Instead of the correlative a demonstrative may be used, if the stress be laid upon it.

The sentence headed by the relative pronoun may either precede or follow that commenced by the correlative, according to the emphasis laid on either pronoun; for the sake of emphasis the correlatives may be repeated.

حَيْفُ مُنْهُن جِي حَالَ كهِي جَا نَجِهِي آنَنُون بِيكَارِ Woe to my state, as I am bad and useless! Maj. 756.

When the relative (and correlative) refers to a pronoun of the I or II person, the verb of the relative sentence is usually in the III person, and not in the I or  $\Pi$  person.

In poëtry either pronoun may be dropped.

That, which shouted: a coward (is) the cat, ran also away. Sindhī Read. B. p. 64.

Those, which thou considerest as verses, are signs. Sh. Suh. IX, 6.

That will be a companion to thee, whatever thou prayest to the Lord of the world. Mēnghō 8.

That is my native country, where my sweetheart (is). Maj. 86.

May I not be forgotten by them, whom I do not drop out of (my) mind. Sh. Sām. II, 4.

Those trees, which give no good fruit, are cut off (and) thrown into the fire. Matth. 7, 19.

I, who is (= am) given up in the mountains, how shall she (= I) arrive at Kēč? Sh. Dēsī, III, Epil.

2) The relative pronoun (and, as the case may be, the correlative) usually precedes the substantive, to which it refers, but the relative may also follow, if the substantive has one or more attributes. The subject of a sentence is frequently first expressed by a demonstrative pronoun, and then taken up by the relative and correlative, to render it more prominent.

Which cat (= a cat that) eats her own young one, will that ever give up a mouse? Sindhī Read. B. p. 53.

Give up that traffic, in which there is no jewel. Sh. Surāg. IV, 8.

The faqīr, who was powerful (in magic), to him information was brought. Amulu Māṇ. p. 147.

A mad, strange thief, a foreigner, who reads (studies), Shakes laughing hands with thy daughter. Maj. 240, 241.

Those, who were great men (and) warriors, went destitute out of the world. Menghō 4.

4) The relative and correlative pronoun may in the same sentence be subject and object, so that the sentence is doubly correlative, the object, if a pronoun of the III person, being likewise expressed by the relative and correlative.

For whom they are longing, with them join them. Maj. 203.

That kindness they bestow, which is bestowed on them. Sh. Surāg. IV, 4.

5) In the first member of a correlative sentence (or, as it may be, in the second) سؤ جؤ is occasionally used instead of the simple relative , which is then taken up again by a following correlative.

Those friends, who are wanted, have gone on a journey. Sh. Sam. I, 24.

- O Almighty, will those ever come, of whom the discourse is? Maj. 457.
- 6) With the correlative adverbs the correlative pronouns and adjectives may be joined in the same sentence.

When those, who said: he is alone (God), he has no partner,

Respect Muhammad, the intercessor, out of love with their hearts,

Then (none) out of them was entangled in a place, where there is no landing. Sh. Kal. I, 3.

Where so many hours are written in fate, There so many have come to pass. Sh. Ma<sup>3</sup>8. V, 9.

7) The correlative adjectives and adverbs (cf. §. 38, 2), when placed after each other, imply an indefinite sense. The same is the case, if a relative be joined with an interrogative.

The cat, having eaten some (a number) of the mice with delight, went off. Sindhī Read. B. p. 64.

The princess, having enticed him somehow, having gained (his) heart, drew him out (i. e. got the secret from him). Amulu Māṇ. p. 147.

§. 75.

IV. The interrogative pronouns.

is occasionally joined adjectively to a noun in poëtry, as: کیرُ نه مُنْجُون کَرَهِ تهی بَانکو بَلَا چِی

Which here shall we send to the combat of the snake? Story of the snake v. 59.

The interrogative pronouns are not only used in direct interrogatory sentences but also in indirect interrogatory ones, when the governing sentence contains a negation; but if the governing sentence be positive, the relative : is preferred. The same rule applies to the interrogative adjectives and adverbs.

I do not know exactly, who it is. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 13.

I also do not tell you, by what order I do this. Matth. 21, 26.

I shall also tell you, by what order I do this. Matth. 21, 24.

2) The interrogative pronouns (adjectives and adverbs) are frequently used, where a negative answer is expected.

By fate I have been put into prison; otherwise who would come into this fort? Sh. Um. Mār. I, 8.

§. 76.

V. The indefinite pronouns.

some one, any one, when standing by itself, is applied to animate beings and کو to things only; but when که is used adjectively, it may be joined to any noun; similarly کی also may be put before nouns, when a part or quantity is to be expressed, cf. §. 61, 3.

Nothing else will be of use to thee, except what thou hast sown thyself. Mēnghō 10.

is now and then added to a personal pronoun (expressed or only implied in the inflexional termination of the verb) in an interrogative or negative sentence, for the sake of emphasis, with nearly the same sense as 2.

Wilt thou, having forsaken (me) go at all to the mountains? O lover, I did not think thus. Sh. Dēsī, III, Epil.

3) When 3 is repeated in the next sentence, it signifies: one—another.

One says: a demon has fallen into (his) body; another says: his understanding is upset. Maj. 40.

§. 77.

The reflexive pronoun.

1) The reflexive pronoun يَانَ (Sing. and Plur.) 'self', always refers to the subject of the sentence (expressed or only understood); somewhat intricate is the use of its Genitive, the reflexive pronominal adjective بَنْهَن جَرْ, 'own'. When the subject of the sentence is a pronoun of the I and II person (expressed or only implied in the verb), its application is clear enough; but when the subject is of the III person (or any noun), the question arises, whether the possessive pronouns 'his', 'her' etc. refer to the chief subject of the sentence (Lat. suus), or to some other subject (Lat. ejus etc.); in the first case the reflexive pronoun must be employed, in the latter a demonstrative.

Having risen (and) gree ed (and) having met with great respect (and) politeness they sat amongst themselves. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 36.

O pure friend, show thy face! Sh. Sor. I, 10.

Having come with his (own) servants to the service of Shāh Sāhib, he was present. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 31.

That wealthy one, marvelling at his (the other's) recognising her, asked him. Sindhī Read. B. p. 61.

2) In addressing a person the reflexive pronominal adjective بَنْهِن جَوْ is now and then used (like the Hindūstānī آپ كَا etc.), instead of the peculiar pronoun, that would be required, as: سَانتِين هِي يَنْهَن جَوْ مَالُ آهِي, master, this is your property, which under certain circumstances could also be translated: master, this is our property, when the spaker includes himself, as:

Send forth some mice of our country and land. Story of the mice and the cat, v. 35.

3) The reflexive pronominal adjective يَنْهَن جو may also refer to the object (noun with postp., or Dat. and Acc.) immediately following.

I am come to make quarrel the son with his father, the daughter with her mother. Matth. 10, 35.

4) When the subject of a sentence is a noun with a possessive pronoun, the peculiar possessive pronoun (if such occur with a noun) must be used and not would give quite a different sense. Similarly when the subject of a sentence is a personal pronoun and when in the next sentence, joined to the preceding by a conjunctive particle, a noun with a possessive pronoun occurs, the peculiar pronoun must be used for the reasons stated above.

(If) there would be in my kingdom some hero of mine. Story of Shamsādu, v. 40.

I am a man under authority and under my hands are soldiers. Matth. 8, 9.

5) The subject, to which پَنْهَن جَوْ refers, must occasionally be gathered from the context; but when thus used without a clear subject, to which it may be referred, it generally implies the I person (Singular or Plural).

Having removed far from our country may our lot be made any where! Story of the cat and mice, v. 20.

6) يَنْهَن جو is also used substantively, signifying my, thy etc. property, friends or people.

Take what is thine and go. Matth. 20, 14.

Chapter VI.

§. 78.

The Infinitive.

1) The Infinitive as well of neuter as of active (causative) verbs is treated in Sindhī as a regular substantive. The complement (object), which is required by an active verb, is subordinated to the Infinitive either by the Genitive or by the Accusative in its uninflected form, or governed by the postposition

The living (= life) of the disappointed one gets on with difficulty without the Jat. Sh. Abirī V, 9.

The Mughals, having taken their swords, came to kill the Shāh. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 15.

To ascent the impaling stake, to see the (nuptial) bed, this is the business of the lovers. Sh. Kal. II, 8.

It is by no means proper to put that into the house. Sindhī Read. B. p. 65.

2) The Infinitive is added as an expletive object to the verbs
ثَنَّنُ to give leave, پَهُرُنُ to let go or allow, to desire, and partly also to سَكَهَنُ to be able. But when the verb, which subordinates an Infinitive, requires an object (Accus.), it puts the same in the Accusative, according to the signification of the finite verb.

Tears don't let me write (lit. give no writing); dropping they fall upon the pen. Sh. Um. Mār. II, 9.

The Mughals did not allow the Shāh Sāhib to come (lit. gave him no coming). Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 15.

They do not allow a male bird to sit down. Amulu Mān. p. 141.

Many prophets and pious people had wished to see this very (sight). Matth. 13, 17.

3) The Infinitive may also be turned into an adjective by the accession of the Genitive case-sign ...
In this case the Infinitive itself is strictly treated as a is nearly عبو is nearly عبود as regards its government, and بجهود is nearly used in the same sense as

But he was not of the eating of the crocodiles, i. e. he was not destined to be eaten by the crocodiles. Story of Rāe Diāču p. 1.

هِيَ کَالهِ رُکِي چَرْچِي ﴿ نَه تَهِنَّنَ جِي آهِي This word is mere joke and impossible.

Chapter VII.

§. 79.

The Gerundive.

1) The Sindhī derives from the Infinitive of active verbs a regular Gerundive or participle future passive (cf. §. 8, 12, b; §. 46), which agrees with its subject in gender and number, except the construction be rendered impersonal by the use of the postposition cf. §. 94, 5. The agent is put in the Dative (like in Latin) or expressed by a pronominal suffix.

If by thee some complaint is to be made, come and make it. Amulu Māṇ. p. 150.

Whatever thou hast to get from me, that is alms (i. e. given in alms). Matth. 15, 5.

Now, whatever thou hast to say, say. Amulu Mān. p. 143.

2) But when the construction is rendered impersonal by the use of مهي or when a Dative occurs in a sentence, the agent must be expressed by the Instrumental, to avoid the double use of مهي.

Thou shouldst have seized this horse.

What is to be got by me as regards thee (i. e. from thee), give that to me. Matth. 18, 28.

Chapter ·VIII. The Participles.

§. 80.

I. The participle present.

1) The participle present agrees as a regular adjective with the subject of the finite verb (expressed or implied).

Is it used, when an action is to be described as lasting or continuing, for which purpose it may be repeated.

Having made the tour of the whole city they came, wandering, wandering to the lanes of the king. Amulu Mān. p. 140.

Upon them (i. e. on their heads) are (large) baskets and (small) baskets; groaning they come. Sh. Um. Mār. VI, 12.

2) The participle present is very frequently used in the Locative Sing., terminating in ē, or with the emphatie ī or hī, in ēī and ēhī¹), to express an action coinciding with what the finite verb declares.

As regards the subject of the present participle, Loc., it is either the same, as that of the finite verb, or it may refer to another noun in the sentence (Genitive, Dative, Accusative etc., usually expressed by a pronominal suffix), or it may not be expressed at all, to be gathered from the context.

When the subject of the present participle Loc. differs from that of the finite verb, it is added in the Formative; the same is the case, if an attribute be joined to the subject (expressed or only understood) of the present participle. But if the Locative of the present participle requires a complement (an object), it is constructed according to the common rules.

In coming and going he used to say these words. Life of Abd-ul-Lātīf, p. 47.

Dying of hunger they ask not from any one alms. Sh. Ramak. VII, 7.

Whilst searching about in the mountains some man met him. Maj. 122.

Then whilst eating her mind became drunk (and) mad. Maj. 178.

The wife and children of a gambler, (although) being in the house, do not consider as in the house. Sindhī Read. B. p. 52.

In seeing the friend all (their) pains are removed. Maj. 818.

Turn thou back the camel; pass the night, whilst I am weeping. Sh. Mūm. Rāṇō I, Epil.

§. 81.

II. The participle past.

- 1) The past participle of neuter verbs agrees with its subject in gender, number and case; the form in 'alu' is used, when the participle passes more into an adjective. The past participle of active and causal verbs (implying always a passive sense) agrees likewise with its subject in gender, number and case, except the construction be rendered impersonal by the use of the postposition (cf. §. 94, 5).
- 2) The past participle of active (and partly also of neuter) verbs with a passive signification, is used also substantively, cf. §. 62, 2, and may therefore be constructed with a postposition.

The Qāzī, having done the word (= what was said) of the scouts, became a tyrant. Maj. 296.

After being broken it became beyond (= more) a thousand billions. Sh. Surāg. IV, 17.

3) The past participle of neuter and active verbs is frequently used in the Locative Singular (cf. §. 80, 2); if the subject of the past participle do not differ from that of the finite verb, it is not expressed, but if it do differ, it is added in the Formative. But the subject of the past participle may also refer to a more distant object, or it may not be expressed at all, in which case the Locative is used absolutely. The impersonal construction of the past participle by means of the post-position is also retained, though the participle be put in the Locative.

The past participle in the Locative is used substantively, but nouns, depending thereupon, are idiomatically only put in the Formative, and not subordinated by the inflected Genitive case-sign.

By Azrāīl having come, Sasuī was awakened whilst sleeping, i. e. in the state of being asleep. Sh. Ābirī VIII, 5.

O God, may those come, by whose coming (my) heart becomes glad. Sh. Dēsī III, 5.

Whilst I stood upright, they went to the landing-places of the harbour. Sh. Sām.  $\Pi$ , 2.

Whilst the physicians were seated (lit. in the state of the physicians being seated), the friend entering came to (my) door. Sh. Jam. Kal. II, 10.

Those, who do not understand much, after one letter has been touched. Sh. Jam. Kal. V, 29.

Since I have seen the  $\bar{D}\bar{o}th\bar{s}$ , many days have passed to me (lit. In the being seen the  $\bar{D}\bar{o}th\bar{s}$ ). Golden Alphabet XXVIII, 2.

Sitting near whom the pain becomes intense. Sh. Jam. Kal. VIII, 25.

Which being eaten coughing arises, vomiting comes on. Golden Alphab. XVIII, 10.

§. 82.

III. The past conjunctive participles.

The past conjunctive participles (cf. §. 47) very greatly facilitate the conjunction of the different members of a compound sentence and are therefore very extensively in use. They are translated according to the tense of the finite verb.

1) The past conjunctive participles commonly refer to the subject of the finite verb, and in a passive construction, to the agent (Instrumental); but when to the past conjunctive participle of an attribute is added, it must remain in the Nominative, though the subject (agent) referred to be in the Instrumental.

Having thrown (them) into the jar, having secured (them) take care (of them). Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 11.

Thou wilt go to die, Majnō, being dried up by thirst. Maj. 407.

The Dev Ahriman having taken me from the country carried me off. Ajāib v. 119.

Then having heard the call, having become glad in (her) heart, she said. Maj. 702.

2) The past conjunctive participles may refer also to the object (Dative, Accusative) in a sentence, and in a passive construction one past conj. participle may refer to the agent (Instrumental) and another to the subject.

To them, who remember (their) friends, the night passes in weeping. Sh. Jam. Kal. I, 18.

Having tarried they would possibly have been cured by the physicians having applied plaster. Sh. Jam. Kal. II, 5.

3) In an impersonal (neuter) or passive construction the past conjunctive participles may be used absolutely, without any reference to a subject, which must be gathered from the context.

The night was passed (by her) in the desert, having come to that very place. Maj. 745.

Having collected the remnant of the grain, it is good (for me) to carry it to another place. Sindhī Read. B. p. 56.

Having sold him and his wife and his children and whatever he has, the debt shall be paid (scil. by you). Matth. 18, 24.

What shall be done to them, having made them hear the whole matter? Sh. Jam. Kal. V, 29.

4) The past conj. participles are also now and then used in the sense of the Latin Ablative absolute, when the subject of the finite verb differs from that of the past conj. participle. But constructions of this kind are rather exceptions.

After all cats had died in this very manner, two cats in the whole town were left alive. Sindhī Read. Book p. 63.

5) Some past conj. participles are used quite adverbially, as: مؤتّائي ,مؤتّي ; وَرَائِي 'again' (lit. having returned or caused to return); مؤتّائي with the postposition from (lit. taking from); کهان intentionally (lit. having known, understood), or جَانِي رِينِي or جَانِي وَانِي being alliterations.

Friend, do not go to a foreign country, his mother said again to him. Maj. 83.

From that hour her daughter was made whole. Matth. 15, 28.

Chapter IX.

The tenses of the verb.

§. 83.

I. The Present.

1) The Sindhī has two forms for the present tense, one identical with the Potential, to which the inflexional increment تهي etc. is added, the Present indefinite, and the other being compounded with the present participle and the auxiliary verb آنهِيَان etc., the Present definite.

The present tense of the passive voice is formed in the same way as that of the active voice, but its use is very restricted, neuter verbs being substituted wherever possible.

There is also a simple and compound Potential, as well of the active as of the passive voice, to express the idea of the present tense (cf. §. 90).

2) The first form of the Present tense, the Present indefinite, expresses our common Present, i. e. an action begun and still continuing in the present.

may optionally follow or precede the verb¹), but when the verb commences a sentence, it is put after it (poëtry excepted). In poëtry is often separated from the verb by some other words, either preceding or following it.

When the negative adverb ذَ, 'not', accedes to the verb, immediately precedes تعنى, and both the verb'); but in an interrogative sentence, or when a particular stress be laid on the verb, they may as well follow it.

In poëtry تهز is very frequently omitted and the Present indefinite then coincides with the Potential, so that only the context can decide, whether the Present indefinite or Potential is intended. In prose also تهز is dropped, when the interrogative pronoun خان what? and the adverb خان when, precede the verb.

Instead of the increment تهو the past participle تهو (from پَوَنُ to fall) is also used, but with this difference, that a more enduring action is thereby implied.

Remembering (her) guardians she gives a thousand blows. Story of the cat and mice v. 11.

The king, the Lord of the kingdom, executes his own orders. Ajāib v. 5.

Hearing they do not hear nor do they understand. Matth. 13, 13.

<sup>1)</sup> When an interrogative pronoun or adverb, as چهڅو وخد., و وخپځ etc., occurs in a sentence, it generally attracts عنه عنه الله <sup>2)</sup> But when in a sentence i — i neither — nor, occurs, the adverb is put before that noun, on which the stress is laid.

For those rich inhabitants of the jungle I weep nights and days. Sh. Um. Mār. II, 11.

When they see, one big black snake is seated (there). Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 16.

3) When occurrences are related, as the narrator or person, he speaks of, saw them, the Present is frequently used, in order to transfer the hearer to the scene of action. The same is the case, when the thoughts are given, which somebody had at a time.

When the Mughals saw the Shāh Sāhib, that he is (= was) sitting in the house. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 15.

What does he see? that his children (and) his wife go night and day about in begging. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 62.

Having there built a shrine of the Shāh Sāhib in that very place they sat down: 'because the Shāh Sāhib is here'. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 26.

4) The Present is also now and then used for the Future, to signify thereby, that the action will be done forthwith.

Take thou now rest; we see (i. e. shall see). Amulu Mān. p. 149.

5) The second form of the Present, the Present definite, denotes a lasting or habitual action. The auxiliary is occasionally dropped, especially in sentences of general import.

Whoever is walking according to his will, that is my brother and sister and mother. Matth. 12, 40.

Why are the people giving me reproaches? Sh. Mass. V, 14.

§. 84.

II. The Imperfect.

The Imperfect denotes a past action, which is incomplete in reference to some other past action. It implies therefore duration, habit or frequent occurrence.

Whenever the Shāh Sāhib was going to that very village, the Mughals were quarrelling with him. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf p. 15.

§. 85.

III. The Aorist.

I. The simple Aorist.

The Aorist implies indefinitely, that an action took place in past time. It is therefore commonly used in narrations, where past events are reported irrespectively of their duration. We may therefore translate the Sindhī Aorist either by the Imperfect or Perfect.

The Aorist of neuter verbs has an active meaning; some neuter verbs though (implying a passive sense) may also be constructed with the agent in the Instrumental.

Active verbs are constructed passively in the Aorist (Perfect and Pluperfect), the agent (subject) being put in the Instrumental and the past participle agreeing with the subject (properly the object) in gender, number and case (cf. §. 92, 2), or being constructed impersonally by the use of the postposition (cf. §. 94, 5). It is understood, that the Aorist (Perfect and Pluperfect) of the passive voice is also used personally, agreeing with its subject (expressed or implied in the inflexional terminations) in gender and number.

I was asleep, those went off, they drove away the young camels. Sh. Hus. VI, Epil.

Perhaps I have been forgotten by the dear Mārūs. Sh. Um. Mār. V, 13.

The bard sang the first night at the side of the castle. Sh. Sör. II, 1.

Who, having remained the night in the deserts, looked out for the mountains. Sh. Khāhōrī I, 3.

Those, who were made tawny by the Kāk (river), the redness does not leave. Sh. Mūm. Rāņō  $\Pi$ , 4.

2) The compound or habitual Aorist.

The compound Aorist with the indeclinable increment denotes in the first instance, that an action was done repeatedly in past time or for any length of time; it is therefore chiefly used, when an occupation, habit or manner is to be described. In the second instance it implies, that an action had been commenced in past time and was still going on at the time mentioned, and in this respect it nearly coincides with the Imperfect, with the only difference, that generally a simple Aorist corresponds to it.

The increment تهي is usually put before the verb, but is may also follow it; it may be also separated from the verb by some intervening words, in the same way as يبئو. Instead of پيئي (the Locative of پيئي with emphatic ī, instead of پيئيي piēī), is also used, which more strictly points out commencement and continuation.

Where the night used to befall him, there he used to sleep. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 21.

On account of her food she used to make lakhs of jumps. Story of the cat and mice v. 13.

كَكِرَا كَرْبَلَا جَا مَادَرِ تهي مِيڙِيَاسِ پهَٿَنِ تَان رَتَ پهُڙَا عَلِيَ تهي ٱگهَتهَاسِ

The pebbles of Karbalā his mother was gathering, 3Alī was wiping him away from the wounds the drops of blood. Sh. Kēḍ. V, 2.

The drums in the cells went on sounding by themselves as they pleased, and from them this tune was coming. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 36.

When Shāh Jamāl was (as yet) going to his village, the Shāh Sāhib died on the second day. Then when Shāh Jamāl heard the message of the removal of the Shāh Sāhib, he was coming again behind (the messenger). Ibid. p. 6.

§. 86.

IV. The Perfect.

1) The Perfect denotes an action, that is completed and finished in the past, so that it extends to the Present.

I do not live at all, nor am I at all dead. Sh. Hus. IX, 16.

Do not bring near the camels, I have been tormented by the camels. Sh. Dēsī I, 14.

2) The Perfect is occasionally used to represent an action as done already, whereas it is intended or expected, that it will be done forthwith.

The fairy saw, that he is (has been) now done for. Amulu Mān. p. 151.

§. 87.

IV. The Pluperfect.

1) The Pluperfect denotes remote past action, which has taken place previous to some other past event mentioned or understood. But in this connexion its use is not strict (as in Latin), the Aorist commonly being employed, where we would expect a Pluperfect.

In some town there had fallen in a dearth of grass; Those people drove off their cattle and went away at (with) some opportunity. Story of the cat and mice, v. 5. 6.

As the fairy had told, so she threw that very nosering into the jar of the slave-girl. Amulu Mān. p. 150.

Had you seen (when you were there) some one at the side of (her) sweetheart, o  $\bar{D}\bar{o}th\bar{i}s$ ? Sh. Hus. VI, Epil. 2.

2) The Pluperfect is frequently used in Sindhī, where we would use an Imperfect or Perfect. When an action is represented, from the point of the speaker, as completely past some time hence, so that its results were already clear at the time mentioned, or when it is implied, that since an action has taken place, something else has happened, that could be said about it, the Pluperfect is used and not the Aorist nor the Perfect. The Sindhī idiom is much more accurate in discerning the different shades of meaning, than the English, and the correct use of this tense requires therefore a careful attention.

One day Shāh Jamāl sat with the Shāh Sāhib, and also many other faqīrs were sitting (i. e. had seated themselves before). Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 5.

Maxdum Sāhib received the intelligence, that Miã Nur Muhammad had gone (but was no longer there) to have an interview with the Shāh Sāhib. Life of Abdul-Latīf, p. 29.

§. 88.

V. The Future and Future Past.

1) The Sindhī has two forms for the Future, the simple or indefinite Future and the Future definite.

The first form corresponds to our common Future and denotes a future action in general, the latter form implies, that the future action will last or endure for some time.

I shall graze their camels, having seized the bridle of the camels. Sh. Hus. IX, Epil.

At that very time an hundred fairies will be dancing near the Dev Sufed. Amulu Mān. p. 144.

2) The simple or indefinite Future is used also to denote possibility, inclination or doubt.

O king, I will speak one word to thee. Amulu Mān. p. 143.

O boy, wilt thou give us a ram? Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 17.

3) The Future indefinite is also used for the Imperative, when an order is not strictly given, but when it is expected, that it will be done spontaneously; it may therefore alternate with the Imperative.

Honour thy father and thy mother, and love thy neighbour as thyself. Matth. 19, 19.

4) The past Future is seldom to be met with in the sense of a strict past future action, which should have taken place, before another action will be possible, but it generally implies uncertainty, doubt or possibility in reference to a past action, as: عوْ آيو شُوندو; he may have come. Instead of the past Future the Aorist is commonly used in Sindhī, especially in conditional sentences; see §. 98, 6.

Chapter X.

The Moods.

§. 89.

I. The Indicative.

The Indicative represents an action or thought as real, and is therefore used, not only when matters of fact are related, but also when suppositions (in conditional sentences) are considered as really taking place (cf. §. 98b, 3). The Sindhī uses consequently the Indicative in such sentences, in which the speaker makes a subjective assertion, which he considers as true and real, whereas in the English idiom the Subjunctive would be used in such cases.

It would be better for him, that he were drowned in the depth of the sea. Matth. 18, 6.

§. 90.

II. The Potential.

The Potential is, as stated already, the old Present and expresses therefore only present time; but by means of the present and past participle and the Potential of the auxiliary verb , a Potential of the Present definite and Perfect may be formed; these compound forms however are of very rare occurrence.

1) The Potential, in its widest sense, denotes indefiniteness, possibility, uncertainty or doubt.

Then, think I, I eat together with thee bread. Amulu Mān. p. 146.

Companions, how shall I act with (= towards) them? Sh. Ābirī VIII, Epil.

Wilt thou not pull me out this wood? Amulu Mān. p. 148.

He delivered him into the hand of the tormentors, as long as he shall not repay all, what is due unto me. Matth. 18, 34.

2) The Potential serves also to express a usual or habitual action.

Drinking the water it makes (it, i. e. the river) bare ground, it dries up the whole world. Nānga jō Quissō, v. 40.

A kingdom I do not compare with (my) needle, o companions! Sh. Um. Mār. VI, 18.

That one shall go with me, who does not make (= consider) her life sweet. Sh. Ābiri VI, 2.

3) The Potential is frequently used in the sense of an Optative or polite Imperative, especially for the I. and III. person Singular and Plural.

O friend, may the lovers obtain (their) sweethearts as guides! Maj. 817.

May there be blessing to all! that our business (and) affair has succeeded. Story of the cat and mice v. 52.

O God, mayst thou bring camelmen, who take off messages of love. Sh. Um. Mār. II, 9.

Quickly, with speed, they shall bring this information and intelligence. Story of the cat and mice v. 38.

مَانَ Would that, with the conjunctions شَالَ would that, with the conjunctions شَالَ bitive), اَجْهُنِ مَتَان أَسَان , مَعَهُنِ مَتَان أَسَان , فَعَهُنِ مَتَان , that, so that, in order that; تَوْرِّي that, so that, in order that; تَوْرِّي that, so that, in order that; تَوْرِّي although; جِيكَثِيسِ , جِيكَرَ , جِي if (cf. §. 98 b, 1); and with the adverbs هُونْكُ possibly, جِكُيسِ , perhaps etc., if the sentence be indefinite.

O physican, do not give a powder! o God, may I not become well! Sh. Jam. Kal. II, 13.

Would to God, that thou, o beggar, wouldst not come any more. Sh. Sōr. II, 9.

Cut off, that thou mayst be approved, lest loss befall thee. Sh. Kal.  $\Pi$ , 17.

Thus, o camel, lift up (thy pace), that I may meet there (the friend) in the coming night. Sh. Khamb. II, 15.

Make some such jump, that ye fall upon that garment. Amulu Mān. p. 150.

Having given (thy) soul to the omnipotent, thou mayst possibly be put into the track of (thy) friend. Sh. Surāg. III, Epil.

§. 91.

III. The Imperative.

1) The Imperative is restricted to the II. person Singular and Plural; for the other persons the Potential must be used.

The Imperative has two forms, the Imperative strictly speaking and the Precative (cf. §. 44). The Imperative expresses a command, whereas the Precative implies an exhortation, request or haste.

When a negation accedes to the Imperative, is used to express a strict negation, whereas  $\tilde{\lambda}$  is used in a prohibitive sense. With the Precative is commonly joined, but imay also be employed, if the injunction be more strict.

The lions said: be thou not anxious. Amulu Mān. p. 151.

O Sūmarō, do not throw and tighten chains upon the chaste one! Sh. Um. Mār. III, 9.

Come near, good friend, do not apply a funeral pyre to the afflicted one! Sh. Abirī X, 5.

What is pure do not give to the dogs. Matth. 7, 6.

2) When two Imperatives are joined together by the conjunction  $\ddot{z}$  or  $\ddot{z}$ , the first Imperative is hypothetical.

Return quickly, o dear friend, if you mean to go, then return. Maj. 439.

II. THE SYNTHETICAL PART.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE SENTENCE AND CON-JUNCTION OF SENTENCES.

SECTION III.

THE SIMPLE SENTENCE.

Chapter XI.

Subject and Predicate.

§. 61.

In every sentence there must be a subject and a predicate; subject is called that person or thing, of which something is said and predicate that which is said about it.

- 1) The subject may be expressed either by a substantive or adjective or pronoun or numeral. It is not expressed, if it be a personal pronoun and its predicate a verb, except a stress be laid upon it, as:

  آنٹون تھو ثِسَان آ see, but آنٹون تھو ثِسَان آ see (not you).

  The subject must always be in the Nominative.
- 2) The Predicate may be expressed either by a verb, or adjective (participle), or substantive, or numeral with the auxiliary verbs تَعِنَّنُ to be and تَعِنَّنُ to become, to be.

The predicate may be joined to the subject in a threefold manner:

a) by way of asssertion, as: نِينكُرِ تهِي رُبِّي the girl weeps.

- b) by way of interrogation, as: کیڑ آیو who is come?
- c) by way of command (or desire), as: go (thou).
- 3) The subject and predicate, if they be substantives or pronouns, may be nearer defined by an attribute. The attribute is commonly an adjective, but it may also be a substantive in the Genitive (with or without an adjective, pronoun etc.), on which another noun in the Genitive may depend again, as:

a great man came وَثُوْو مَا رِّهُون آيو or: this is a great man هِيُ وَثُوْ مَا رُّهُون آهِي the Lord of the kingdom died مُلکَ جو دَهَنِي مَرِي وِئُو مُلکَ جِي دَهَنِي جَوْ پُٿرُ مَرِي وِئُو the son of the Lord of the kingdom died.

All the people of the kingdom (of) Maghrib will go to die. Nānga jō Qissō, v. 51.

4) The subject and predicate, if they be proper names, substantives or pronouns, may also be nearer defined by a noun in apposition, as:

the country (of) China is far off; چِينَ وِلَايَتَ ثُورِ آهِي this is the city (of) Karāčī.

Chapter XII.

Concord of the subject and predicate.

§. 93.

1) If the predicate be a verb, it must agree with its subject in person, gender and number. This rule is strictly adhered to in Sindhī, even in such cases, where the subject in the Singular implies plurality, cf. §. 63, 1. 2. A subject in the Singular however may be constructed with the Plural of the predicate, when spoken of politely or honorifically, cf. §. 63, 3.

I do not reject the word of mother and father. Amul. Mān. p. 142.

Standing the strangers ask: where is Muhammad, the intercessor? Nānga jō Qissō, p. 15.

2) If the predicate be an adjective, participle, pronoun or substantive, from which a feminine may be derived (cf. §. 14), it must agree with its subject in gender, number and case. (In the same way every attribute must agree with its substantive in gender, number and case, whenever possible.)

What is thy pleasure? Amulu Māņ. p. 140.

From above descended a slave-girl. Ibid. p. 140.

By all the companions they were seen, those maimed young men. Nānga jō Qissō, v. 17.

كَا بِلِي بَارَنِ سَانتْهِي هُيْمِي كَنْهِن رَنكُ وَثِي سِين رَسَ

Some cat was tending her young ones with some great love (and) pleasure. Story of the cat and mice v. 8.

Chapter XIII.

Enlargement of the sentence by a near and remote object.

§. 94.

1) The verb, which refers to the subject as its predicate, has a double form; it is either of the active voice, if the subject be active, or of the passive voice, if the subject be passive.

The active voice of a verb has a treble signification; it is either neuter (intransitive), or active (transitive), or causal. The verb is called neuter, if the action be restricted to the subject, as: هُوْ تَهُوْ وَجِيَّى he goes; active, if the verb necessarily requires a (near) object or Accusative, as: هُنَ كَهِي تَهُوْ جَهَلِي he seizes him; and causal, if it requires one or two Accusatives.

2) Neuter verbs commonly subordinate only a remote object or Dative, as: مُون كهي نَه تهوْ وَإِني it does not please me; but some neuter verbs may also subordinate a near object (Accus.), as:

He went that way. Ajāib v. 44.

3) Active verbs subordinate a near object (Accus.), and, as the case may be, a remote one (Dative), as: أن كهي مَانِي ثِي give him bread. Active verbs may also subordinate a double Accusative, one implying the near object and the other its attribute. In this case the first object is generally defined by the postposition by means of which the construction is rendered impersonal and the concord between the object and its attribute dissolved, so that the attribute remains in the uninflected form of the Singular, though the object, to which it refers, may be a Plural. But both may also remain in the uninflected state (Singular or Plural). Some verbs govern a double Accusative, one of a person, and one of a thing, as to ask somebody a thing, though it may also be constructed with the postposition specific to ask from a person, or with specific to ask from a person, or with

Make the lepers clean. Matth. 10, 3.

As long, as I live, I shall not make any other (my) husband. Sh. Um. Mar. VII, 6.

Keep the fasts of Ramazān, give (thy) wealth as alms. Golden Alphabet 4, 7.

4) Causals, derived from neuter verbs, subordinate a near, and as the case may be, a remote object (§. 69, 6); and causals, derived from active verbs, may subordinate two near objects (a double Accusative), the first generally being defined by the postposition and the second remaining in the uninflected state (§. 69, 5).

Having made drink the travellers a bowl try (it). Sh. Jam. Kal. IV, 7.

5) Regular passive verbs can only be derived from active or causal verbs; for the passive form, which neuter verbs occasionally assume, does not essentially alter their signification.

In a passive sentence the near object (Accus.) is made the subject, and the subject of the active sentence is turned into the Instrumental<sup>1</sup>), the remote object (Dative) keeping its place, as usual. But with the passive Present, Imperfect and Future the Instrumental is not used, the agent being expressed by means of the postposition if it cannot be possibly avoided.

Of the passive voice only the past tenses (past participle passive) are in common use, the other tenses being expressed, wherever possible, by a neuter verb.

The past participle (passive) agrees either with its subject in gender, number and case (§. 93, 2), or the construction may be rendered impersonal, the past participle containing at the same time subject and predicate, in which case the (proper) subject of the passive sentence must be subordinated as a remote object by means of the postposition (), 'as regards', 'in reference to'.

This impersonal construction must always take place in the passive, when an active verb governs a double Accusative, one implying the near object and the other its attribute. The near object must in this case be subordinated by the postposition (A), whereas the other object, as the predicate, remains in the uninflected form of the Singular, referring to the (neuter) past participle.

<sup>1)</sup> In a longer sentence, when the agent is separated by a series of words from the verb, the agent is frequently repeated for the sake of perspicuity, by adding a pronominal suffix, corresponding to the agent, to the verb.

But when a causal verb governs two near objects, the first (implying a person) must be subordinated as remote object by the postposition , whereas the second is made the subject, with which the past participle agrees in gender and number.

Thus also the son of man shall be afflicted by them. Matth. 17, 12.

Death was agreed to by those, who saw the afflicted one (lit. by whom it was seen as regards the afflicted one). Sh. Mass. VII, 16.

By what reason (and) disorder have you been made ill? (lit. by what reason and disorder has it been made ill as regards you.) Nānga jō Quissō, v. 24,

The king, having come, related this whole matter to the Vazīr Saifal. Amulu Mān. p. 142.

Chapter XIV.

Enlargement of the sentence by a nearer definition of the verb as predicate.

§. 95.

The simple sentence may be enlarged to a considerable extent by a nearer definition of the verb as predicate.

1) The verb may be nearer defined by one or more cases, on which again another case may depend, viz.: the Instrumental (agent etc.), the Accusative (of time etc.), the Ablative and the Locative, and by nouns with postpositions generally.

At some time one man sat on the bank of the river with his wealth (of buffaloes). Sindhī Reading Book p. 59.

That one began to go to school one year later than (from) his elder brother. Ibid. p. 50.

2) The verb may be nearer defined by adverbs generally, especially by adverbs of time, place and manner, and by postpositions with pronouns.

Give me now some advise. Amulu Mān. p. 147.

Thus they talked amongst each other four goodly months. Maj. 235.

This also is with me. Amulu Mān. p. 147.

Chapter XV.

Omission of the verb as predicate.

§. 96.

1) The auxiliary verb آنهِيَان etc., forming the predicate with or without an adjective etc., is occasionally omitted, especially in poëtry and in short proverbial sentences.

Let me hear that matter, which (is) in thy heart. Maj. 45.

There (is) a deep well there; no bottom of that is found. Nānga jō Qissō, v. 38.

Where (is) the cowardly cat? where (is) the cowardly cat? Sindhī Read. B. p. 62.

2) In sentences, which contain an imprecation or curse, the verb as predicate is generally omitted. In such like sentences the Potential of , to fall, should be supplied, which occasionally is met with.

May the courtyard (fall) into the well, the companions into the forest, the sisters-in-law into disease! Sh. Suh. IX, Epil. 1.

(May fall) into the well those days of life, which are apart from the friend! Sh. Desi VII, Epil.

SECTION IV.

THE COMPOUND SENTENCE.

Two or more sentences may be so joined together, that a compound sentence arises. This is done either by way of coordination or subordination.

Chapter XVI.

I. Coordination of sentences.

§. 97.

1) Two or more sentences may be so joined, that each one remains independent of the other. This is done without or by the copulative, adversative, disjunctive and conclusive particles (cf. §. 59) and by the negative adverb  $\dot{\omega} - \dot{\omega}$  neither — nor.

The lover was joined to her by pain, the sweetheart was not joined to her by pleasure (= by dint of). Sh. Ābirī VII, 13.

Fasten the horses below and go ye up. Amulu Māṇ. p. 149.

Either they bring them across, says Latīf, or they make a cry from that very spot. Sh. Suh. VIII, 2.

I know it, but the Shāh Sāhib has forbidden (me) to tell it. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 44.

2) Sentences are also coordinated by joining together a disjunctive question. In the first member the interrogation is generally not expressed by a particle, but only by the voice of the speaker; in the second (or third) the interrogation is pointed out by the particle kī or 🗸 ke.

Is it thou or shall we look to the way of another? Matth. 11, 3.

Chapter XVII.

Contraction of coordinate sentences into one; concord of two and more subjects and predicates.

§. 98.

1) When two or more sentences have either the same subject or the same predicate or the same object or any other common member of speech, they are contracted into one sentence, with or without a conjunctive particle.

O Lord, may (our) dear friends (and) lovers meet (us) again! Nānga jō Qissō v. 81.

I am not a jinn, demon, fairy, I am a man. Maj. 639.

Which then is greater, the sacrifice or the altar? Matth. 23, 19.

But this discourse fell into the ear of Mir Hasan (and) Husain. Nanga jo Qisso v. 75.

2) When there are two or more subjects in a sentence, denoting animate beings, the verb or adjective (with the auxiliary verbs تَهِيِّنُ and تَهِيِّنُ) as predicate is put in the Plural; if the subjects have the same gender, the predicate agrees with them, being put in the Plural, but if they be of various gender, the masculine has the precedence.

When two or more subjects imply things (or ideas), the predicate is either put in the Singular, agreeing commonly with the last subject, or in the Plural. If they be of various gender, the Plural of the masculine or feminine is employed, according as one or the other subject is considered more important.

The same rule holds good, when an attribute (adjective etc.) is referring to nouns of different gender.

A male and female was created by him. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 15.

Thy mother and thy brothers stand outside. Matth. 12, 47.

In this pond there will be water and fish. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 27.

But for an able army there is no delay (nor) pause. Nănga jō Quissō, v. 154.

When I saw from afar the places, houses, cells. Ajāib, v. 72.

By the lightenings dresses of rain (i. e. clouds) have been made; reeds and herbs have become green; oh! Sh. Sār. IV, Epil.

By whom eyes (and) face have been turned towards the buffalo-keeper. Sh. Suh. V, 9.

The farms and ferries of the world (people) are upon that water. Nanga jō Qissō, v. 36.

3) When two or more subjects of different persons occur in a sentence, the first person precedes the second (or third), and the second the third, the verb being put in the Plural.

We and the Pharisees keep many fasts. Matth. 9, 14.

Chapter XVIII.

II. Subordination of sentences.

§. 99.

Two or more sentences may be so joined together, that one is not independent of the other, but is only making up for the deficiency of the other. A sentence thus depending on another, is called a subordinate sentence, and the other, that is completed thereby, is called the main sentence.

A subordinate sentence may have another sentence coordinated either with or without conjunctive particles; or it may again subordinate another sentence.

A subordinate sentence may be linked to the main sentence either by subjunctive particles, or by relative pronouns and adverbs or by interrogative pronouns and adverbs.

1) Subordination of a sentence by subjunctive particles.

§. 100.

Particles, by which a sentence is subordinated to the main sentence are the concessive, the consecutive, the causal, the final and the conditional, cf. §. 59.

a) With the three first particles the Indicative is used, if the assertion be positive, and the Potential, if the assertion be more vague or uncertain; with final particles the Potential is always used.

Though they be killed by the knife, they do not at all divulge any thing. Sh. Kal. II, 8.

It threw the head of dejection so much on the ground, that its brain was confused. Sindhī Reading Book p. 58.

O God, take away the covers, that we may know the truth. Maj. 205.

b) In conditional sentences the subordinate sentence generally precedes the main sentence, but the conditional part of the sentence may also follow that, which is conditioned thereby.

The subordinate sentence is introduced by the particles جِيكَتْرِ , and جِيكَتْر , if, and إِنَان , if (at any time), and the main sentence by the concessive particle , تَان , تَد , then, which is generally not translated.

1) If the condition and that, which is conditioned thereby, be indefinite, possible, doubtful or uncertain, the Potential is used in both members of the sentence; in the main sentence the Imperative may also be employed.

Be not seated here; if thou go, thou mayst obtain (thy) sweetheart. Sh.  $\bar{A}$ bir $\bar{i}$  VII, 6.

Then thou mayst enjoy it at all, if thou perform this very advise. Sh.  $\bar{A}$ birī  $V\Pi$ , 14.

If they may have been seen by you, then, for God's sake, speak! Sh. Hus. X, 22.

2) If the condition be uncertain, possible or only expected, but if that, which is conditioned thereby, be represented as certain and positive, the Potential is used in the subordinate, and the Indicative (commonly the Future) in the main sentence.

O mother, o mother, I live, o God, if my dear friends remember me! Sh. Suh. VII, Epil. 2.

If thou construct us here a mosque, then we shall let thee daily make the pilgrimage of the Kasaba of God. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 4.

3) If the condition and that, which is conditioned thereby, be taken as certain and positive, the Indicative is used in both members of the sentence.

If thou castest us out, allow us to go into the herd of swine. Matth. 8, 31.

If thou shalt divulge it, thou wilt become a leper. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 44.

4) If the condition as well as that, which is conditioned thereby, is represented as such, that could have happened under certain circumstances, but which has not happened, because the condition was not fulfilled, the Imperfect, Aorist or Pluperfect is used in the subordinate, and the Aorist in the main sentence, or, under certain circumstances, the Pluperfect (cf. §. 87, 2).

If he had not kept on drinking liquor, he would not have died.

I have written a letter to thee; but if I were a bird I would likely have come before the letter, having flown quickly.

If the pen would be aware of the heart, it would weep blood out of affection. Sh. Barvō Sindhī, Čhōt. 6.

If those (cries) had been heard by (my) sweetheart, he would likely not have gone off. Sh. Hus. III, 2.

If the master of the house had known, (that) the thief will come at a certain watch (of the night), he would likely have remained on his guard. Matth. 24, 43.

If those (works) had been done at Sodom, it would have likely remained until this day. Matth. 11, 23.

Instead of the Aorist or Pluperfect the Potential (of the Present) may be used (but very rarely) in both members of a conditional sentence, followed by the particle  $\dot{\omega}$ ; but more commonly  $\dot{\omega}$  is added to a past tense, for the sake of emphasis.

If she had not gone, she would not have obtained (her) friend.

If you had ever understood this word, you would not have condemned the guiltless. Matth. 12, 7.

5) If the condition must have been fulfilled in past future time (Futurum exactum), before that, which is conditioned thereby, shall happen, the Aorist is used in the subordinate, and the Future in the main sentence.

If ever Maxdūm Sāhib should have died before Shāh Sāhib, then Shāh Sāhib will come and be present with the bier of Maxdūm Sāhib. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 37.

If one shall have come and recognised her, I will give her to him. Sindhī Read. B. p. 59.

is often omitted in the subordinate sentence, and جيكر on the other hand is used without a main sentence, it being passed over in silence, so that جيكر assumes quite the sense of the interjectional particle مَانَ would that!

O my friend, (if) I die of thy wound, I (may) obtain honour. Sh. Jam. Kal. I, 6.

If we would go to (our) village, (it would be well) = We should like to go to (our) village. Amulu Mān. p. 151.

2) Subordination of a sentence by the relative pronoun (also the indefinite pronouns جَوْكُو , جِيكُو ) and relative adverbs, corresponding generally to a correlative. (§. 74 sqq.)

§. 101.

The subordinate sentence may either precede or follow the main sentence.

Come back, o louse of the blanket, which was given to me by the grandfather's family. Sh. Um. Mar. VII, 3.

Whoever is given to gambling, in his house property does not remain. Sindhī Read. Book, p. 52.

As the day gets hot, so I push on in the journey. Sh. Hus.  $\Pi$ , 14.

Where there is not a footprint of a bird, there glimmers a small fire. Sh. Khāh. II, 11.

When there are some reeds of the shore, pull them out and bind together a raft. Sh. Hus. VIII, 3.

3) Subordination of a sentence by an interrogative pronoun or particle.

§. 102.

The dependant sentence is generally introduced by the particles جَوْ, تَد, and جَرْ, that, which are not translated.

How do I know, how the calculation of the Amīr has been made? Sh. Um. Mār. II.

Give me an answer about the marriage, how thou hast arranged it? Amulu Mān. p. 142.

Take no thought of your life, (saying) what shall we eat, what shall we drink? nor of your body, what we shall put on? Matth. 6, 24.

Chapter XIX.

Abbreviation of subordinate sentences.

§. 103.

A subordinate sentence may be abbreviated:

1) by using the present and past participle (cf. §. 80, 81), either adjectively, or in the Locative Singular, which is more common. The participle supplies the place of a relative or conjunctional subordinate sentence, into which it may be dissolved, when necessary, as:

Pass the night weeping, distilling glasses of liquor; i. e. whilst weeping, or as one who weeps etc. Sh. Jam. Kal. IV, 25.

Having been seized = after or when or as she was seized by a violent pain, she fell down near some bank. Story of the cat and mice, v. 29.

2) By using the past conjunctive participles.

They carry off (my) sweetheart Punhū, speaking Baluchī, i. e. whilst they speak Baluchī. Sh. Dēsī II, 13.

Chapter XX.

On the indirect oration.

§. 104.

When the words or thoughts of a person are given with the very same expressions, as used originally, the oration is called a direct one; but when they are only represented according to their general contents or purport, the oration is called an indirect one. In Sindhī the indirect oration is never made use of, but the words or thoughts of a person are always represented in the direct oration and generally introduced by the particle  $\tilde{z}$ .

He was thinking: 'in some way having sneaked off I will get away'; i. e. that he would sneak off etc. Life of Abd-ul-Latīf, p. 20.

When he sees: I am sitting near Bhiṭa. Ibid. p. 21.

If thou likest: I will meet (my) friend = to meet (thy) friend, then learn the mimicking sound of the thieves. Sh. Jam. Kal. II, 8.

APPENDIX I.

ON THE SINDHI CALENDAR.

The Muhammadans of Sindh reckon by lunar months after the common Muhammadan aera, called with the flight of Muhammad from Mekka to Medinah, the years of this aera are therefore called of July 622 p. Chr. Their months commence with the appearance of each new moon and consist of 30 and 29 days alternately, amounting to 354 days and about nine hours; in consequence thereof New-year's-day falls every year about eleven days earlier than in the previous year.

To keep pace with the seasons the Sindhīs interpose every third year an intercalary month (النشن lunḍu), repeating that month, in which the sun enters no new sign of the Zodiac.

In naming the lunar months the learned Muhammadans follow the nomenclature of the Arabs; but among the common people the names of those Arabian months only are known, which are noted by some special religious observance, the other months being called by the names of the Hindū months then being.

<sup>1)</sup> Another aera, which is also in use amongst the Muhammadans of Upper India, is called فَصْلِي, or revenue aera; it dates, according to Prinsep, from the year 5923/4 p. Chr.

Lunar months of the Arabians.

The Hindus reckon by solar years, and luni-solar months. They follow either the Vikramāditya (كُرَمَاجِيتُ) aera, called sambatu (Sansk. संवत year), dating from the year 57 a. Chr., and commencing with the month of katī, or that of Shālivāhana, called šāku (Sansk. शक), dating from the year 78 p. Chr., and commencing with the month of Čētru.

The Hindū year is divided into 12 equal portions, which nearly correspond to our solar months. Each month is divided again (by Hindūs as well as Muhammadans) into two parts (پَکهُ or پَکهُ lunar fortnight), the first from new to full moon (سَدِي sudī), and the second from full to new moon (سَدِي badī). The dates of these two divisions (تَتهِ lunar date), fifteen each, are reckoned separately.

asū, from the middle of September to the middle of October.

katī, from the middle of October to the middle of November.

nāharī, نَهْرِي naharī, from the middle of November to the middle of December.

pōhu, from the middle of December to the middle of January.

māghu, from the middle of January to the middle of February.

phāgu, پهَائی phagunu, } from the middle of February to the middle of March.

The Hindūs commence the day at midnight, as we do, but the Muhammadans at the previous evening. In the mouth of a Muhammadan therefore the night of a certain day always signifies the night of the previous day, as: جني جي رابي Friday night = Thursday night, according to our way of reckoning. There is some difference between the Hindū and Musalmān names of the days of the week, as subjoined.
